They are among the best-equipped of the hundreds of "pecheurs d'experiance" who spend all their off-hours on the waterfront. Each has a naptha lamp, steel rod—instead of the usual bamboo—fine worms and spare tackle.

The men who have limps fish in a group. The white glare, they believe, attracts the fish. They talk, eat pork sandwiches, sip hot wine from thermos bottles and work their lines ceaselessly, unhooking the fish with bare hands. It's nearly frozen by the time they haul it on the wharf.

A night's catch is about 400 per man.

Russia Refuses Recognition To Chinese U.N. Delegate

New York, Nov. 23 — (CP) — Andrei Y. Vishinsky said today Russia will no longer recognize the Nationalist Chinese delegation as the representative of China in the United Nations.

The Soviet foreign minister tossed the reference to China into his speech before the U.N. assembly during debate on atomic energy control.

He referred to recent demands by the Chinese communist government for unseating of the Chinese Nationalist delegates here.

"The Soviet Union supports that statement," Vishinsky told the 59-member assembly meeting at the Flushing Meadow hall. "We will not regard the Kuomintang delegate as representative of China."

This means that the Soviet Union will not consider the Chiang Kai-Shek regime as a proper member of the Security Council, where Chiang shares the right of veto with the other big powers—Russia, the United States, Britain and France.

The Soviet Union previously broke diplomatic relations with the Chiang regime and accorded recognition to the communist regime at Peiping.

Kitchener, Nov. 23—(CP)— A 15-year-old boy, with intelligence "well above normal" Tuesday was sentenced to an indefinite term in an industrial school when he admitted a long series of housebreakings and thefts. He said he wanted to learn a mechanical trade.

K.D. Kayler, superintendent at the Children's Aid Society, told the court recent tests indicate the lad has an I.Q. well above normal. The boy lives with his divorced mother who has to work to support the home.

The youth admitted 13 housebreakings and one store robbery as well as theft of a jeep and bicycle.

Canada, Nation In Own Right Says Newspaper

London, Nov. 23—(CP)— The British North America bill now before parliament "recognizes once and for all that Canada is a nation in her own right, free to take her proper place in the world," the News Chronicle observes editorially today.

The newspaper says the bill, which enables the dominion parliament to amend the Canadian constitution without reference to Britain's parliament, represents only "a tidying up of a formal relationship between the commonwealth and great Britain." It could have been cleared up at any time during the last three decades by Canada "and no finger could or would have been raised in this country to hold her back."

Canada's accession to her "proper place" in the world is certainly what all good Canadians desire," the paper comments. 'And they know they have the support and good wishes of the British people, now as always in the past."

The bill, which received third reading in the Lords Tuesday, must be approved three times by the commons before receiving Royal assent.

(In Ottawa, Prime Minister St. Laurent marked the Lord's action with the hope that "by the end of 1950 Canada will have assumed all the attributes and all the responsibility of full nationhood."

Vera Lauste of Moffat, Ont., whose Hereford steer won her reserve position in the guineas class sold her animal for 1 a pound—about $840. The T. Eaton Company of Toronto bought both steers.

The champion dressed beef carcass owned by William Gb Jackson and Sons, of Malton, Ont., sold at $1.45 a pound—55 cents a pound more than the record price established last year. It weighed 497 pounds.

Create Buffer Area to Keep out Diseased Muskrats

The Pas, Man., Nov. 23. (CP)— A device similar to a fire guard will be used to protect the health of Northern Manitoba muskrats.

A five-mile wide buffer area will be trapped to keep plague-carrying Northern muskrats from entering the province, and spreading disease to their fur bearing brothers in Manitoba.

The plan is to arrange with trappers along the line to help capture the diseased animals. It was decided last fall after conferences between Manitoba and Ontario conservation officers.

The disease, confined to northern waters of Ontario and now under investigation by naturalists, has not been definitely identified.

Apparently reaching its fatal stages among muskrats in the fall when search for winter food represents "crowding" it is believed linked to low water levels.

It is expected the program will be authorized for early spring, before the spring breakup.

MARMORA

St. Andrew's WMS Observes Tenth Anniversary

St. St. Andrew's Women's Missionary Society was fittingly observed in St. Andrew's Hall on Wednesday evening with an entertaining program followed by a social hour.

Mrs. H.C. Barlow the president was in charge of the program, which commenced with a hymnal sing-song. Mrs. Barlow in extending a welcome to all expressed happiness in having the girls' Explorer Group as guests.

A short worship period having been conducted, the Rev G.D. Young showed slides "The Call-ing of Matthew". This was preceded by prayer taken by Mrs. H.W. Sanford. A group of song was then rendered by the Explorers. Beverly Young followed with a reading, and Marlyn Cole played a pianoforte solo.

The Rev. G.D. Young told the story of "The Raggedy Elf" and "For All of Life" and illustrated with lantern slides interspersed with a pianoforte solo by Mrs. G.H. Rennie.

The president mentioned that Havelock and Madoc auxiliaries had expressed regret at not being able to accept the invitation to be present. Mrs. Greenville Meiklejohn, who attended with other members of Springbrook W.M.S., conveyed greetings from that auxiliary.

Early W.M.S.

In a short talk, Mrs. Barlow mentioned that whereas the present W.M.S. was started by Mrs. W.P. Fletcher ten years ago an old minute book disclosed that a similar organization functioned in the Marmora Methodist church from Sept. 25th 1922 to May 7th, 1903

She added that it was interesting to note that on August 26th, 1920 the Conference Missionary Society, which embodied the women, met at Picton, Ont., then known as Hallbwth.

The placing of ten candles on the birthday cake donated by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sweet was carried out by Mrs. (Rev) G.D. Young who mentioned the significance of each candle.

The first meeting on November 17th, 1939; past and the present president; charted members; two members on Presbyterial; new members whom it is hoped to interest; younger girls groups of St. Andrew's United Church of Canada, St. Andrew's and its minister; missionaries doctors; nurses supported by the W.M.S.; in loving memory of only deceased charter member Mrs. W.A. Sanderson and the tenth anniversary.

Candles were lit by Mrs. E.C. Prentice and later extinguished by Mrs. H.R. Haacke, past president each present received a portion during the social hour.

STIRLING

ST. PAUL'S W.M.S.

Stirling—Mrs. Wm. West was hostess to the members of St. Paul's W.M.S. on Tuesday afternoon. The devotional and business periods were directed by the president Mrs. K. G. Bailey. The treasurer reported thank offering receipts and also gave the quarterly report.

Mrs. Reid read an article written by John Barrett on "Solving the color problem." The supply secretary, Mrs. Sid Williams read the communication received from Miss Willows, acknowledging the bale forwarded to Maynooth in September, the action acting dealing with clothes distribution for Overseas Relief was also read by Mrs. Williams.

Mrs. A. Armstrong spoke on "Stewardship" and said "many of us would need to go the second mile if our allocation was to be reached."

Need to Keep up to Date

Literature and missionary monthly secretaries urged the members to keep their interest in the missionary work up to date by reading the periodicals and books recommended by the literature department.

A nominating committee volunteered to bring in a slate of officers for 1950. These were Mrs. Paterson, Mrs. Williams, Mrs. E. G. Bailey and Mrs. N. E. Eggleton.

The afternoon program was in charge of Mrs. G. Pollard, and committee. The theme of the meeting was "God at Work Among Men through the Holy Spirit." Mrs. C. Pitman read the scripture passage and made the comments on the same.

The chapter of the study book was given by Mrs. A. Armstrong and was entitled "Growing With the Years and Enlightening the Mind."

Imaginery World Tour

The speaker, with the aid of a map took the members on an imaginative world tour, visiting the educational institutions of the United Church ranging from kindergarten up to universities and then reviewed the educational program in the local church.

The members were delighted to have as visitors Misses Barbara Roberts, Edwina Good, and Marybell West, who gave a vocal trio, at the conclusion of the program.

Refreshments were served by the committee in charge and a vote of thanks extended to the hostess and committee for a very pleasant afternoon.

St. John's Ladies League

The November meeting of St. John's Ladies League was held at the home of Mrs. Lyons with 23 members present. Mrs. Melville Tanner, Mrs. Holt, and Mrs. Carr were assistant hostesses. Mrs. Hemphill from Vancouver, mother of Mrs. Ranger, was a guest of the league.

The Rev. Anderson opened the meeting.

Mrs. Bruce Bell synopsized in an interesting manner the chapters dealing with "Education and Youth." At the, moment, there is grave danger of the enthusiasm and idealism of youth being forced into a wrong mould. Youth is the age of promise, when ideals appeal irresistibly and there is an endless fund of energy, when learning still comes easily and loyalty is readily given to the right leader. There is the problem presented by youth to the church. It is the challenge of today.

Interesting Contest

Mrs. M. Tanner put on a most interesting contest which was won after breaking a tie by the group consisting of Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. Earl Morrow, Mrs. Ken Morrow and Mrs. Woldnik.

After meeting closed delicious refreshments were served. Miss Ken Mumby moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Lyons and her co-hostesses on behalf of members of the league.

The study book story was a Christmas card party in China and asked each one to save their old cards so that they might be sent away and shared with others. Jeanette Ayrhart, Margaret Johnson, and Wendy Warren sang Jesus Loves Me. What a Friend We Have in Jesus was sung and after the meeting closed.

Refreshments were served.

St. Andrew's Ladies Aid

St. Andrew's Ladies Aid held their regular meeting at the home of Mrs. A. Greenley with a large attendance. The president, Mrs. Greenley conducted the opening exercises. Mrs. Don Fargey read the scripture lesson.

Mrs. Williams gave an interesting reading entitled "crime," Mrs. L. Rodgers also gave a splendid reading. After the meeting closed dainty refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants.

Mrs. B. Hermiston moved a vote of thanks to Mrs Greenley for her hospitality.

125 Houses Out of 805 in Gigantic Project Planned by National Defence Department On Outskirts of Trenton Now Occupied

Total Population of Community Will Reach 3,200 Approximately When Project Complete

Trenton, Nov. 24 — (Special) — First part of the multi-million dollar housing project, for the Department of National Defence, taking form just outside of the town of Trenton has been completed and 125 single family houses have been occupied while the second part of the unit looms up along the skyline north of No. 3 Highway on the eastern limits of the town.

When the gigantic scheme is finished the ultra-picturesque village will comprise 805 modern homes, two schools — a primary and grade school — two churches, sports fields with quarter mile tracks, shopping centres, administration buildings, community halls and moving picture theatres. Each group of homes in the layout with its winding streets and spacious boulevards will have a separate park area of its own. The community will be self-contained and house a total population of approximately 3,200 people.

The project will be new Canadian town but equal that of the villages of Stirling, Frankford and Brighton combined. The project has to be seen to be appreciated.

Residents All RCAF Members

There will be no industrial plants within the boundaries of this sub-division as all tenants will be members of the R.C.A.F. with their families.

At the present time the services, contractor and the building contractor employs approximately 300 men, the peak number of men expected to work on the project during the winter months. In the spring, however, more workmen may be hired to rush the job to completion.

After seeing 125 single family homes completed and occupied earlier this year Central Mortgage and Housing Company let a larger contract to erect 230 more residences, but actually 204 buildings in all as several are semi-detached structures. The contractors already have from 45 to 50 of the latest houses erected, awaiting completion, while foundations have been poured for another 125 altogether.

14 Different Types of Houses

Of the 14 different types of houses that will make up the sub-division some will be bungalows, some storey and a half buildings while the remainder will be two storey homes. All will have full basements and the tenants on moving into their new quarters will be supplied with electric stoves and refrigerators. The houses will be heated with oil furnaces.

Spring water from the Murray hills north of the town is being piped into the new homes from the S.R.D. main while the subdivision will have its own sewage pumping station with disposal at the south station down the road, Middleton Park

The section of the project that has already been completed is known as Middleton Park with streets bearing such signs as Johnson Rd., Lawrence Drive McEwen Drive, Laird Ave., and Trethewey Rd., all named after former CO.'s of the Trenton Air Station and outstanding leaders in the Royal Canadian Air Force. Air Vice Marshal E. E. Middleton whose name is perpetuated after was the former C.O. of the Trenton Station.

Exact location of the new town site is one quarter of a mile north of No. 3 highway on the R.D. road and stretches north to the C.N.R. right-of-way between the easterly limits of the town of Trenton, it takes in an area three quarters of a mile long by one half a mile wide.

From the proposed layout one of the main arteries, noticeable is the development of the old Trenton back road known to the lovers of a generation ago as the 40 foot road. This leads westerly from the S.R.D. road through the project connecting with Byron Street in Trenton.

With this new road servicing the Air Force townspeople much of the heavy motor travel will be taken off the main highway.

Where the development differs from others is that the fronts of the houses face the sidewalks but the roadway is at the rear and driveways to each house are reached from the back. In the Middleton Park area, for example, the roadways are lighted by daylight fixtures similar to the new up to date lamps illuminating many of the important thoroughfares of Belleville. And fire alarm boxes have been installed at strategic points throughout the housing unit.

Profusion of Color Scheme

To avoid monotonous exteriors of the houses, they have been finished in such colors as aluminum, cedar grain shingles of various colors, green and cedar shades. Roofs are of various colors working in perfectly with the color scheme of the whole setup.

Much attention will be given to landscaping the townsite while trees are being built to the contours of the land which takes away the flat appearance of the large housing development and affords some locations a clear vision and a beautiful panorama view of the Bay of Quinte and the entire airfield. Unless it changed the evolution of the present tree growth will be removed during construction.

House Fronts Face Park Areas

Airmen's children will have no excuse to play on the streets as they are returning from school, since the front of the houses face the park areas and the sidewalks do not run along the driveways like the most Canadian centres. All kinds of recreation will be provided the families of servicemen living inside the development.

The figures summing up the amount of materials in a project the magnitude of this one east of Trenton means little to the contractors and construction men doing the job but to the ordinary man in the street they would seem fantastic and awesome when the following facts and figures are considered. Millions of feet of lumber, thousands of feet of sewer and water piping, truck loads of nails, tons of concrete and also thousands of feet of roofing and exterior finishes will go into the development before completion. Every manner and form of tradesman will be employed on the job besides. From the carpenter and electrician to the plumber and bricklayer, all of them.

First Group of Houses

The first group of houses completed this year were built by Hill, Clark Francis for the Department of National Defence while the project now under construction is being erected by the Russell Construction Co., Ltd., of Toronto with Mr. Lorne Fraser as superintendent for Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation who turn the houses over to the government.

Sewer and water services are being installed by T.D.K. Rooney Construction Company of Kingston. The supervision of the services installations are under the direction of Mr. Clarke Bidley of Belleville.

The senior construction inspector is Mr. James F. Day of Trenton. Mr. J. Klempner of Toronto is services engineer for both the Trenton and Picton projects.

Similar projects under the same plan are being constructed at Picton and Barriefield, Kingston, for the army.

Providing nothing unforeseen happens and the winter is a reasonably mild one the first houses of the second part of the town plan should be turned over to the tenants in the spring and each week thereafter until the entire number is occupied.

SPAIN REJECTED FOR MEMBERSHIP IN COMMITTEE

Indonesia, Israel and Korea Elected, All by Big Majorities

Washington, Nov. 24 — (CP) — Spain's unpopularity with the United Nations was demonstrated again Wednesday night by a vote of 25 to 19 rejecting her bid for membership in the U.N. Fund for Relief of Children.

Indonesia was elected to membership by a vote of 49 to 0; Israel, 40 to 7; and Korea 43 to 5. A scattering of countries abstained from voting on these three; 14 abstained on the Spain vote.

James Dillon, Republic of Ireland delegate, argued for Spain's admission. He said the U. N. has no right to pass on the quality of any government, that a number of them were open to question.

The Arab states opposed Israel's admission, contending the new country disobeyed U. N. orders in the last middle eastern conflict.

During the conference session Canada and the United States joined in telling the F. A. O. that the time has come to return to the use of North America's fertile farmlands.

The spokesman for the two countries were Agricultural Minister Gardiner of Canada and Stanley Andrews, ranking United States Agriculture Department official.

They noted that both Canada and the United States, striving to feed a hungry world during the war and in the post-war period, made "marked departures from their normal agricultural practice in boosting food production."

Now, agricultural authorities in both countries seem to feel that there is a need for a return to sound agriculture.

As far as Canada is concerned, Gardiner said he does not think the conference should urge increased production on the North American continent. Canada already finding difficulty in market some of her farm products and this situation could become worse.

FILIBUSTER SHOWS NO SIGN OF PETERING OUT

Possibility Opposition Will Succeed In Preventing Passage of Bills

Ottawa, Nov. 24. (CP)— Parliament's plot-ized filibuster on pipe-line legislation will be one month old in a few days, but there's no sign of it petering out.

In fact, with the present session due to finish in a couple of weeks, the possibility remains that the opposition will succeed in preventing passage this year of two controversial bills, both introduced by private members.

The filibuster started Oct. 28 when a bill was introduced asking incorporation of a company known as Prairie Transmission Lines.

A few days later a similar bill, this one to incorporate the Alberta Natural Gas Company, was placed before the Commons.

Both companies want incorporation so they can build pipe lines to carry natural gas from Alberta.

The reason for the filibuster is that some opposition members are afraid the two companies will build lines which will transport the natural gas to the United States without first filling Canadian needs.

They appear determined to talk the bills to death unless the proposed terms of the line are written into them. The members believed that would give Parliament control over export of the natural gas from Canada.

Normally filibustering on private bills such as these is not difficult. Only two hours a week are devoted to private members legislation.

Goes to Bottom

At the start of the Tuesday night sitting at the start of the Friday night sitting one hour is devoted to such legislation. If no vote is reached before the end of the respective hours, the bills go to the bottom of the list.

The government apparently got tired of seeing the bills continually "talked out" and on Tuesday, despite persistent opposition, suspended the rules so that instead of devoting one hour on Tuesday night the House would take three hours if necessary.

The members talked right through the three hours and still no decision was reached.

The position of the Liberals is that the question of controlling export of gas should be left to the Board of Transport Commissioners, the Alberta Government and Trade Minister Howe. All have the authority to grant or reject pipe-line licenses. This doesn't suit the Progressive Conservatives, the C.C.F. and even several Liberals.

The dictionary interpretation of a filibuster is "to delay or prevent legislation or obstruct the action of a majority."

In the case of the pipeline legislation the debate may not resemble the popular American conception of a filibuster which suggests non-stop day-and-night debate.

But it is a filibuster—Canadian style.

SEVEN WOUNDED AS POLICE BATTLE WITH STUDENTS

Pupils Open Fire On Patrol Car -

Panama, Panama, Nov. 24 (AP) — Police laid siege to High School students in a National University building Wednesday night after fighting a gun battle with the youths in which seven persons were wounded.

The police, Panama's only armed force, said the students opened fire on a patrol car that was dispersing groups gathering to demonstrate in support of ex-Gen. David Chanis, Jr., to regain Panama's presidency.

The students claimed the police opened fire on them without provocation.

The students had tried first to demonstrate in a downtown plaza, but were prevented by police patrols. They were reassembling at the university when the shooting started.

Many of the students fled into the building adjoining. Others were arrested. Police tear gas forced still more out and into custody.

A 41-year-old woman was critically wounded but police said she suffered gunshot wounds while walking on the street far away from the university area. Two policemen were among the injured.

An hour after the firing a university spokesman entering the building with a medical team said about 30 students were inside, though many had escaped. The professor said the youths were not armed but were pelting the police with broken flower pots and tiles.

The marchers, and Wednesday night's would-be demonstrators, had rallied around Chanis after he repudiated his resignation. But Chanis said he would not step down in favor of the former president.

Proposes English-Speaking Peoples Consider Closer Union

Toronto, Nov. 24 — (CP) — Hon. J. A. D. McCurdy, Lieutenant - Governor of Nova Scotia, suggested a convention of English-speaking peoples to consider a basis for closer union.

Addressing a Canadian Exporters' Association luncheon, he declared: "Let us suppose that a commonwealth be set up consisting of the United States, the British Isles, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa . . .

"Further, suppose we seize the opportunity to start this organization of free or English-speaking peoples, as a step constituted to secure everybody and in an ever-growing degree the freedom, peace and prosperity of every man and woman.

"The union authority shall have somewhat the same limited but effective powers as set forth in the American Constitution, mutatis mutandis to make war and peace for all of its members; to govern their foreign relations and their non-self-governing territory; and to provide them with a common defence force, a common free trade market, a common currency, a common postal and communications system and a common citizenship. Above all, to preserve by preserving the present status of its institutions as far as deemed practicable . . .

"No one can tell in advance what the details of such a constitution would provide. They would have to be worked out at the convention. We are committed to nothing a convention does until it has set out its plan and studied the text of the constitution it produces, but ratified it . . . "

The executive of the Sunday School held a meeting at the parsonage on Monday evening to discuss plans for a Christmas entertainment.

At the Sunday evening service in the United Church the pastor, the Reverend W. Scott, chose his scripture reading from Matthew 6, and spoke on "The light of the body is the eye" "Jesus emphasized to His disciples that the eye was one of the most important organs that man possessed. It is through the eye that we see life." Mr. Scott asked "what are we seeing in life?" Too many are fault-finders and never look for the good things. He illustrated this point by relating the story of a man's dream. It is a much better picture for us to see the good in people, rather than the wrong, stated the speaker.

Henry Ford Cold-Shouldered

Henry Ford attended church shabbily dressed and sensed the coldness, and indifference shown him. Then the church lost him. How often we do the same," commented the speaker.

The eye are the sentinels of the soul. The character of a person is revealed by what they are desirous of reading. There is so much trash on the press stands today and yet so much good fine literature available. We should keep the sentinels of our mind alert, stated the pastor. Should keep strict guard of the things that come flitting into our mind as some are difficult to resist.

Continuing, he said "that our eyes help to focus our lives. Many men and women have used their eyes to see ideals, the good and truth's worthwhile, and have used these for a purpose to attain greatness." He mentioned Gen. field, the 20th President of the United States, who followed 12 rules faithfully, and because he did, became one man man he was. The world today needs men of such calibre."

Mr. Scott concluded his sermon with the thought that "we need to focus our eyes upon the goal of life. What is our goal? Brave souls are needed to follow Christ and focus their life upon God. If we focus our eyes in the right course we will then be conscious of the beauty of the world, and also be conscious of God.

Trip to West Coast

Riding Mountain National Park in Manitoba Attractive to Tourists

By M. HALSTEAD HORN
(Third Instalment)

Leaving Portage la Prairie by Highway No. 1 we are driving through some of the best farming land in the province. Large acreage is the rule, farm buildings are modern and well kept, and on every side we see all the signs of a bountiful harvest.

We reach Brandon just at noontime but do not linger since it is a delightful and most pleasant day and business are closed during the afternoon. This city has many fine homes, good business blocks and well paved streets, and can hold its own with any city its size as regards educational facilities and places of worship, as regards sport we find as in most prairie cities that hockey, skating and curling interests young and old during the winter while in the summer people are keenly interested in golf, tennis and baseball. Brandon has a very up-to-date Experimental Farm is one of the cities on the Class A Fair circuit.

Leaving Brandon we turn north on No. 10 highway and passing through Rapidsdale to the Riding Mountain Park. This park is 35 miles northwest of Winnipeg and covers many hundreds of acres, much of it heavily timbered in it we find numerous lakes, but we are going to Clear Water Lake, here we find, hotels, cottages and tourist homes available to the tourist.

The roads throughout the park are mostly macadamized, and there are many things of interest to be seen. Then too, there are ride-a-ble horses for hire, boats for boating on Clear Water Lake, a grand golf course and club house, tennis courts and one of the largest golf balls, setting for bears, also moose, deer and bear are within fenced portions of the park. There are shops selling souvenirs, Eskimo articles, Irish linens, post cards and Indian bead work.

A photographer from Brandon has a studio here during the summer months, and there is a very fine museum showing many different species of wild birds, buffalo, flowers and minerals in the park and other parts of the province. One makes no mistake in spending his holiday in the Riding Mountain National Park.

Many fine homes are built and owned by people who come year after year from the cities and towns of the province and other parts of Canada and even south of the international boundary. These home are usually occupied until late in May, but the roads in the park are not kept open during the winter season.

We went to see the Wishing Well, a shallow well, where the water boils up out of clear sand and the water is so clear that at times one wonders if there is water in it. Numerous pennies are seen in the bottom, thrown there by those making a wish and casting in a penny at the same time. A cup hangs beside the pool if you care for a drink of cold clear water. As the pool overflows, it forms a small stream that is bridged by a rustic footbridge, and as tall trees are growing around the pool it is quite a delightful spot and one wonders at all the strange things nature has created.

Another strange phenomenon is Twilight Lake, a lake bearing this rare beauty spot we travel north on No. 10 highway through the park and strike a spot in the road that is being relied and widened. Two huge bulldozers are busy tearing up the soil, and as there had been considerable rain before we arrived, it certainly did not look so good, but by careful driving we managed to get through without any assistance, and I know I heaved a sigh of relief, when that spot was passed. It may have been wrong, but I had a feeling that the drivers of those bulldozers were not worrying the least about us, in fact I had an idea they might have given up more room on the grade. Possibly I need more room than most people, but there I was at the wheel.

Passing through an older settled section of the province we reach Dauphin and we have not seen a poor crop anywhere. From Dauphin we are taking No. 5 to the boundary line between Manitoba and Saskatchewan, and in Saskatchewan our highway becomes No. 10, we are rumbling into heavy showers of rain then sunshine then another real downpour but we hope to make Yorkton and spend the night.

Arriving in Yorkton we find the hotels are full even the tourist camps are occupied all the time there being a shortage of houses on the prairies too. Yorkton is situated in a wonderful farming district and millions of bushels of grain have been sold to the elevators to be shipped by rail to Fort William and Port Arthur.

Now we are in Saskatchewan, the province in which I have spent most of my life, though born in Ontario and I feel I must tell you something of this great prairie province. The occupied farm area in Saskatchewan is 39.4 million acres, and that is about one half of the occupied farm land in the Prairie provinces, or about one third in the whole dominion. In 1946 the improved area amounted to 25.6 million acres or nearly two-fifth of the improved land in Canada.

Saskatchewan has a total of 110,000 farms, averaging 473 acres each with 230 acres in crop. There are many farms in the older settled district of two to three sections in extent. In the prairie provinces our land is surveyed in sections, a section being 640 acres. A homestead consisted of what is known as a quarter or 160 acres. I know of farmers in some districts who farm three or five sections having bought the land from the original owners, many of them going farther west or even to the coast to live.

Mrs. Thompson, president of Moira W.A., then took charge of the program. Mrs. Mumby sang a solo with Mrs. J. Vanderwater playing her accompaniment on the piano.

The 3rd chapter from the study book "Growing With The Years" was given by the Rev. M. Clarke. After the meeting closed, dainty refreshments were served, and a social half hour enjoyed.

You take chances in a bridge game. But no more than necessary. Rules guide you when there is a choice of chances. They are not guaranteed to work always. Only most often.

Of unseen cards held by opponents, how are they most likely split? Rule says: An even number divides unequally; an odd number as equally as possible.

Suppose opponents have five clubs; an odd number. Most likely they are three in one hand and two in the other. Not always. Most often. Much more than half the time.

A finesse is a 50-50 chance. A play depending on the three-two division is better than 50 per cent. So, suppose you have a choice between the two. First go for the three-two split play.

South is declarer at four spades in this deal:

NORTH
♦8 6 4 2
♣A K 6 4 3

WEST
♠J 10 8
♥A K Q J.
♦K 9 7 5

EAST
♥9 7 5 4 3
♦Q J 10 3
♣Q J 10

SOUTH
♣7 5 2

West takes two heart tricks and leads a trump. Of the two more possible losers, try to save one. No way to prevent giving up a club. Concentrate on saving the diamond loser.

Plan to shift diamond queen on established dummy clubs. It will depend on finding opponent clubs three and two. It is a safer chance than the 50-50 try for a diamond finesse.

Pull three trump rounds and then go to work on the club suit. But be careful. Lack of dummy entries makes a delicate operation of this. Deliberately give up the first club trick.

East wins and returns a diamond. Declarer has to finesse. So with the ace. Dummy overtakes the second club and remains there until he takes enough of them. Diamond queen is ruffed on a club.

There are some plays that offer less than half a chance. Some are 50-50. Some are better than 50. Know them and choose.

Knowledge is an expert's legitimate edge.

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Nov. 24 — (AP) — To former school teacher Elaine Townsend, running a gambling salon is just like the grocery business.

"The only difference is that you deal in cheques instead of soup flakes," she explained.

Miss Townsend is a thirtyish, handsome blonde who heads some gaming operations in Havana, Cuba. Although she falls to see the glamor of her occupation, Hollywood freak otherwise, they will soon be the subject of "The Elaine Townsend Story."

Here to oversee the writing of the script, the gambling queen explained how she happened to choose her work.

"Have you ever lived where temperatures were 40 below zero?" she asked. I replied I had not.

To Warm Climes

"Well, I did," she continued. "I was born in the little town of Powell, Wyoming. I went to the University of Denver and I taught at a commercial school in Denver. Finally, I got so cold I took a trip to Honolulu.

"When I went back home, I was colder than ever. So I took another trip — this time to Havana. I stayed at the National Hotel and out by the pool I would hear all the gambling talk. I happened to hear that the chemin de fer and crap concession at the hotel was open, so I swapped it up.

"Later I became associated with the race track and I now operate all the gambling at the Montmarte."

It's a Business

Doesn't she find it at all exciting?

"Oh, yes," she admitted. "It's fun to be close to the games — and gambling is a business where you have to stay close to your money. And there's a thrill in not knowing at nine whether you will be rich or broke at three in the morning."

But as far as stick-ups or other excitement, such are lacking. "We are too well protected for anyone to try anything," she said. "Besides, gambling being legal in Cuba, there is little dirty work."

Where then, will come the drama for the picture? "Oh, it's a comedy," she explained. She said Ann Sheridan would be her preference for the role of Elaine Townsend.

48 Descendants Come Home For Thanksgiving

Gettysburg, Pa., Nov. 24—(AP)—The Welkert family thanksgiving dinner became a full-scale project today as 48 direct descendants came home for the United States holiday.

It was a double ceremony for Edward A. Welkert, 59, and his wife, 56. They also observed their 30th wedding anniversary and all their children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and even great-great-grandchildren were on hand to help celebrate.

"We indeed," said says Mrs. Welkert, "I don't have room for them all, and besides I'm getting too old for that cooking."

So the dinner was shifted to the social hall of the Two Taverns Grace Lutheern Church where the ladies and society helped prepare the meal.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

The schedule for the Senior "B" Group in this district was released today by Frank Buckland, member of the Executive Association via Lorne Cook, Kingston district late Hockey League representative. Buckland is in charge of the set-up secure to be a good one and should be satisfactory to all concerned especially the Marlbank, Stouffville and Toronto Meteors teams who are in on the group struggle. The new arrangement sees the Belleville Diesel Electrics play a Series schedule with the Peterborough Hockey Club and Peterborough Legion and an extra game series with Kingston and Gananoque. The Peterborough teams will play against Toronto Meteors, Markham and Stouffville thus balancing the extra games played by Belleville against Kingston and Gananoque. Incidentally these ville against Kingston and Gananoque. Incidentally these extra games will be three-point affairs. It looks like a good set-up especially from a travelling viewpoint as Belleville, Kingston and Gananoque will not have to make the long jumps to the home ice of Meteors, Markham or Stouffville.

The schedule which lasts through till February 18th will give the Diesel Electrics ten games at home and the same number away, Ending as it does on Feb. 18, the schedule permits from that date until March 4th for the group playoffs. These have yet to be arranged. However, it means a little over three weeks and a tidy playoff schedule can be arranged for that length of time.

"Red" Carson, of the Diesel Electrics was highly satisfied with the group set-up as arranged by OHA executive member Frank Buckland. "It means lots of hockey for the fans and a good schedule," he said. The busbear of long "hauls", always a headache to managers and players alike of any sports team, has been eliminated in the set-up, and that means a lot insofar as the various exchequers are concerned.

So the Senior "B" season gets away to a good start here in Memorial Arena on Monday night when the Diesel Peterborough Hockey Club will be the guests of the Diesel Electrics. On the same night Gananoque pay off the kid when they travel to Petergrogh where they meet the Legionnaires. Aside to "Red" Carson: How about some opening ceremonies, ahem. A band and whatnot?

The schedule is published elsewhere in this edition and you will notice that it has been arranged so that interference with the District Hockey League has been reduced to a minimum. The Diesel Kee's do not play in mid-week at home. From Monday when the Peterborough Legion plays here. As the District League schedule ends on December 8th it will give the executive of that organization time to arrange for the playoffs.

Tonight the District Hockey League embarks on the second half of the seasonal schedule with the Bell Telephones Flyers clashing and Northern Electric taking on the CNR Diesels. Electrics went through the first half of the schedule undefeated and are set to emulate the unbeaten record of the Diesels of a year ago. Diesels are now tied for second place with the Trenton Flyers as tonight's tilts should be battles all down the line. Flyers by defeating 6 R. D. and in the event Northern takes Diesels, will move into undisputed second spot with 6 R. D. if Diesels win, Flyers will move into a fourth slot-tie with the Belleville Rockets.

The handsome gold trophies donated by the Old Timers Hockey Association to the Belleville District Hockey League have arrived in the city and are now on display in the windows of the Ed. Thomas Tobacco Store. The trophies, purchased by funds raised by hockey players of the long ago, to perpetuate the memories of those players who have since passed on will be completed for each year with miniatures given the winners at his permanent possession.

The Roland Trophy, with gold pillars and a white base, given to honor the memory of Pete and Nick Roland will be given to the outstanding goaltender in the district loop, while the Whalen Trophy, a gold coloured bowl given to honor the memory of the late Daw and Ted Whalen, will be presented to the player voted most valuable to his team during the league's scheduled season.

DRAMMA

He paced nervously up and down the room. Occasionally he glanced at the clock on the mantle. Then at the telephone. He was drawn and thin. The last week had taken a terrific physical toll. He puffed quickly at a frankly-lighted cigarette, then twisted it savagely and hurled it in the direction of the waste paper basket.

The clock came on the dot. He reached it in two nervous jumps. It was his wife. "I've brought you some coffee dear" she smiled. He slammed the door in her face. "Leave me alone, will you?" he growled savagely. "I don't want to be disturbed."

Again that restless pacing. Would the telephone never ring. Up and down the room he strode, hands twisting as waves of mental agony overtook him.

He swung to the telephone and dialed a number. A voice answered. "Any news yet?" he asked, his heart pounding in his chest. "Nothing yet, sir" came the reply.

He slammed the receiver in the cradle. He loosened his tie and flung himself in a chair.

His hair straggled down over his forehead as he bent over and buried his head in his hands. God, this waiting was getting unbearable. It had to come to an end sometime. He picked up a magazine, read a minute and buried it away.

Again that restless pacing up and down the room. The telephone tinkled. He sprang toward it like a ravenous tiger at an antelope. "Hello, Hello, Hello," he shouted. "Yes, this is he. What?, Oh, to hell with the price of cottons." He banged the receiver back and wiped cold perspiration from his brow.

Hours later he was still nervously pacing the room. He had discarded himself of his coat and vest. His tie strayed down on his chest. He was haggard, Lines etched his face. Coffee stood cold and untouched on a table.

The grey light of dawn appeared through the window. His eyes, heavy from lack of sleep, burned in his head. Would that damned phone ever ring? What was wrong with people anyway? For a week he had walked for news. It shouldn't be so difficult as this.

"Do you want breakfast up here, dear?" came the voice of his wife through the door.

"No, I don't," he growled, "And don't bother me."

Again he took up the nervous pacing. His hands thrust deep in his pockets, lower jaw sunk into his chest strange sounds issued from his throat as the ceaseless parade continued.

"Here's the mail, dear" and his wife entered the room with letters and papers.

A minute later, she heard a crash. Alarmed, she raced back upstairs to find her husband slumped on the floor. He was quite dead. In his hand was an envelope. He side tripped away.

And peeking from the torn paper were the edges of a pair of tickets for the Grey Cup finals.

Stamps Secure Motion Pictures Of Playoff Game

By W. R. WHEATLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Montreal, Nov. 24 (CP)— Motion pictures of the first Ottawa-Montreal Big Four playoff game were taken to subterfuge, though unauthorized use of a nationally-known company's name, for Calgary Stampeders, the Canadian Press learned unofficially Wednesday.

The trick came to the attention of the vice-president of the company, a former Big Four coach himself.

He immediately telephoned coach Lew Hayman of Alouettes and told him the job done by the Associated Screen News was entirely without authorization by his company and that the Associated Screen News likewise had no knowledge of the subterfuge.

Here is the story told the Canadian Press on the highest authority:

The man who carried out the deal is a former official of the Calgary club now living in Montreal.

He telephoned the filming concern saying he wanted movies made of the game. He was asked on what basis because permission of Alouettes would have to be obtained.

The man replied: "Tell them it's for the newsreels."

The film people said this was unusual because they were in that business themselves. They were then told that the nationality known first was actually making the request.

The film people telephoned coach Lew Hayman. Knowing that his club's secrets were with the film and thinking the company had some promotional stunt in mind, he gave his approval. He also asked that a copy of the film be made available to the club. The film was delivered the following day.

Junior Dukes Lose to Windsor For Third Loss

(By the Canadian Press)

Even the mighty must take a tumble once in awhile. Toronto Marlboros learned Wednesday night as they lost their Ontario Hockey Association Junior "A" title in the only third loss for Marlies in 18 games.

Windsor Spitfires, fourth team in the loop, turned the trick by blasting the Dukes.

In other games Wednesday night, Toronto's Senior Marlboros won the game with Kitchener-Waterloo Flying Dutchmen 6-3 to cement their hold on first place. Barrie Flyers and St. Catharines Teepees played to a 6-6 overtime tie in the junior division.

The biggest accident marred the senior encounter. Allie Childs was broadchecked in the third period. He was taken out of the ice on a stretcher and removed to hospital where it was reported he was suffering from undetermined head injuries.

At Windsor, Marlboros went into an early shortlived 1-0 lead when Jack McCormack scored unassisted. Glen Shorr rapped in the equalizer and three minutes later Lloyd Hinchberger shot spitfires into the lead.

Earl Reibel, Jack Bailey and Erwin Grosse smacked in three tallies in the middle frame without a Marlie reply. Came the final frame and Bailey tallied his second before Marlies came back via Armstrong.

Thriller of Evening

The contest at Barrie was the thriller of the evening. Both teams collected markers in the opening period. Bill Altoft and Obie O'Brien were the Barrie goals while Chevrefils and Jerry Toppazzini notched the counters for Marlies. Chevrefils and Jerry Toppazzini notched the counters for Marlies. Gerry Toppazzini netted in the second, O'Brien and Real Chevrefils, with his second, traded markers early in the third. Bob Knowles and Obie O'Brien then punched in two more for Teepees, O'Brien via his third of the game.

The Barrie clubsters seemed to have the game tucked safely away when Bill Altoft counted his second goal and Teepee's sixth 29 seconds after the opening of the final frame. Jerry Toppazzini then proceeded to score two goals, both of the unassisted variety, and Stan Long notched another tally to dispel any Teepee notions of easy victory. The teams battled through a scoreless overtime period for the split in points.

At Maple Leaf Gardens the senior Marlboros demonstrated their superiority in their loop.

Johnny McLellan, Johnny McCormack, Bob Hassard and Ali Childs, who was injured later, all counted with Gary Aitchinson at the goal.

The O.H.A. is idle tonight but six games are carded for Friday night. In the junior series, Marlboros play at Barrie, Oshawa travels to Stratford, Galt visits St. Catharines and Guelph plays host to Windsor.

Two games are on tap in the senior group. Owen Sound Mercurys meet Marlboros at the Gardens in Toronto and Kitchener-Waterloo play at Hamilton.

Schmidt Scores First Goal Of Year as Bruins Beat Leafs; Detroit Edges N. Y. Rangers

By JIM BASTABLE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Milt Schmidt, a smooth piece of hockey machinery when he's operating on the professional scene for nine fruitful seasons, pitched a tense moment Wednesday night to score his first goal of the current National Hockey League campaign.

Schmidt unleashed a solo dash and broke up a 1-1 deadlock that handed Toronto Maple Leafs an his last place Bruins gained a 3-1 victory in Boston.

The 31-year-old playmaker alternating on offensive and defensive posts for the last two seasons, broke up the hectic game midway in the last period.

In the only other game the leading Detroit Red Wings had their hands full in turning back New York Rangers 4-3. The victory gave the Red Wings a string of nine straight games without a defeat.

The Bruins' win moved them into a fourth place tie with the Rangers and Chicago Black Hawks all have 13 points.

At Boston, the Bruins— who have managed only five victories in 17 starts—got their first goal after Brooks Boyer vanished from his cage chores for a sixth attacker with 90 seconds left in the game. Peirson, who got two, scored that one when he rifled a 30-footer into the open cage.

Scored First Goal

Peirson scored the first Boston goal after he took a deflected puck from Toronto defenceman Gus Mortson.

The Leafs got the equalizer late in the second period. Ted Kennedy beat goalie Jackie Gelineau from the side of the goal-crease.

At Detroit, Joe Carveth got two goals while Ted Lindsay and Jimmy McFadden tallied singles. Pentti Lund, Ed Slowinski and Allan Stanley scored one each for the Rangers.

The teams battled to a 1-1 draw in the first period, but the Red Wings took a 4-1 lead by the end of the second.

Both Detroit and Toronto get back into action tonight. The Leafs take on the third-place Montreal Canadiens at Montreal and the Red Wings clash with the Black Hawks at Chicago.

Ken Shultz led the Cleveland attack with a pair of markers while Roy Kelly, Pete Leswick, Ted Sloan and Ry Buller amped singles.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Nov. 24—(AP)— If Bill Antonello makes good in the Brooklyn outfield next spring, the Dodgers will have a double laugh on Philadelphia Phillies— Bill is a Brooklyn boy, but the bums got him just by accident. . . Scout Art Dedo dropped into a downtown sporting-good store one day and overheard a kid asking for Labate of the Phillies. . . Dedo promised to give me a tryout, but he's an hour late," the lad explained. . . "If a tryout is all you want, I can give it to you," Dedo told Antonello. . . and without delay he took Bill to where the Dodgers were holding a tryout class, watched him work and promptly offered a contract. . . P.S.: Labate once was a Brooklyn scout.

Cleaning the Cuff

Bobby Riggs figures the main reason why Pancho Gonzales hasn't made a better showing against Jack Kramer on their pro tennis tour is that Gonzale's bechhand hasn't been working right. . . and of course there's the fact that Kramey doesn't like to lose. . . Barring accidents Otis Graham, Lou Saben and John Yonaker will play their fifth consecutive game for Cleveland Browns this week-end. Jack Russell will make it 56 straight for New York Yankees. They haven't missed a contest since the All-American football conference started.

Calgary Stamps Work in Secret For Big Game

Oakville, Ont., Nov. 24 — (CP) —It could be that coach Les Lear is showing those "unauthorized" Ottawa - Montreal Big Four football players the final touch in Calgary Stampeders, but any outsider around the Stamps camp would know better.

But one thing is certain: "There's a lot of hush-hush stuff going around at their highway tourist-cabin headquarters.

Depending upon reports of a two-a-day practices at the nearby Appleby College ground, coach Les Lear has halved this outside work and has adopted behind-closed-doors sessions. The blinds of the main cabin, a 200-foot-long building, are drawn and the doors locked while Lear tells to his defending Grey Cup champions.

The outsider wouldn't know whether they are "stealing" some of the Alouette plays, via smuggled films, before their Grey Cup date with the eastern champions at Toronto's Varsity Stadium Saturday. Films are being shown — and $1 will get you $10 they have a lot to do with the Riders-Als final — but no one is saying.

The heavy equipment — about the size of a club-bag — Lear carries into the "chalk talk" looks mighty suspicious to hovering newspapermen.

If Montreal hopes to reciprocate and "steal" some of the Calgary plays, their scouts are in for a tough time. Stampeder practice periods are situated well off a highway and some energetic students have been posted at the only entrance to keep outsiders from the property.

Lear had his first secret workout here Wednesday afternoon, with only a few sports writers on hand, and it was one of the toughest scrimmage sessions of the season. Everything was told by Lear to "let her rip" and the way they went at each other was an invitation to injuries, but they came out of it without a scratch.

Normie Hill, the 30-year-old end who picked the sleeper pass out of the air in the 1948 cup final against Ottawa, arrived shortly before the practice and was going full steam ahead.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

London, Ont., Nov. 24 (CP)— Lloyd Nicholas, 37-year-old Jack Kramer on their pro tennis tour is that Gonzale's bechhand hasn't been working right. . . and of course there's the fact that Kramey doesn't like to lose. . . Barring accidents Otis Graham, Lou Saben and John Yonaker will play their fifth consecutive game for Cleveland Browns this week-end. Jack Russell will make it 56 straight for New York Yankees. They haven't missed a contest since the All-American football conference started.

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Edmonton, Nov. 24 —(CP) — The old law of supply and demand is causing a stir in the sport world these days.

Supply superstar Ducats to the Grey Cup final in Toronto tomorrow between Montreal Alouettes and Calgary Stampeders, demand takes the form of the fans asking dunks at least one of the number Varsity Stadium will hold.

With everyone conceding that the stadium will hold just so many fans, the burning question his become—who gets first dibs on tickets?

Not Calgary Herald) Maclean, thinks The Little Guy, who backed his club all season, should get first chance.

"But what about the little guy? The fellow at the start of the year who signed up to a season contract to support the team for all loop games. Why didn't he get first shot with the season ticket holders and give two each until they ran out!

"Why not make the Little Guy feel like a big shot for once day by giving him the opportunity to make it possible for a friend or relative to witness Canada's girdiron world crown? After all, he had enough faith to sign a contract for all games in Calgary and the club missed its chance to thank him."

Hungry Lions

Jim (Lethbridge Herald Brooke Boyd) Slobodian, mentor of Lethbridge Native Sons in the western Canada Junior Hockey League, on the answer to another question—where do Crowsnest Pass Lions get off burning up the junior loop against such clubs as Calgary, Regina, Moose Jaw, Medicine Hat and Lethbridge?

"The Lions (coach Scotty Munro of the Lions) are hungry alright," Pete told Brooke. "Many of them never owned two pairs of pants in their lives until they started playing hockey. This isn't any slur on the kids because when I played junior hockey, I knew a lot of fellows who were the same way.

"The Lions play the game for all it's worth and never fail to take advantage of the other guy's mistakes."

Hayman Never Coached Losing Team in Final

Montreal, Nov. 24. (CP)—Lew Hayman has never coached the losing team in a final for the Dominion football championship.

He has never been beaten in the Eastern Canadian final, and only once has a Hayman-coached squad failed to make the Big Four playoff.

That's the record of this serious 56-year-old executive-coach who will send his Montreal Alouettes against Calgary Stampeders in the Grey Cup classic at Toronto Saturday.

Hayman's accomplishment's properly date back to 1933, the year after he came to Canada by way of Paterson, N.J., his home town, and Syracuse University.

In that same year, his first chore at Canadian football as a full-fledged coach, he piloted Toronto Argonauts to the Canadian title. He gave Argos two more, in 1937 and 1938.

In the war years Hayman was an officer in the Royal Canadian Air Force and in 1942 coached interservices RCAF Hurricanes to the Canadian championship. In Three Years

Since coming to Montreal in 1946 he has been in the Big Four playoffs three times in four attempts. Now, a winner in the Eastern final, he moves into the all-Canadian thriller with a powerful team built from scratch in four short seasons.

Missing the playoff is his second year here was a disappointment to Hayman, denied football stardom as a player in his youth. A badly broken leg shattered his dream.

It was during his freshman year at Syracuse University that misfortune struck him—in football.

Before that Hayman starred at high school in his home town and at New York Military Academy, a prep school for the United States Military Academy at West Point. After the accident he was able still to play basketball, he done in his thigh. — Central Press Canadian.

Ball and Basket

He was playing-manager of a baseball team of college all-stars in 1932 when he got a call for help from his old Syracuse friend, Warren Stevens, football coach at University of Toronto. Hayman answered the call, and next season was in the Big Four pilloling Argos.

Hayman has the carriage and poise of an athlete. He is no man mountain. He is a trim 185 pounds and stands a little over nine inches.

At times he has been dubbed Lachrymose Lew by newspaper men who poke fun at his emotional and fretting over what might happen to his team. It is not on record, however, that a pollyanna coach was ever a winner.

Judge Dismisses Charge Against American News

Brantford, Nov. 24 (CP) — Judge D. J. Cowan Wednesday night dismissed charges of exposing for sale an obscene book, "The Amboy Dukes," laid against John R. Goodman and the American News Company.

Judge Cowan said the book "is not the type I would have in my own library," but he found the Crown had not proven that accused had knowingly exposed for sale obscene literature.

Judge Cowan said he did not consider that the book, picturing juvenile delinquency in a section of Brooklyn, would deprave or corrupt morals. "I think it could portray what goes on in part of a large city," he said.

Witnesses for the Crown during the two-day trial included W. S. Turner, headmaster of Stanley Brantford Collegiate, who called the book "literature, average." For the defence E. J. Lukas, director of the New York Society for Prevention of Crime, said he knew the section of Brooklyn portrayed in the book and he called it "a true picture."

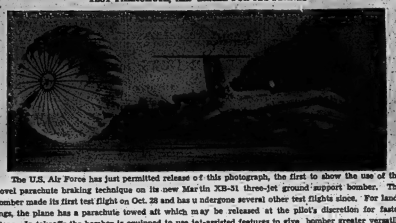
TEST PARACHUTE, AIR BRAKE FOR JET PLANES



The U.S. Air Force has just permitted release of this photograph, the first to show the use of the novel parachute braking technique on its new Martin XB-51 three-jet ground support bomber. The bomber made its first test flight on Oct. 28 and has undergone several other test flights since. For landings, the plane has a parachute towed aft which may be released at the pilot's discretion for faster stops. In takeoffs the bomber is equipped to use jet-assisted features to give bomber greater versatility in operations to and from smaller combat area fi elds or landing strips. Neither feature is regularly used for normal operations. — Central Press Cana dian.

Two of the 20 men aboard the craft when it plunged into the sea perished in the disaster. — Central Press Canadian.

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle:

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a walk with pop to increase his appetite and lower his weight. And a man went passed shaking his head up and down without actually talking to himself, and I said, G. pop, what's he doing that for? Is that a nervius habit? I said.

No, it's just a common ordinary habit that he developed from long practice, pop said, and I said, G. do you know him, pop?

I know of him, pop said. His name is Enock Sissern, and all his life he's been afraid that other people were always looking for a chance to take advantage of his good nature and impose on him. Even as a very young boy he refused to eat vegetables with his meals because he suspected his mother of trying to unload her left over spinnich on him, so of corse he grew up with practically no iron in his sistem, and although he was an unusually brite boy he only studied hard enough to barely pass his examinations, for fear his teacher would use his efforts for her own purposes and hold him up as an example to spur on the other boys. So naturelly that kept him out of college, pop said.

Did he have to go to work? I said, and pop said, Of corse, but he hadn't learned enough to hold down a big position. He was just able to hold down a little position addressing envelopes, and he was so afraid that he'd let himself be imposed upon by working overtime that he spent hours looking up at the clock and then back to his work and then up at the clock again, and that's how he developed that habit of nodding his head, although it was probably aggravated by the lack of iron in his sistem, including his neck. So apparently he's had to worry his attitude all his life, pop said.

Being the end of the subject.

Martin's Summer

By Vicki Baum

"Tat is a man of one idea, you understand," said May, becoming more cheerful. "No, Tat, it has nothing to do with your machinery. There are other things that have a future, aren't there, Martin?"

"Yes. Of course there are. I am talking about a non-inflammable film," Martin said, making a fresh start. Tat blew a puff of cigar-smoke, and did not seem to be impressed.

"There's one already," was all he said.

Martin began to go into details. He talked of formulas and technicalities with great fluency and overwhelmed Tat with the intricacies of photo-chemistry. A cheap non-inflammable film was a necessity. It had to come. The world was crying out for it. Countless experiments are being made. It had been tried with acetycellulose, with viscose film and with gelatine film. They were all too expensive. Not one of them was the right thing. But Martin had it. For three years he had worked at it, on a quite different principle, from quite another direction.

Professor Moller, the celebrated "Celloid" Moller, his tutor, a wonderful fellow had encouraged him in it. He had given him the use of a small experimental laboratory, as long as he had been a student, and afterward had allowed him to work in the experimental section of the Institute until he had achieved his aim.

So now he had it. He had invented the non-inflammable paper film, his was the cheap film that the world was waiting for. He described its appearance and its advantages, said what it would cost to produce and where it had been tested, and who had authenticated its value and practicability. He laid hold of a newspaper and quickly wrote down columns of figures, formulas and reckonings. He had it all in his head. He had been through it and worked it out a thousand times.

May was entirely forgotten, and Herr Lyssenhop was no longer May's father, but a colleague and a manufacturer. Though he looked so open and transparent this young Martin had been for long bottled up and pent within himself. Now he spoke of his own deepest and intimate concerns. He brought to light all his hidden capacity for work. May did not understand a word of the whole exposition, she wondered at it and was glad to do so.

At first Tat looked at the time and crossed and uncrossed his legs and smiled and said nothing. As a business man and a man of the world he took it all with reserve. But then he too began to warm up. He began to take an interest. "The devil!" he thought, "this lad's no fool. There may be something in it."

Half past four came, Then five. The gray motorcar was waiting in the square, and from time to time the chauffeur sounded his horn. Carla was dancing with agitation up and down the corridor. If May got Martin, then she Carla, would go for two years to England. She had quite decided that. People didn't die of a broken heart. Certainly not. But neither did they sit by and watch others get a heartsteak while they themselves were starving.

It was nearly half past five when Martin came to the end of his discourse. He was in a perspiration by that time. His forehead, his neck, and even the backs of his hands were moist. May was still standing by the door, as alert and unstirable as a guardsman. Tat was smoking his third cigar. He paused for reflection when Martin came to an end.

"My dear Moll," he said then, with his most business like air, "I understand nothing of these matters. It may be a good thing or it may be moonshine. You may be telling me the truth or you may not. You may be right or you may be wrong. In any case, one can't inhabit castles in the air. But I'll make you an offer. Give me your plans, and I will see what there is in them and what can be made of them. In the first place it must go to the patent office. Then we shall know about it."

"That's all been done," said Martin, without pride. "That's what I'm waiting for. The whole thing turns on that. I've got a man seeing to it."

"A man? Who?"

"A patent agent. It's all in his hands. He will soon fix it up."

"All in his hands! What do you mean by all?"

"The whole thing. The invention and the figures and all the rest of it."

"I see. But you have kept copies of everything, I hope?"

"Yes, of course. But what should I need copies for? It's all in my head—" said Martin unsuspectingly. May, at the door, made a movement. Herr Lyssenhop suppressed an exclamation.

"Did your professor Moller or Muller send you to this patent agent?" he asked.

"Oh, no! The agents Moller recommended all required money in advance; they were all big pots, far too expensive for a man in my position. My fellow is a young man, not much older than I am myself. A very decent fellow and very enterprising. He'll soon put it through."

"I see. And what is the latest news from him?"

"The latest? Well, you know, that's some time ago. The last thing he wrote was that I must have patience and that they were very slow at the patent office. Then he went to America, and I have heard nothing for some time. But he is very enterprising—"

"So it seems. Do you know the man well? Was he recommended to you?"

5 Deaths Blamed On Snow and Sleet Storm in Ontario

Snowfall One of Heaviest For Month of November

Toronto, Nov. 25 — (CP) — Death of a snow-shoveller from a heart attack here today raised to five the toll of fatalities blamed on a snow and sleet storm which swept through most of Ontario Thursday night. Three persons died in traffic accidents and several others were injured. The fifth death was attributed to exhaustion.

The snowfall averaged 3 to 9 inches, with 12 inches reported in Wellington county's Arthur area. Toronto had more than 7 inches, heaviest November snowfall since 1874.

Northern Ontario escaped a heavy snowfall, but it was gripped with a cold snap, with temperatures of 27 below zero reported at Armstrong, near Hudson Bay, and 10 below at Cochrane.

Beatrice Chaboyer, 18, of the Serpent River Indian Reserve, was taken to hospital at Blind River, 90 miles east of Sault Ste. Marie, her feet badly frozen after being lost in the bush and two nights in the bush. Hospital attendants said she may never walk again.

The blinding snowfall almost brought navigation on the St. Lawrence River at a standstill in the Brockville district. Great Lakes freighters dropped anchor in the night shows and below Brockville but proceeded early today at reduced speed with visibility cut down to 100 feet.

Ottawa's mechanized snow-removal force manned by 175 workers was out early today removing an overnight snowfall of five inches. The city's buses and street cars operated normally.

Snow Shoveller Dies

In Toronto, death of Richard Kelly, 70, was attributed to a heart attack brought on by snowshoveling. It resulted in a warning from Coroner Dr. Gordon Tickell to men past 50 to leave snow-shovelling alone.

Thomas Plaza, 45, collapsed and died in a Toronto bus terminal after walking through the storm early today. Cause of death was coronary thrombosis brought on by overwork.

Arthur Ground, 52, of Detroit died in Brantford hospital from injuries received Thursday night when the car in which he was riding skidded off the road and smashed into a tree near Oakville. Driver of the car, Mrs. Anne Stewart, his niece, was injured.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Toronto, Nov. 25 (CP)—Synopsis: The storm which brought the first real snowstorm of the season to most of Southern Ontario is moving east of Lake Ontario this morning. Reports indicate an average fall of 8 inches. Another storm is developing near the shores of Georgian Bay, Lake Huron and Lake Ontario, and considerable drifting over all southern regions. Temperatures are mostly below zero over Northern Ontario this morning, and this cold air moving southward will bring considerably colder weather to Southern Ontario by this evening.

HOUSE APPROVES $383,000,000 FOR DEFENCE COSTS

Highest Peacetime Estimates in History

Ottawa, Nov. 25. (CP)— The Defence Department's 1949-50 estimates account of more than $383,000,000—highest peacetime estimates in Canada's history—was approved by the Commons Thursday.

But in allowing the estimates to pass, George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, said he was not satisfied with the procedure followed in dealing with the estimates.

He gave notice that next year his party will insist on formation of a defence committee through which the Commons could get all necessary information on which to base an intelligent appraisal of the operations and expenditures of the department.

Debate on the estimates was previously before the Commons Nov. 11 and again Nov. 18, touched on a wide variety of topics ranging from the screening al employees in the National Film Board to proposed defence establishments in Newfoundland.

Defence Minister Claxton disclosed that more than two-third of the men now served in air crew of the RCAF during the last war have signified their intention of rejoining the armed forces should a state of emergency arise.

There now are about 60,000 men in civilian life who served with the RCAF in the last war. Approximately 47,000 had significed that intention of "joining the armed forces should a state of emergency arise."

Three Children Drowned in Icy Waters of River

Asbestos, Que., Nov. 25—(CP) —While more than 50 persons helplessly looked on, three small children drowned in the icy waters of the Nicolet River at nearby Kingsey Falls village Thursday when their ice they were playing on gave way.

The children, were identified as Sandra Jean, Jean Guy Beaudoin, 3, and Yvon Bolevert, 4. The latter two children are foster children.

Provincial police, who investigated the tragedy, said the children were playing about 50 feet from shore when the ice suddenly gave way under them.

The cries of terror and for help attracted scores from the village, nine miles east of this eastern township town. The river flows close by the village.

Rescue attempts were tried by the villagers but they were forced to turn back when thin ice buckled under their weight.

One group of rescuers manned a rowboat and almost succeeded in pulling one of the children to safety. The child was caught between the boat and the ice, but slipped from sight just as his rescuers were about to come within reach of him.

The bodies were recovered shortly after.

COMMITTEE AGAINST RECALL OF AMBASSADOR

Attitude of Chinese Reds Still Independent

Ottawa, Nov. 25 — (CP) — The Chinese communists aren't showing any signs of courting the west to back up their requests for diplomatic recognition. On the contrary — "perhaps misguidedly" — they apparently expect the west to come to them.

The Commons Committee on external affairs was told that Thursday night by Arthur Menzies, head of the Far Eastern division of the External Affairs Department.

He was called as a witness after the west-to-east flow from a Progressive Conservative motion to recall T.C. Davis, retired Ambassador to China, to provide a "factual picture" of the Chinese situation. Only two Conservative members supported the motion by Gordon Graydon (PC — Peel).

Mr. Menzies was the final witness as the committee held two sessions in one day to wind up its study of departmental estimates.

It touched a wide variety of subjects ranging from the Russian Tass news agency correspondent in Ottawa to American military base in Newfoundland.

The decision to vote down the Davis proposal came after Walter Harris, parliamentary assistant to Prime Minister St. Laurent, said External Affairs Minister Pearson had informed him he was against calling the Ambassador.

May Carry On

Mr. Menzies gave a number of factors which might indicate that some Chinese Canadian missionaries in Red China may be allowed to carry on their work, but he said it is too early to tell yet.

One was that the missionaries have established "an enviable reputation" in local areas and such reputations count for a lot in China. Another is that only a small portion of the reds actually are "card-in-hand communists" and some of the others, schooled by the communists or in the west, might feel like leaving foreigners alone.

Mr. Menzies said Mr. Graydon the Western China Union University, partially backed by the United Church of Canada, still is in the Nationalist area. He thought there was a fair chance its missionaries will get an opportunity later to continue their work if the reds take over that area.

166,713,000 Bus. Grain Grown In Ontario in '49

Toronto, Nov. 25 (CP)—Ontario farmers grew an estimated 166,713,000 bushels of grain this year, the Ontario Agriculture Department's December report said today.

This year's crop exceeded the average of 161,371,000 bushels for 1938-48, the Department said in its monthly crop report. But during 1948 the yield was 178,846,000 bushels.

Midsummer drought cut down production of hay, clover and alfalfa. Total production is placed at 3,515,000 tons, compared with 7,574,000 tons in 1948 and a 10-year average of 7,074,000 tons. However, the hay shortage has been offset by a mild open fall with good pasture conditions and by a heavy corn ensilage crop.

5 P.C. Power Cut Asked in Toronto

Toronto, Nov. 25 — (CP) — A five-per-cent reduction in power consumption in Toronto was asked today by the Ontario Hydro Commission. The request was made to the Toronto hydro system. Voluntary power savings would probably avert blackouts, officials said.

10 Are Nominated For Mayoralty, 36 For Aldermen

No Speechmaking Given By Any of Candidates

At one of the best attended nomination meetings in the past decade, 60 persons were nominated this morning at the city hall to fill 13 positions to be filled on election day, Dec. 5th.

Ten men were nominated for the office of mayor; 36 were nominated for aldermen with but seven to be elected; there were 11 nominated for school board with four to be elected, and three nominated for the office of public utilities commissioner, with but one to be elected. Mr. Jack Trudeau, nominated for mayor, was the only one who qualified at the noon hour as mayoralty candidate.

While the interest was high at the nomination meeting city officials stated there were no records established for the number of persons nominated. Neither was there any record established insofar as attendance was concerned. Nevertheless when City Clerk Wilfred Holmes declared nominations open at 11 o'clock, the auditorium of the council chambers was filled and many others crowded their way in later.

There was no speechmaking by any of the candidates for the various offices.

City Clerk Holmes pointed out that where a candidate was nominated for more than the one position, he must make known before nine o'clock this Friday evening his intention as to which position he would stand for. Otherwise the first nomination would stand. Mr. Holmes stated he would be at the city hall until nine o'clock.

Qualifications of the various candidates are to be registered with the city clerk by Saturday night.

Gallows Claim Don Perreault At Bordeaux Jail

Montreal, Nov. 25 — (CP) — Donald (The Rat) Perreault, who betrayed his two accomplices in a bank holdup nearly a year ago, was hanged at Bordeaux jail early today for his part in the cop-killing of two Montreal policemen.

He mounted the gallows at 6 a.m. EST after receiving Holy Communion. There was no announced dead 20 minutes later by the jail physician.

Tall and broad-shouldered, the 28-year-old Perreault turned King's evidence at the murder trials of Noel Cloutier and Douglas Perreault (no relation) who were hanged earlier this year for murdering Constables Lucien Pepin and Paul-Emile Dunlavey after a bank-holdup Sept. 23, 1948.

Donald Perreault was living in the getaway car when the shooting took place. He escaped with the gunfire, he fled. Cloutier was captured after the robber fled Bery and the $3,300 was found stuffed in his shirt. Two weeks later, the police picked up Perreault in Taber, Alta., where they were caught trying to steal gasoline from a service station.

Donald Perreault lost his last chance for life Thursday when the Federal Justice Department refused to commute the death sentence.

Brother Douglas Perreault's trial — when Donald blamed his companions for a double slaying — Cloutier publicly identified the man who turned King's evidence as "Donald the rat Perreault."

INJURIES FATAL

Brantford, Nov. 25 (CP) — Arthur Colcleugh, 70, of Paris, died in hospital early today as a result of injuries suffered in an accident on a highway six miles northwest of here Thursday.

Mr. Ground was a passenger in an automobile driven by his son-in-law, Charles Burton. They were en route to Toronto on No. 5 highway when the vehicle skidded out of control and crashed into a utility pole, driven by Albert Wood of To-

W. German PACT APPROVED AFTER BITTER SESSION

Schumacher Barred From Chamber for Insulting Adenauer

Bonn, Germany, Nov. 23—(AP) —West Germany's parliament today approved the new allied-German agreement relaxing occupation controls.

But opposition during the stormy, all-night session was so bitter that Socialist leader Kurt Schumacher was barred from the assembly's next 30 sessions for insulting Chancellor. (Premier) Konrad Adenauer.

"Chancellor of the Allies" was the title hurled by Schumacher at Adenauer that brought the opposition leader's suspension. It came after the Socialist bitterly objected to West Germany's promise to participate in the International control authority for Germany's rich industrial Ruhr, which the Germans previously have boycotted.

In the agreement signed by Adenauer and the high commissioners of Britain, the United States and France, West Germany agreed also to maintain demilitarization, to continue to eradicate Nazism, and to support controls against German rebirths and monopolies.

In return, the allies ended dismantling in at least 18 German steel, rubber and chemical plants. They also agreed to German consular and commercial relations through, but not with a United German Merchant Marine, for foreign trade and allied sponsorship of German membership in international organizations.

Vote Overwhelms Schumacher

While Socialist deputies were out of the chamber in caucus, the rest of the assembly overwhelmingly approved Adenauer's proposal on which the opposition made its fight. Final the agreement, it was a motion challenging Adenauer's constitutional right to participate in the new agreement with the allies without parliamentary approval.

In the hot debate which preceded the vote, Schumacher criticized the Chancellor for agreeing to recognize the international authority to control the industrial Ruhr, to his "Chancellor of the Allies" taunt. Conservative deputies replied with shouts of "insolence," catcalls and boos.

They banged their desk lids, some rushed for the rostrum to get hold of Schumacher, Deputies leaped to their feet, shouted and screamed.

Loses 112 Pounds, Dies on 92nd Day Of Fasting

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 25 — (AP) — Percy Coplon, 53, who started what he said would be a 100-day fast on Sept. 25, died early today.

Percy, a jocular 'five-by-five' who weighed 357 pounds at the start, had gone 92 days without food. His weight had dropped to 245 pounds.

Coplon spent most of the fast in a small house atop a 30-foot pole at his home. Last Sunday he came down because of dizziness and said he would finish his 100-day fast in his home.

His dizziness diminished and Percy was in good spirits Thursday. He lapsed into unconsciousness just before midnight, however, falling to the floor in his bathroom.

Percy told reporters at the start of his fast that he hopped to prove that the human body can heal itself without medicine if it is given the chance.

He had announced he would begin taking food next week, starting with a spoon of orange juice.

Chinese Reds Said Planning Control Of Formosa, Tibet

London, Nov. 25. (AP)—Chinese Communists plan to throw their control over the island fortress of Formosa and over the mountain fastness of Tibet by next summer, an Eastern European diplomat said today.

Their time-table also includes grabbing complete control of all China by that time, but does not include the British colony of Hong Kong, at least for the time being, the Communist diplomat said. He declined use of his name but informants have given us in the past has proved reliable.

Red mastery of Tibet, land of the world's highest mountains ruled by Buddhist Lamas, would bring the Communists to India's borders. It would give them control over India's northern trade routes through the states of Bhutan and Nepal.

Both areas today are undoubtedly will mean fierce fighting in huge mountain passes.

The island of Formosa is stronghold of Chinese Nationalist leader Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

But it doesn't mean the Reds will accept eternally Britain's right to hold that strategic base off China's mainland, he added.

W. Calgary M.P. Expels Self To See Game

Ottawa, Nov. 25—(CP)—Arthur Smith, (PC—Calgary West) announced today he is expelling himself from the commons for one day—tomorrow—to join many of his constituents in rooting for Calgary Stampeders in the Dominion Football final at Toronto.

But he took another form of suggestion to get Prime Minister St. Laurent to modify his formal request that the House sit three times tomorrow, first. Saturday sittings of this waning session.

Mr. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, said the Prime Minister "is asking too much of the House" to request three sittings Saturday as well as other days of the week in the prorogation drive. He suggested the night sitting be cut tomorrow.

Mr. St. Laurent accepted the proposal.

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS RIOT; ABOUT 50 INJURED

Boston, Nov. 25—(AP)—Some 300 high school students rioted Thursday, some using brass knuckles and blackjacks, after an East Boston-South Boston football game. Two youths were sent to hospitals, about 50 others suffered less serious injuries and the windows of several automobiles were broken. More than 175 policemen were needed to disperse the crowd. No arrests were made.

Smoldering Pot Blast Damages Plumber's Coat

A plumber's soldering pot which failed to operate as was intended gave the local fire department a short run to a new house on the Trent Road yesterday afternoon. Firemen said the pot exploded and damaged the plumber's coat but there was no fire damage to the building.

The blaze was held under control by a fire extinguisher until the arrival of the fire department.

Also yesterday firemen were called to the City Cleaners on Moira Street, East, where lorries had caught afire from the smoke stack. Here again there was very little damage.

This morning the brigade was called to 255 Dufferin Ave., where smoke from the furnace had backed up through the cellar when the furnace stoker was permitted to become empty. Firemen filled the stoker with coal and remedied the trouble.

Dr. H. Wellbanks Sustains Fracture Of Knee-Caps

Dr. H. P. Wellbanks, local veterinary surgeon, suffered fractures of both knee-caps Wednesday night when his car was in collision with the trailer of a Smith Transport truck which cut into the side of his car.

The accident occurred just outside the limits of the city on Cannifton Road when the northbound transport driven by Jack McFarlane of Holloway, skidded on a curve. Dr. Wellbanks was driving south. The road surface was slippery at the time.

As the trailer of the transport jackknifed across the highway the left rear wheels under the trailer crashed directly into the centre of the Wellbanks car, almost completely wrecking the vehicle. The force of the impact tore the undercarriage from beneath the trailer. Damage to the car was estimated at approximately $1,500, while damage to the transport was estimated at under $500.

Dr. Wellbanks was taken to Belleville General Hospital where he was attended by Dr. G. S. Cronk.

The Bank of Canada report, being studied by two of the world's top banking officials, appears to hold some gratifying information for Graham Towers, left, governor of the Bank of Canada, and Cameron F. Cobbold, governor of the Bank of England. Mr. Cobbold, who describes himself as a "constitutional optimist", told a press conference in Ottawa that "no immediate disasters seem to be on prospect." He arrived Monday for a three-day "purely private" visit in the capital. — (CP Photo.)

Cannifton Bridge Damaged, Truck Hits Railing

Skidding on the slippery planks of the county bridge over the Moira River at Cannifton, a truck driven by Mrs. Hatton (Ella) R. B. Frankford, crashed into the bridge railing during Thursday night's snowstorm, causing damage both to the truck and to the bridge railing.

Mrs. Grills was stated to have been proceeding north across the bridge when her truck skidded on the snow-covered plank surface and she lost control of the vehicle. Approximately $200 damage was caused to the half-ton pick-up truck, while floor supports of the bridge were bent as well as some of the railing being ripped out.

Fortunately the truck was proceeding slowly at the time and the vehicle remained on the bridge.

Last winter an accident almost identical to the above put the bridge out of use for several weeks until repairs could be effected by the county roads department.

Tractor Rodeo Being Staged By Jr. Farmers

Junior Farmers in the Hastings county area will demonstrate their tractor driving prowess on the campus of the Belleville Collegiate on Saturday afternoon when a tractor rodeo is being staged, weather permitting, that is.

Agricultural Representative A. O. Dalrymple of Stirling stated that at least 20 Junior Farmers were expected to compete in the rodeo on the Collegiate grounds. Contestants will be required to put their iron steeds through various manoeuvres such as backing through space marked off with stakes, turning, manoeuvring their tractors while hitched to both two and four-wheeled trailers and other implements.

Woodstock, Nov. 25 (CP)—If it is brought to his attention that "The Amboy Dukes" novel is for sale in local stores, "I will prosecute," Oxford Crown Attorney Craig McKay said Thursday. Walk Into Side Of Moving Autos In Snowstorm

Heavy snow which fell throughout last evening made walking as well as driving conditions miserable.

Indicating just this is the fact that on two different occasions pedestrians walking in the snowstorm walked directly into the side of moving vehicles.

The pedestrians were not hurt in either instance.

Jack Murphy, Ridley Ave., was driving south on Pinnacle, when an 18-year-old girl walked into the side of his car. He drove the girl home and offered to take her to a doctor but she refused, stating she was unhurt.

J. H. Ward, Foster Ave., was driving east on Dundas Street East, when a boy Gerald Hannah, 41 St. Paul Street, ran into the side of his car. The boy was taken to a doctor and later was taken home.

Junior Farmers Declare Winners In Public Speaking

The Hastings County Junior farmers public speaking contest was held at Canifton Orange Hall on Thursday when three winners for the county were declared. There was a good attendance at the meeting.

Douglas Avery of Trenton, took first prize in the contest, his subject being "How to Improve the Local Junior Farmer Club." Douglas gave a summary of junior farmer activities throughout the province and concluded with suggestion as to how the local clubs can be improved.

Two other winners were Harold Langford of Tweed, who spoke on "Youth and Agriculture", and Burton Hubbie of Trenton, who gave a rather comprehensive subject "The World of Today".

The above winners will be eligible to compete in the Belleville district contest to be held at Canifton on Saturday evening. Contestants from Hastings, Northumberland, Peterborough and Prince Edward counties are expected to take part.

Judges for Thursday night's contest were Ralph Banbury, agricultural representative for Northumberland, Newton Ashton, agricultural representative for Peterborough and Coddington, and Bob Phillips, agriculture instructor at Belleville Collegiate.

Amateur entertainment during the evening consisted of a musical solo by Mrs. Gerald Eggleton and Miss Marilyn Eggleton and piano solos by Gerald Sills, of Corbyville.

Eight-Inch Snowfall in City Slows Motorized Traffic; Walks, Roads Plowed Early

Motorized traffic was slowed as early as nine o'clock when drivers were unable to coax their big vehicles up Murney Hill for loads and were stalled on the hill or had to back down before the public works department and employees on the job with sanders.

One road plow and two sidewalk jeeps were sent out at midnight when city officials realized the severity of the snowstorm. The road plow pushed the snow off Front Street and off the various bus routes, while the sidewalk plows went to work on the walks. At eight this morning another road plow was sent out and two more sidewalk jeeps.

To Stay on Job

City Engineer Charles Mott stated equipment would stay on the job all day and also tonight. Public works shovellers were also busy shovelling bridges and intersections and tonight snow will be trucked of Front Street.

For the same time city householders got their first taste of snow shovelling as shovels which had been in storage since last spring were put into action.

Barkman Acquitted Of Manslaughter

Toronto Nov. 25. (CP)—Virgil Barkman today was acquitted of manslaughter and of dangerous driving in connection with the traffic death of 21-year-old William Miller but was convicted of leaving the scene of an accident. He will be sentenced Dec. 1.

An assize court jury recommended leniency for the 45-year-old larber. Barkman will be kept in custody while awaiting sentence He was free on $4,000 bail during the trial.

In the morning Jan. 2 on Toronto's eastern outskirts, Miller was killed outright when struck by an automobile and his fiancee Helen Billson, 19-year-old model had her left leg injured severely that for a time doctors believed amputation would be necessary.

Mr. Justice Dalton Wells said in his charge to the jury that evidence did not warrant a manslaughter conviction. He urged the jury to consider conditions on the highway at the time of the accident.

Barkman surrendered to police several days after the accident.

Crown Counsel W. O. Gibson Thursday urged the jury not to convict Barkman on the manslaughter charge but to consider only a secondary charge of dangerous driving. The request came after defence counsel Harry Rose argued there was no evidence to prove Barkman guilty of criminal negligence.

TRACED FOOTPRINTS IN SNOW

Toronto, Nov. 25. (CP)—Police fired two shots early today before arresting two men who were traced by their footprints in the snow after they allegedly broke into a west-end electrical supply shop.

Ernest George, 23, and Thomas Pilch, 20, were halted by the shots as they led the policemen in a chase over back yard fences. They were charged with breaking into the shop.

Twelve others were given prison terms ranging up to life by a military court.

Sentenced to death were Lt.-Col. Dan Teiorian, said by well informed sources to have been serving on the Romanian army general staff when arrested; Maj. Mihil D. Eliade, a reserve officer; Martel Emilian, an actor; and Ion Vancu, a civilian sentenced in absentia.

The announcement said they were convicted of supplying information on defence matters to American espionage services.

Teen-Agers Pepper Actors' Horse With Tapioca Pellets

Hollywood, Nov. 25—(AP)—Bullets may be the favorite of bandits the orneriest of varmits with ease. But two boys with slingshots—that's different.

The screen and television star (real name Bill Boyd) had to call on two policemen to round up two teen-agers before a parade Thursday night.

They were peppering Hoppy's horse with tapioca pellets from an ice cream shop.

"It made the horse awfully nervous," the officers reported, "and Hopalong awfully mad."

Closer Relations Of Employers and Employees Urged

Toronto, Nov. 25 — (CP) — Closer relationship between employers and employees for the benefit of the whole community was advocated by Rt. Rev. Ferdinand Vandry, president of Laval University, in an address Thursday night to the Anglo-French Club of the Eaton department store (Simpsons).

What is required, he said, is "a love of the social spirit." He said the club members he was addressing had shown this spirit. "If all men who own money in Toronto and in Canada had the same social spirit, the same ambition to be useful to the community, there would be no danger in the future of communism," he said.

To avoid communism employers should know their employees as human being and the groups should become friends.

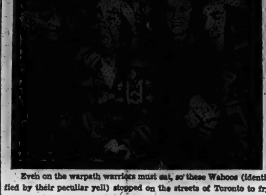
SOME OF THEM EAT THEIR MEAT RAW



Even on the warpath warriors must eat, so these Wahoos (identified by their peculiar yell) stopped on the streets of Toronto to try a hot dog or two. They are part of the 1,300 strong invasion from Calgary and points thereabouts who made the journey to Toronto to watch, and probably participate in the Dominion final football game between the Stampeders and Montreal's Alouettes.—Central Press Canadian.

Purge Czech Countryside To Liquidate Larger Farmers

(By RICHARD KASISCHKE)

Prague, Nov. 25. (AP)—Communist-led search committees today spread-out through the Czech countryside in an apparent drive to liquidate larger farmers.

The committees, backed by self-styled "persuading groups", operated through a wide section of the country seeking out and rounding up "economic saboteurs," reports in the controlled press revealed.

Prison sentences, confiscations and stiff fines were being imposed by district national committees (local governing bodies) against the kulaks (village rich) on charges of sabotaging the country's five-year plan.

The agrarian campaign appeared to be a counterpart of the wave of arrests last month in cities which rounded up thousands of independent business men and other middle-class elements.

Informed diplomatic quarters interpreted the new drive as part of the Communist class warfare plan and a prelude to collectivization of the land along the Soviet pattern.

In such a scheme "big farmers (none of whom can own more than 124 acres of land under present laws) first would have to be liquidated.

Two months ago the government-controlled press proclaimed a bountiful harvest with the compulsory deliveries of crops to the state exceeding the target.

Now, however, it is charged that "economic saboteurs" throughout the country failed to deliver their quotas. Some were also accused of refusing to seed arable land as directed by the government.

Saskatchewan Will Take Over Rentals Field

Ottawa, Nov. 25 (CP)—Finance Minister Abbott has agreed not to bring income tax rentals ceilings into operation in Saskatchewan.

This was shown in an exchange of correspondence between Mr. Abbott and the premiers of Saskatchewan and Quebec, tabled today in the Commons.

The Finance Minister agreed not to enforce Dec. 15 increases in Saskatchewan on the understanding that the province will take over rental controls next April.

In his exchange of letters with Premier Duplessis of Quebec, Mr. Abbott took issue with the charge that the federal government had never refused to hand over rental controls to the provinces. Mr. Abbott said he had made the offer last year and again this year.

The agreement with Saskatchewan will mean that the 20 and 40 per cent increases scheduled to go into effect next Dec. 15 will not apply to that province.

Mr. Abbott's agreement, contained in a letter to Premier T. C. Douglas dated Nov. 23, is based on Saskatchewan's intention to take over the rentals field when the federal controls expire next March 31, 1950.

Mr. Abbott's action regarding Saskatchewan left the way open for any other province to assume control of rents and makes inoperative the recently-announced rent boost.

The position in Saskatchewan, continued Mr. Abbott, will be similar to what it would have been if the province had acted before to put rental regulations into effect now.

POST CHRISTMAS MAIL EARLY

The Post Office will be fully prepared for the Christmas rush and in this there is a hint for the public to mail their gifts early so that these will be delivered in time for the midwinter feast and the celebration which is approaching. But little over four weeks remain before Christmas festivities and into that time business men and their staffs, the Post Office, and their staffs which are in every community and in the countryside across Canada, express and railway companies will crowd a great deal of business. To guarantee the certainty that gift parcels and mail will have been delivered in plenty of time for the Yuletide festivities, no one should wait too long and thereby be disappointed and disappoint others by their tardy participation for the occasion which means the greatest flood of business that the year knows.

The local Post Office has already made preparations and the Postal Department has published the dates beyond which only a special postage endorsement to delay the forwarding of gift parcel, letter or card.

The very dates of these schedules issued for the guidance of the public will serve to bring to immediate attention the pressing need not to delay the preparations.

Postmaster J. C. Waddell of Belleville has announced dates of the Christmas mailing schedule so that all will be satisfied, both senders and recipients. Parcels for the United States in order to allow time for customs examination should be posted before December 9th; for British Columbia, before December 13th; for Manitoba and Saskatchewan, before December 14th; for Newfoundland, before December 14th, and for remote points, the local Post Office should be consulted; for Manitoba and the Maritimes, senders should post their parcels and mail before December 15th, and for Ontario and Quebec mail and parcels should be started on their way before December 16th.

For local delivery the posting should be before December 17th and for this the warning is given that posting after that date will probably mean failure of the mail and parcels to reach their destination before Christmas.

As the postal authorities put it, delivery would be doubtful.

No one wants his gifts and letters and cards arriving too late when all he has to do is to plan early mailing.

Canada's Post Office is ready to be proud of and today with air mail service covering a great part of the country the nation is well served. Wherever there is an air mail service first class mail will be carried by air. In this Canada leads all nations.

So for the Christmas celebration all that is necessary will be to take advantage of all the plans laid for the speedy delivery of mail and parcels.

Everyone knows too how large a volume of business passes through post offices, over the express and railway companies and finds its way to its destination in time for the grand occasion. A letter or parcel late in arriving naturally loses some of the charm which goes with delivery before the great Christmas festival day.

Late posting and shipping would have the natural result of throwing an unprecedented volume of work on the staffs which have been organized to handle early forwarding in time to assure arrival at the destination before Christmas.

This is an opportunity to render help at a time when the pressure of work is very heavy on everyone. Thoughtfulness will be appreciated by those who man all the services.

NATIONAL HEALTH IMPROVED

Scotland is a land whose department of health shows the way of progress. For the seventh successive year since the start of the National Immunization campaign the number of deaths from diphtheria has fallen steadily. Deaths in 1948 total 31 or just under six per cent of the 1941 figure. The number of new cases last year was 723—the lowest ever recorded.

The world is more health conscious today than it ever has been. A great deal of stress is laid on disease prevention. It is a happy augury to find so great a part of the globe giving health a prime place in the public's attention.

INTERRUPTER

I should have said: "Get out of sight!
I have no time to lose today.
I've work to do, and so, my dear,
Pick up your toys and run away."
But no! I let the moments fly
The while upon my knee she sat.
She's only four years old, and I
Perhaps I shouldn't mention that.

Still waits the uncompleted task
Which I had pledged would be finished by
And when the reason why they ask
I know they'll shake their heads at me.

"A four-year-old dropped in," I'll say.
"We spent the morning having fun.
Had such temptation come your way
I wonder just what you'd have done?"

Childhood so swiftly races by
That happy child will soon be grown,
And just a few years left have I
Before the last one will have flown.
I thought it over, Work or play!
And I the one that had to choose
A four-year-old, a grandpa grey.
Neither with time for play to lose.

PITCHING HORSESHOES

By Billy Rose

LONG GEORGE AND "THE INCH"

Down the street a place from my theatre there's an old-time blood and bone parlor called "Jerry's," and whenever I'm in the mood for a little pick-me-up, I go there and order a pannikin of ginger beer.

Last night when I walked in, half the customers were watching a wrestling match on the television set that's perched on the Great Kabolski, and the others were listening to a heated argument between two of Jerry's regulars, George Smiley, better known as Long George, and Sid Perry, usually referred to as "The Inch."

"Money, money," I heard The Inch say. "Take a squint at them wrestlers and see what good it will do for dough under this lousy system."

"What's wrong with money?" said Long George. "If I may have His Ears, I'm offhand to think of a better idea?" Even in Russia they get by on an unreasonable facsimile of the same."

"Money," said The Inch, picking his teeth and words carefully, "is the root of evil. It makes scavengers of humans and cannibals of angels."

"Wrong as per usual," said George. "The real scourge of mankind, take my word for it, is library overdues. They are a definite power corrupts absolutely. Why, there's not a man alive on the face of this billoxy green earth until there ain't a Napoleon of crime who got his start keeping down the street."

At this point somebody dropped a nickel in the juke box, and Frankie Laine began ee-yahing that he was going hungry, crying at an imaginary team of mules.

"I'll tell you what's the matter with us, a man is offered a better incentive than dough — prestige. He's willing to dig an extra two inches of ditch a day because he figures it'll get him a promotion to the ditch gets dug and nobody gets swindled by some bloated plutocrat."

"That way," said George, "he gets in a position where he can send another worker to Siberia for not digging five extra yards."

The juke jockey put a penny in the slot and another worker to Siberia for not digging five extra yards."

"That way," said George, "he gets in a position where he can send another worker to Siberia for not digging five extra yards."

The juke jockey put a penny in the slot and another worker to Siberia for not digging five extra yards."

"Mr. Big Shot Capitalism," he said, "a man is offered a better incentive than dough — prestige. He's willing to dig an extra two inches of ditch a day because he figures it'll get him a promotion to the ditch gets dug and nobody gets swindled by some bloated plutocrat

Clear Thinking in Muddy Times

By ROY L. SMITH

Jeremiah, the famous prophet of the Old Testament, would find himself very much at home among many of the circumstances of these modern days. He would recognize many of the persons with whom he had dealt even though they may bear names very different from those ancients with whom the prophet was compelled to contend.

A Class Struggle

The earliest laws of the Hebrews were designed for a nomad population that knew little or nothing about property rights, land holdings, merchandising, or other modern devices for earning money. Once that the people came away from Sinai, through the wilderness, and into the Promised Land where they had to go under an entirely new way of life as farmers and agriculturists, their laws had to be expanded and reinterpreted to make them fit the new conditions. Then in the eighth century when commerce began to develop and farmers became merchants, another period of growth and change came upon them.

The original laws of the Hebrews provided for a tax which was designed to support the Levites against farmers and herdsmen, for these were the only income producers in the nation in the earliest days. Then came the merchants and traders with their generous incomes, but the lawmakers never got around to the plan of taxing them for the very good reason that the rich usually controlled the government by one device and another.

The burden of taxation falling almost exclusively on the farmers and leaving the city capitalists almost untouched, it was inevitable that a violent class struggle should develop inside the little Hebrew kingdom of Judah as a consequence.

The Political Results

The Prophet Jeremiah lived through a period of some 40 years during which one government after another was swept into power only to be swept out again. First it was the rural party composed of farmers who "kicked the rascals out." Then it might be a group of the aristocrats with foreign aid who manipulated to get back in again. Out of power the rural landlords and peasants became powerful revolters; in the government they were almost helpless as administrators.

For perhaps half a century, but more particularly for the last two decades of its existence, the little kingdom of Judah was rent with dissension, weakened by civil war, and destroyed internally by brutality and ruthlessness.

A "Preacher's Kid"

Jeremiah was a son of a priest and had been reared according to the priestly tradition. He seems to have been a man of some small wealth, for at one time and another we find him involved in rather important business deals and there is no mention in his book of any labors by which he might have supported himself.

He was one of those preacher's sons who finally decided that he "could do the Lord's work outside of the regular ministry." Throughout his entire lifetime he was a vigorous opponent of all types of injustice and exploitation. The page found in him a valiant champion. Good religion found in him one of its most ardent and intelligent preachers.

The Sunday School lesson for Nov. 27: "Jeremiah, a Spokesman for God," Jeremiah 1; 7-22; 20; 22:1-23; 23:5-10; 31-33.

Quite early in his life—during his boyhood, in fact—he discovered that his parents had dedicated him to the work of Jehovah at the time of his birth, and throughout his lifetime he took his obligations with the utmost seriousness. He became a man who lived always under a sense of divine destiny.

This is the type of man who is hard to stop. He seems so indifferent to all those things which have the effect of discouraging ordinary men. He seems so far above all those base and trivial things which have a way of tripping smaller men.

And one of the most depressing things we know about the life and work of Jeremiah is the fact that he was almost without exception opposed by those of his time who were professionally religious.

New Fashions Bloom With Aussie Spring

Sydney, Australia, Nov. 25. — (CP)—It may be the right time for Winter fashions in the Antipodes of Paris and New York but it's spring in Sydney and time for the latest in spring and summer clothing.

The fashion world in this "down under" country usually has to do some catching up in styles because of the reversal of seasons. But the same reversal gives Australian designers a chance to dream up some new departures in women's clothing and their biggest chance came at the spring racing carnival at nearby Randwick a few weeks ago.

Warm sunshine at Randwick brought out Sydney's smartest-dressed women in the latest wash-and-wear summer accessories.

Model hats and gowns from Paris, New York and London were seen with those by leading Australian fashion designers. Moire, taffeta, faille and tissued lace had no popularity with tailored linen and lightweight gabardine.

Dressed showed the newest slim-skirted silhouette and decolletage necklines. Hats varied from neat, head-hugging close styles to becoming, wide-brimmed straws, decked with flowers.

Ropes of pearls and colorful scarves were favorite accessories. Red, featured in Christian Dior in his latest collection, was introduced in many shades.

B.C.I. Home and School Association Opens New Suite With Bazaar, Tea

A complete transformation was effected in the household science room at the Belleville Collegiate making it into an up-to-date suite of rooms that is comparable to the best of its size in the province.

To mark the opening of the modern, newly-decorated apartment, the Home and School Association of the Collegiate sponsored an afternoon tea on Thursday with the attractive rooms as a setting. Greeting the guests at the door were Mrs. F. R. Hardacre, vice-president of the Association; Miss Erie Grout, head of the Home Economics department; and Mrs. R. C. Clarke, social convener.

On entering a pleasant color scheme of soft green and grey with complementary touches of rose in the drapes at the windows and rose tiles on the wall by the windows is the dining room with its dining tables and a built-in buffet, while the opposite wall contains three complete kitchen units consisting of sinks, stove and cupboards. One interesting feature of the cupboards is a lower one which contained a turntable or "Lazy Susan" arrangement which makes it unnecessary to reach into hidden back corners for articles. A book case and some attractive prints on the wall complete the room.

Laundry Room Adjacent

Adjacent to this is the laundry room which contains a washing machine, stationary tubs, a drying rack and a built-in ironing board. A picture on the wall exhibits the correct way to hang the clothes on the line. Off the laundry room is the dressing room where the girls prepare to work on or by fixing their hair, putting on aprons and washing their hands.

Miss Grout explained that the type of teaching in household science has changed. The girls work in family groups and alternate as cooks, table setters and hostesses, as well as the laundry work and housekeeping duties. A larger class will formerly be taking home economics as an option this year. The girls of this class assisted with the serving at the tea and looked most attractive in their appliqued white fruit, which they had made themselves.

Attractive Picture

Tea tables were used in two of the rooms and made an attractive picture with their appointments of silver services set off by centrepieces of red and white carnations and glowing candles. Presiding at the tea tables were Mrs. W. E. McCormick, Mrs. W. J. Musgrave and Mrs. Norman Smith for the first part of the afternoon and Mrs. G. E. Currie, Mrs. A. L. Reynolds and Mrs. K. S. Hill for the latter part.

The plates of delicious and little cakes artistically arranged and delicious to eat were served by Mrs. Ross Hoskins, Mrs. W. J. L. Shiels, Mrs. Linton Reed, Mrs. H. O. Meth, Mrs. W. H. Townsend, Mrs. D. C. Stirling, Mrs. H. Bates, Mrs. F. R. Wotten, Mrs. E. J. Hooper and Mrs. J. Kane; while replenishing were Mrs. H. Wolsey, Mrs. H. Williams, Mrs. Max Marcus, Mrs. R. Irwin and Mrs. E. W. Boulton.

The tea committee in charge were Mrs. R. Rose and Mrs. J. W. Lawrence.

Lavish Display

The homecooking table held a lavish display of pies, cookies, cakes, home-made jellies, catsups and other preserves, tarts, fudge cakes and every kind of tasty confection which sold briskly. This was in charge of Mrs. Herman who was assisted by Mrs. R. Thompson, Mrs. A. Thompson, Mrs. W. Lockyer, Mrs. W. J. Mills and Mrs. M. Langman.

Those who attended, including some members of the Board of Education expressed their approval and pleasure with the appearance of the new room as well as the rest of the apartment which also has had a face-lifting with new decoration. The proceeds will be used to buy a piece of needed equipment for the department.

fits at the spring meeting combined a Paris-designed cloche of red and white spotted silk with a dashing red wool coat-dress by a leading Sydney designer.

Silvia Gould, Heiress, Weds

Roxbury, N.Y., Nov. 23 (AP)— Heiress Silvia Gould, who broke her engagement to Lt.-Cmdr. Ernst Hoefer, Jr., was married either with a relief or regret Saturday.

The ceremony was arranged on short notice at the Seager, N.Y., home of the 31-year-old heiress by part of the forces of her grandfather, financier Jay Gould.

The bride said last Sept. 23 that she cancelled her engagement to the 29-year-old naval officer because he refused to sign away democracy for Hitler and Nazism.

Newspapers had said the wedding was called off because of Hoefer's refusal to give up his navy career and become a business man in New York City.

The reports were called "entirely erroneous" by the bride's mother, Mrs. Gould. "I had every intention of living with him on my husband's pay," Miss Gould said.

"He refused to sign a prenuptial dower rights agreement, relinquishing those rights in my favor," she said. "And my children must be protected."

Miss Gould took her maiden name of Gould since her divorce last April from Robert Parker, Jr. She has a daughter, Jane, 5, by her marriage to Parker. She has two children, Charles, Jr., and Silvia Gould Thomson, by her first marriage to Charles Dabney Thomson.

Women's Activities

V. O. N.

The November meeting of the V. O. N. was held at the Y.M.C.A. on Monday last. A large number of the board members were in attendance and president T. D. Huston conducted a successful meeting.

The various committee chairmen gave their reports to the members who greatly appreciate the splendid work that is being done. The work of the Supply Committee, with Mrs. Roy Grant as chairman, is worthy of special mention. This committee, with the help of volunteers, prepare the dressings and the various supplies used by V. O. N. nurses. Their work is greatly appreciated.

The board was pleased to learn that Miss McCreary, who is rapidly recovering from her injuries received in a car accident some time ago, will soon be back to resume her duties. They were also pleased to learn of the rapid recovery of Mr. Dick Hart from his recent illness and that he would also soon be able to return to his many activities.

Miss Connor, nurse-in-charge during Miss McGeary's absence, gave the nurses' report which was received with a great deal of interest.

458 Visits Made

The two nurses on duty, together with a relief nurse, had a very busy October. It is interesting to note that 458 visits were made during the month to homes requiring the services of a nurse. Of these 450 visits, 139 were free of charge, which indicates the great need for the community to support the V. O. N. so that this splendid service may continue and be available to an ever-growing city and surrounding district.

The board members expressed their concern over the possibility that some doctors in Belleville district may not be aware of the services available to them through the V. O. N.

A call to the V. O. N. Belleville headquarters, located at the Kiwanis Centre, telephone 1125 will bring a highly trained and skilled nurse to the home of anyone anywhere in Belleville or vicinity.

The meeting was closed by Mr. T. D. Huston who thanked the members for their attendance.

MARIO ... in his distinctive feature about Food ... What's Cooking?
By the author of "THE FACE IN THE ASPIC"

There's no hash in paprikash.

This pungen dish of golden browned chicken simmered in a rich stock and doused with paprika is a culinary classic from Hungary.

Unfortunately most cooks use paprika only for its bright red color. They dust it on chops, steaks and fish purely for eye appeal. It will color anything a vivid hue as is shown in the case of the canaries who were fed paprika and whose feathers turned red.

There's a pleasing aroma and flavor to this spice which you can best appreciate if you've eaten freshly ground paprika. Paprika has the kind of satisfying flavor that grows on it's appeal the more it is used in stews, soups and sauces.

Paprika is made from the dried pods of sweet peppers, and the best grades are imported from Hungary or Spain. There ought to be a few competing spice dealers to date their products. Then you could avoid paprika that might have reposed for 3 or 3 years in some obscure warehouse.

Use the best paprika you can buy when you make paprikash. Buy a tender 3 1-2 pound young chicken,(rather than a fowl) so that it will cook quickly—since prolonged cooking often destroys the flavor of spices.

Chicken Paprikash. Serves 4.

Have the butcher cut a young 3 1-2 pound chicken (fryer) up for stewing. Wash chicken and remove any pin feathers. Singe lightly.

Place pieces of chicken in a large paper bag and 1-2 cup flour, 1 teaspoon salt and 1-4 teaspoon pepper. Shake bag well. Remove chicken.

Chop 1 cup onion and 1 clove garlic very fine, Melt 1-4 cup fat in a heavy saucepan. Add onions. Simmed slowly until light brown. Remove onions. Brown chicken in same pan. Add more fat when necessary, when chicken is completely browned, remove to pan. Wipe pan dry.

Return chicken and onions to pan. Sprinkle with 2 teaspoons paprika. Add 1 cup stock or chicken broth. Cover with tight lid.

Simmer over a slow flame for 1 hour. Remove pieces of chicken carefully to platter. Skim off fat from gravy. Add 1 cup of sour cream and salt and pepper to taste. Heat but do not boil. Pour gravy unstrained over chicken. Sprinkle with chopped parsley.

Do you want a particular recipe? Are you a cooking problem? Write Mario, care this paper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped, envelope for his reply.—Ed.

Christmas Bazaar and Tea Sponsored by CWL Held In St. Michael's Auditorium

Great activity and colorful surroundings featured the Christmas bazaar and tea held yesterday afternoon in the auditorium of St. Michael's Academy, under the sponsorship of the Catholic Women's League.

Passing along the wide corridor, and up the winding stairway to the auditorium, the eye was caught and held by the panoramic view spread out before: the dark, red velvet draperies which swept across the stage in graceful folds, backgrounding the lighted Christmas trees on either side of a huge basket of bronze and golden colored chrysanthemums, while down below, and directly in front, the lovely tea table, tiers covered and gleaming with all its silver appointments, the centre silver bowl filled with golden colored and bronze mums, and the tri-branched candelabra, with their golden tapers. Around the table, in the form of parcels! silkpet, were the seats for the tea hour guests, and on either side of the auditorium, the various booths with their colorful decorations.

Just inside the door, the odor of spicy Northern spies welcomed the guests to the thronged interior to receive a lucky door prize ticket from Mrs. Robertson, who graciously added her welcome. After receiving your ticket, you next met the treasurer, Mrs. H. Burley who exacted her tribute dues, and from there on, you either sidled or, if you will, shop, or gaze as the fancy struck you.

The first booth was a combination one containing a storm of lovely handkerchiefs, of every design, with lace borders; some with tatted, some embroidered; some all white. Others were white, with blue lace edges, hand crocheted, and more were pink lace edged. Beside the dainty kerchiefs, there were other lovely articles. One especially pretty was a crocheted basket in mauve, with a golden vase, and having a glass container for flowers. A lovely gift for my lady's boudoir, or for the breakfast table. Through the lancets, of the handle, ran a golden colored satin ribbon ending in tiny bows. The convener here was Mrs. Don Beston with her assistants, Mrs. W. Davidson and Mrs. William Grant.

Apron Booth

Next to and adjoining the above booth, was that of the aprons, both were decorated with bands of yellow and loops of soft green. On the wall behind, surrounded by a bevy of aprons, even satin, petticoats and a pot-holder basket trimmed in black on a yellow ground, was a huge pair of scissors, the emblem of the seamstress' art; while down below among the aprons of every size, shape and design, hooped a white Peter Rabbit, still nibbling on the yellow carrot he had filched from Mr. McGregor's well-kept garden. Sitting over beside a beautiful pink lace trimmed basinette, was a brown teddy bear, sticking his tiny red tongue out at the many who stopped to gaze, and remained to purchase. Among the dainty tea aprons, there was also a fine bath mat crocheted with a pink and green raised thread, with a border of pink and green. Towels, and laundry bags were seen among the many different articles for sale. The convenors here were: Mrs. Leo Callaghan, and her co-convener Mrs. V. McIntyre, and their assistants, Mrs. W. Frawley and Mrs. W. Harris.

Fruit Christmas Cake

Following along at the right, the next booth to draw attention was a beautiful white Christmas cake, three-tiered, with snow-white ornamental frosting, having a lovely white rose on each of the four sides, of each tier, and topped with a single rosebud of pure white. Truly, a thing of beauty, too lovely to cut, and going to the holder of the lucky ticket. This was guarded by Mrs. Anton.

Next came a table groaning with all all manner of jams and jellies, canned fruits, and preserves, relishes and pickles. The decorations were of green and white, with a sign in large red letters on the wall behind, stating, 'Jams and Jellies'. This was under the direction of the convener, Mrs. J. Huden and her assistants, Mrs. E. P. Cooper, Mrs. C. Meagher and Mrs. V. Carroll.

Passing across in the far side of the auditorium, one came to a lovely Mexican hacienda with black and white striped awnings, situated in a double-terraced garden complete with garden seat and matching umbrella — the whole surrounded by a white fence, inside of which grew tiny plants of many varieties, tiny cacti, African violets, begonias and ferns; while around the fence were evergreen pines, and trailing Bittersweet, with yellow plumes of pink prairie grass, and here and there the tall Sansevieria. In charge of the garden was the convener, Mrs. Frank Deacon, and her assistants, Mrs. E. O. Hopkins and Mrs. B. Haines.

Filled to Overflowing

The home cooking table was filled to overflowing with every variety of cake, cookie, and pie, as well as tempting salads, among the many netted through the space which opened by one customer passing and another taking the vacated spot, were apple pies, raisin pies, open faced berry pies, through which the rainbows and the luscious juice; cherry pies, taffy tarts, cherry tarts; rich chocolate cakes sprinkled with broken walnut meats; cocoanut cakes with date centres, cocoanut bars; marmor white cakes cherry dotted, and more and more cakes, and tarts which sprang up like mushrooms, only to vanish as quickly. Convening this were: Mrs. M. Kennedy, Mrs. J. Trudeau and Mrs. W. L. Rupert.

At the end of the home cooking table was a fancy table, but holding two tempting cakes, delicacies —two deliciously browned roast chickens, under guard(ianship) of Mrs. J. R. Kelly. These would go to the holder of the lucky ticket.

Across from all these hunger-provoking viands sat a beautiful golden-haired, blue-eyed doll in attractive dress, surrounded by ten one dollar bills, pinned upon her snow-white muslin dress. She wore a matching shawl, with bits satin ribbons. Naturally, the wealthy Miss Money would be much sought after, both for her looks, and for her holdings, as the many little slips of paper denoted. She had two guardians, Mrs. Leo Quinn and Mrs. A. Wilkinson.

Children Happy

Happiness and great expectations beamed from the faces of the school children who thronged the paint-rimmed Fish Pond, where Santa Claus stood upon the parapet watching the fish nibble at the hooks thrust through the red and white hoops to fall behind the scenes. Some caught necklaces 'fish', and others caught rubber balloons, and all were happy. The fish inspectors who had charge of which were: Mrs. J. Gallagher; Mrs. W. Graham, Mrs. F. Sweet, Mrs. J. McHugh, and Mrs. A. Kabes. Not content with the fish pond, Santa had a special chimney into which little slips of paper were deposited with the longing desire to procure the tiny, white wool dressed doll who would become the treasured toy of some wee maiden.

A beautiful Kenwood blanket, with satin binding, was awaiting the winner of the lucky ticket, and watched over by Mrs. J. O'Connor.

Around the corner, decorated in Chinese red, was the candy booth, with its boxes of delicious candy creams, chocolate taffy, divinity fudge; maple cream, and many other toothsome titbits. Mrs. C. Young; Mrs. T. Morell, Mrs. M. J. Boyd, and Mrs. E. Lally were kept busy here, wrapping and tying.

The last booth was that of the fancy work and knitting, and convened by Mrs. C. Boyd; Mrs. W. Allore, and Mrs. T. Harvey. Here, amid its pretty decorations of pale blue, pink, and white, were dainty hand-crocheted dollies, baby clothes in pink and blue; soft little nightgowns; lovely knitting bags; some with wooden handles, others in grey felt with appliqued morning glory flowers in shades of mauve with green leaves and vines; little booties; little sacques; dustcloths with mitt attched; dainty guest towels, in shades of pink and blue; and, sitting side by side, all in a row, were three tiny doll bassinettes, one green, one pink and one yellow, all sweetly made, and containing the doll sleeper.

Convenors of Tea Room

Those who convened the tea room were: Mrs. J. Boyle, Mrs. R. Flynn; Mrs. E. Logan. Presiding from three till four: Mrs. J. Fitzgerald and Mrs. J. McAuley. From four till five, Mrs. H Barrett, and Miss M. McAvoy. From five till six, Mrs. W Blair, and Mrs. F. Fitzpatrick; and from six till seven, Mrs. G. Lee and Mrs. F. Domenico.

Those who replenished the tea tables were: Mrs. F. Cushing, and Miss E. Dolan; Mrs. L. Howe; Mrs. W. LaPorte. Making the tea, Mrs. R. B. McDougal. Inviting to the tea room party, Mrs. Cowan; while Mrs. C. Murdock; Mrs. J. Lacy; Mrs. J. McGarvey, Mrs. R. Rose; Mrs. J. R. Rashotte; Mrs. T. Dolan; Mrs. W. J. Doyle; Mrs. D. Casey and Miss M. McLellan served the dainty refreshments.

The winners of the lucky tickets were: Of the hamper of Northern Spies, Mrs. J. V. Boyle, Bleecker Ave; of the white Christmas cake, Mr. J. R. Fee, 113 Haddon St., Hamilton; of the golden-haired little rich girl, Mrs. A. M. Davis, 184 Dufferin; of the lovely Kenwood blanket, Mrs. J. Gallagher, 283 Charles; the baby doll, Miss Therese Anton, 176 Dufferin Avenue; crocheted chesterfield set, Mrs. J. Morrison, 49 Geddes St.; she big Santa Claus, Miss Linda Rose, R. R. 2, Moira; the pink and sinette, Miss Mary McLellan, 198 Victoria Avenue; and the pair of roast chickens to Mrs. M. Brunner, Blecker Ave. and Mrs. Craig, R.R. 2No. 8, Belleville.

A splendid banner, and delightful tea, painstakingly executed, with expectations fully realized.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECHMAN

Her Boyfriend Has Charming Habit of "Thank You"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

The circumstance: a woman sitting in front of me in the movies, wearing a hat with a lot of bows on it, turns to me and asks if her hat is in my way. I say, "Yes it is." She removes her hat. Should I have said "Thank you"? I didn't because it never occurred to me that this was necessary, But my boyfriend, with whom I was, said afterward that I should have thanked her. Who is right?

Shirley M.

I agree with your boyfriend. The woman in front of you courteously considered your comfort a not too frequent circumstance today in the movies and it would have been courteous of you to thank her for her courtesy. Apparently your boyfriend is a person whose charming incidental it is to say "Thank you" for even the slightest courtesy. That's good! On the other hand, your expression "it never occurred to me that a "Thank you' was necessary" betrays I think, the fact that you haven't this spontaneous inclination to express your thanks. Expressing thanks often isn't as necessary as it is pleasant!

Green's Parents Should Gallantly Cooperate About Wedding Attire

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Our son is being married in the near future which is distance from here in another state. It is to be a formal afternoon wedding. We are an average family, having an average income. The girl's family have considerably more income than we have. My husband refuses to wear formal clothes. What do you think about our wearing street clothes to the wedding, or should we stay at home unless we dress in formal clothes?

M.J.C.

You and your husband MUST go to this wedding, such an important milestone in the lives of and in your son's life. And since you and your husband have an income that are able to say that is "average", I urge you to do everything possible to persuade your husband to coperate in doing what you and he should do wearing what he and you should wear, to make your son proud of you both, very proud of you both in this day of days. Don't be remiss about you obligation to your son don't look back on the weak and silly excuses that his flancee's family have more income than you have. (I'll wager that they aren't any more attractive and lovable than you and your husband are, when you make the effort to be!) So my advice is: first get in touch with your son, ask his advice, his guidance as to how you both should dress, or if he isn't sure, ask him to ask his fiancee or her mother to advise him or you. If the bride's mother is to wear a long dress, you should wear a long dress a very simple one is proper, in your most becoming color, not too light colors, or, if you would feel more comfortable wear simple dress and match bolero or short jacket; a harmonizing hat and other accessories to coresare sent you by your son. If the bride's father is to wear formal day-time attire, your husband should too, or at least (instead of a cutaway coat) an Oxford jacket, practically the same as the jacket of his business suit, and just as easy and comfortable to wear, and striped trousers, just as comfortable to wear (persuade him!) as the trousers of his business suit, and even if they do have some dark, conservative stripes woven in them, those stripes are really harmless! And another note: it is possible for him to rent his formal attire, every detail of it.

Broadcloth And Mink

Navy bliss with fur trim

By VERA WINSTON

THIS YEAR'S crop of winter coats is particularly good, with something worthwhile available for almost every taste and price level. Mutation mink and navy broadcloth combines for a really handsome town coat. The fur collar is on the front of the bolero which ends at the side seams to emphasize the bloused back, a detail that marks many of the newest coats. The straight skirt is relieved in front by a few gathers at either side of the waist.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A Second Husband Proves a Bad Stepfather

If a man is not a good father to his stepchildren, is it wise for the woman who has married him to give him a child of his own?

"My first husband deserted me and our two children," she tells me. "The children were small, so when I met an older man who was nice to them, I thought he would take their father's place.

"After I married, though, he began to act altogether different. He calls me and the children vile names, doesn't want them to even play in the yard because he says it ruins the yard. He just doesn't want to be bothered with any problems that concerns me and my children. I can't even hold a conversation with him, as he says he doesn't want to talk. Yet he insists he wants me to have a child.

"I think if I were to have a child he wouldn't consider me my own children around. Since we can't seem to get along now, I think a child would only complicate things more. When I first married him, I did think I should have a child in all fairness to him, but I think the way he has acted towards his stepchildren puts a different light on the subject. Do you agree with this?"

I don't see how this women could find things in any other light. A man who had real fatherly feelings would love and take responsibility for his wife's children just as though they were his own. If he has failed there, his wife's distrust of what might happen if another child came into the picture seems fully justified.

It's hardly likely that if he is indifferent and harsh towards her children now he would change and treat them any better when he had a child of his own. On the contrary, there is a very definite possibility that he might be even more antagonistic towards his stepchildren if, as might happen, he were to take the attitude that his child should have the best of everything.

My advice to this woman would be to do a little plain talking to her husband. This may not be easy, since she says she "can't even hold a decent conversation with him." But even so, I think she will have to see she gets her point of view across to him.

I would advise her to tell him that she would like to give him a child, and would be perfectly willing to do so, if she saw any indication that it would bring peace and harmony into their home. She would say frankly that since he seems to have no interest whatever in her own children, she has no desire to have a third child might not make matters worse, and that she would like to see a change in his attitude before she increased the family.

Of course there is the chance—and not a remote one, that he will say all this to him frankly will make him more disagreeable than before. But I think she might better take that chance than let the situation drag along as it is. The showdown will have to come sooner or later, and it might as well be now.

Fashion Flashes

RICH trimming and detail marks some of the new gloves from France designed for evening wear. Pale pink glace kid is used for a six-button glove with a delicate tracery of black lace rosebuds accented with tiny jet beads.

Popular with the young-crowd when done up in party clothes, is the music-roll bag. Fashioned of brocade, with gold cord outlining each end and forming the handles, and closed with a metal clasp in a musical clef design, this bag is a huge favorite.

A NICE PRESENT for a model or a girl who has ideas in that direction is a watch set in a fluted gold hotbox, topped by the regulation lid, for safety's sake. Worn as a fob or suspended from a link bracelet, it is a pretty gadget.

HATS with lots of glitter are seen at the theatre just now. A cap with a side tab that tapers to a point at top is solidly beaded in royal blue sequins, pale blue pearls and gilt beads, with touches of crystal beading.

Exquisite are the bags readied for the gilt season. Solid pearl beading with a design scattered all to the centre makes one side of a book-shaped black satin box that is lined in rich brocade.

WE WONDER if it was just a "conversation piece"—this rhinestone studded swim suit that highlighted a recent sportswear showing on the West Coast. Anyway, rhinestones are scattered all over an elasticized rayon satin swim suia, and there's similar trimming on the column-sheathed terry cloth bolero, designed to go with the suit.

Foolmen Practicing To Dance With Queen

London—(CP)—In their off-duty hours the King's servants are preparing for the biggest dancing events of the year—the annual ball at Buckingham Palace Castle held in the week before Christmas.

The King has given permission for the palace ball to be held in the state apartments and he hopes to attend. Last year illness kept him away.

Queen Elizabeth and Princess Margaret are certain to attend as they have done for the past, and will dance with male members of their staff.

Special classes in Scottish and old English country dances, which Queen Mary has been being given in the servants' hall, so that butlers, footmen and pages may partner her with confidence.

Each servant is allowed to bring one guest. A West End dance band and an "old-time" orchestra are being engaged. Whisky, beer and soft drinks will be served at the buffet, and there will be venison pies made to a recipe of Queen Victoria's from venison shot by the King.

Arrangements for both dances are in the hands of a small committee headed by Sir Piers Legh, master of the King's household.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMIESON

Complexion Must Not be Scenic

If a woman uses the lipstick correctly and lays on the synthetic blush with intelligence and restraint she looks younger and feels younger, no doubt about it. If she applies complexion batik in wholesale lots she not only looks older, but she appears brittle and a bit cheap. No sense in abusing our pulchritude privileges. Unless make-up adds freshness, makes the countenance just a bit more vivid, better throw it out of the window. Or, better still, find out the right technique.

With Beauty Reinforcements She is Herself Again

Make-up is as old as the hills. Before cosmetics were made—the long-ago cuties looked at themselves in the shining shields of their warrior relatives—women were going in for facial improvements in the way of color additions. The beauties of Cathay tinted themselves from forehead to toes with blue clay, a beauty whimsy of that period. Don't ask us why. We aren't there and we don't know. Prettier of the Ming period burned willow twigs, used them as we use eyebrow cryons. Maybe when Eve saw her reflection in a pool she decided to improve upon nature. It is born in us.

When a woman gets up in the morning, is convinced that she looks like the ruin of an old city hall, she frisks the rouge compact over her cheeks, plays with the lip pencil, decides that there is life in the old gal yet and beats it to the kitchen to start breakfast. With beauty reinforcements she is herself again.

If, sometimes, you have doubts about the manner in which you make yourself a new face, go to a first class beautytorium and have a facial. An experienced operator will give you good advice. She will trot out the right shades of powder, the flattering lipstick, the counterfeit blush that matches, and she will show you how to use them. There are little tricks that combine to produce a glamorous effect.

Your lipstick should not be blunt, but have a flattering point so that the outline of the application can be traced. Start in the centre of the lip, which should be stretched in a wide grin so the pigment will sink into the little creases. A lipstick brush makes a finishing touch. Tint the inner surfaces slightly, but not so much that the rosy glow touch the teeth.

Don't try to remodel the shape of your lips. In these times when the capable woman is ace high, the slazy-looking Cupid's bow is not in favor.

When tinting the cheeks, place the colorful stuff on the cheek bones. Pass the pad over the eyelids and on the temples. You'll be pleased with yourself when you do that.

Cheese Has Many Uses

By KAY REX

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Nov. 25—(CP)—For the cook who would please—the answer is cheese.

As a main dish or even for dessert this tasty product is lodged tops by many housewives and it can be used in a variety of ways.

Eggs and cheese both are mentioned in Canada's food rules, so what could be more healthful than a cheese souffle?

Ingredients: four tablespoons butter (or margarine); four tablespoons flour; two cups milk; two cups grated cheese; one-half teaspoon salt; one-eighth teaspoon mustard; one-eighth teaspoon paprika; one-eighth teaspoon soda; three eggs.

Melt fat in pan and add flour while stirring. When smooth add milk, salt, mustard and soda. When thickened add grated cheese and stir until smooth. Pour into large greased casserole. Place in pan of hot water and bake in oven 375 degrees Fahrenheit from 45 to 50 minutes, until firm. Serves six.

Cheese may also be used to add new flavor to potatoes.

Ingredients: One quart potatoes (cut in half), one cup milk, two cups white sauce; one-half pound mild cheese; one-half teaspoon salt.

Cok potatoes and onions, finely chopped, in boiling salted water to cover for five minutes. Add pimentos cut in small pieces and cook seven minutes longer. Turn into a greased baking-dish and pour over white sauce mixed with cheese and salt. Bake in a moderate oven until potatoes are cooked.

Finally, the Junior Chamber of Commerce in its Canadian recipe booklet, "3,000 Miles of Good Food," has a recipe for Baked Macaroni and Cheese.

Ingredients: One-half of an eight-ounce package of macaroni; one quarter cup butter or margarine; one tablespoon chopped onion; four tablespoons flour; one-quarter teaspoon dry mustard; one-half teaspoon salt; one-eighth teaspoon pepper; two cups milk; one cup grated nippy cheese bacon,

Cook macaroni until tender in boiling water. Drain. In the meantime make sauce as follows: melt butter or margarine in top part of double boiler over direct heat, add onion and cook slowly for about five minutes until tender, but not browned. Add flour, mustard, salt and pepper, and blend. Place over boiling water. Add milk gradually, stirring constantly, until thick and smooth. Add grated cheese and stir until melted. Combine sauce and macaroni and pour into greased casserole dish (1 1-2 to two-quarts). Bake in oven (400 degrees Fahrenheit) for 20 minutes or until brown. Top with strips of cooked side bacon. Yield: four to six servings.

Says Sex Lectures Can Harm Students

Bristol, England—(CP)—Sex lectures to classes in senior schools "often do more harm than good," said Prof. R. H. Parry, director of the department of preventive medicine and public health at Bristol University.

"Training in biology in schools should supply sufficient knowledge to a child that, with a little further instruction—preferably from the parent—he can understand his own personal problem."

IT'S SAFE TO HIT

Tilford, Surrey, England—(CP)—The local cricket club has insured all its players. The insurance, for £1,000 ($3,100), is against injuring spectators when hitting "sixes."

Martin's Summer

By Vicki Baum

"I know him well, of course. He often came to the little cafe near the technical institute. I used to play billiards with him. And so I told him all about it, and that's how he came to take the matter in hand. A friend of mine, Hopfner of the Austria S. and R. Club, introduced me to him.

Herr Lyssenhop could hardly believe his ears. "Has this agent a proper office?" he asked weakly.

"Yes—that is, not for the moment. He's so often traveling. He is very enterprising. He went to America and——"

Herr Lyssenhop's eyes were bloodshot. "What's his name!" he asked in a weak voice.

"Meyer," answered Martin.

No sooner had this sleek and ubiquitous surname been uttered by Martin than Herr Lyssenhop exploded. He flinched so dark a red that it was painful to see him. He seemed to dilate. He coughed and struggled for breath. "Sir," he shouted, "sir, are you a congenital idiot? Do you mean—do you dare to offer me a full-blown film at a son-in-law! He makes an invention! He has a trump card in his hand! And then he goes to a swindler, an impostor, a Herr Meyer whom he picks up in a cafe, and gives the whole show away? What were you thinging of, sir? How long have you been waiting to hear from your Herr Meyer? So he is in America, is he? And he doesn't write, I dare say. And he hasn't an office. And do you suppose for one moment that this—this Herr Meyer will ever turn up again with your nonflammable film? That's enough, May. I have had enough of the man. There is no object in getting exasperated over his idiocy. That's enough. . . ."

Martin, who was not acquainted with Herr Lyssenhop's apoplectic disposition, felt that he was confronted by an earthquake, a volcanic eruption, or a cosmic catastrophe. May, who was more interested to such outbreaks, said gentler: "But, Papa, Martin——"

"No, I'll not listen." Tat raged. "I will not listen. I have heard enough. A swindling instruction. That's all very well. No money, torn shoes, penniless, and out of a job—very well. Anything may happen. He might get on. It is not hopeless. But, May stupidity is hopeless. Stupidity is absolutely done for yourself, Herr Heil, with your Meyer. For me that's final. A penniless man might have my daughter if there were nothing else for it. But an idiot—never. Ring for Eggenhofer to take this trunk. Not another word. You'll hold your tongue, May, if you please . . . .

"May held her tongue. She knew her father. But Martin, who was wounded to the quick, not by the rudeness to himself but by the tone in which May had been spoken to, could not hold his tongue.

"Herr Lyssenhop," he said, "you're in a bad humor. You have every reason to be. You have been taken in by a swindler merely because he came the court over you, and so now you're in a temper with everybody and trust nobody. I am not a man of the world and I am not a business man. But I have my wits about me even though you take me for an idiot. As soon as I set eyes on the count I said: 'That man's a traitor.' I said it to Anluschka straight off. And I say of Meyer—He's an honest man. We shall see who's right."

"We shall see nothing of the kind," shouted Herr Lyssenhop, roused to the highest pitch of excitement and touched in a tender spot by the mention of Anluschka. "We shall see nothing at all. I wish to hear no more of you. I forbid you, do you hear me, to have anything more to do with him. Call me what you like the day you see Herr Meyer again. You can have May and my whole business if he ever shows himself again with your film. Enough. Eggenhofer, take this trunk down. Hold your tongue, May. Not a word. There have been nothing but vexations in this cursed Fraunsee, and this is the last one. Is it raining still? Of course—"

These were the last words Martin heard Herr Lyssenhop say. The rest came in only a confused rumble from the stairs. Herr Lyssenhop, with one arm in his motoring coat, had grasped May with the other and pushed her through the door. A little cigar smoke was all that remained in the hotel bedroom and a crumpled newspaper on which were figures and formulas. Martin smoothed it out and absent-mindedly put it in his pocket.

He could not think much as he went down the stairs in the wake of Tat's echoing storm of anger.

As he went in his confused state round the dark corner near the reading room, two arms in leather sleeves were flung around him and eager trembling lips were pressed against his clenched teeth.

"Carla," he said, weak and alarmed.

NEW "STRONG MAN" IN CHINA FORCES

Regarded as China's new "strong man" is Gen. Pai Chung-Hsi. A skilled technician, to whom the Communists have given the title of "White Tiger," Gen. Pai is an old friend of Li Tsung-Jen, China's acting president and commands a large force. — Central Press Canadian.

"No, May—" was the answer as she tore herself away. Immediately after the door outside went quickly off. Martin reaching the entrance in a few steps, found nothing but a smell of gasoline fume.

After Lyssenhops left, Martin passed vacant days, days suspended over a void in a way that made him feel quite ill. There was nothing to look to. Nothing to carry him along, nothing to rest upon. Martin was like a child racing after a balloon that had escaped from his hands. He started in dismay at a world where such things could happen. It was an altogether hateful and unsatisfactory world since May had been snatched away from it. Fraunsee was a horror, a desert. An evening stroll to the Zirkin in memory of past occasions came to no good. It ended in an unmanly torrent of tears against which he clenched his teeth in vain.

All the same, life went on. He continued to train, in spite of being disqualified. In fact, just because he was. He wished to establish a record for his own private satisfaction, from nerve obstinacy and in revenge and self-vindication. And he had to eat. And there was a letter from Herr Meyer to wait for—Such was Martin Heil's daily round after May left. She was no doubt very competent at English commercial correspondence, but she seemed to have little aptitude for love-letters. How was this and ruthlessly self-contained outdoor girl in write love-letters? She actually sent him picture post cards. Sometimes, too, a few lines in a thin gray envelope. "I think of you," wrote May. "Lots of love." Or—"Pity you're not with us. A kiss from your May." In one letter she said. "We will both come here next summer, if it is perfectly lovely. Always your own."

Martin put these letters and postcards in his drawer near the medal of real silver. From this same drawer he withdrew his now preposterous savings — the hard-won seven shillings—and took his shoes to be soled. For three days he had to go about in old gymnasium shoes which was the more galling as during these days it rained without stopping. On the fourth day he went in his mended shoes to Schwoishachek's restaurant and spent what was left on a good meal.

Author Got Nothing For "Madeleine"

London — (CP) — R. C. H. Rowland, 60-year-old movie theatre manager, never made a penny out of his song "Madeleine" from Armentieres," sung by Canadian, British and Allied soldiers in two world wars.

"That is because I foolishly did not copyright the song," Rowlands said. "I knocked it off on the spur of the moment to sing to troops in 1915 and it became one of the biggest song hits of all time.

"I wrote only eight verses. Since then about 150 have been added."

Renew Attack

With the defence estimates out of the way, members turned to a quiet discussion on estimates of the secretary of State Department.

At an active morning sitting opposition members renewed their attacks against the government's handling of the report on an alleged price-fixing combine in the flour milling industry. Angus MacInnis (CCF-Vancouver East) urged that Justice minister Garson resign from the cabinet because of his "failure" to table the report until 19 months after it first reached his office.

The debate, to be resumed today, was on a bill aimed at plugging loop-holes in Canada's anti-combines legislation.

On the defence estimates, Mr. Drew said the Commons had been given costs of various defence items. The strength of the three services and percentages of training. These were of little use unless members knew the equipment of the forces and their effectiveness.

Under the procedure followed in the Commons it would take possibly three months to get the information it should have.

During his request for details about the forces, some members interjected: "Russia."

Only Fooling People Claim

Mr. Drew said he had heard a remark about Russia and he assumed it meant that Russia would like information about Canada's armed forces.

"I say the time has come to realize the only people we are fooling are the people of Canada unless we get details about our armed forces."

At one point, he asked Mr. Claxton what the weapon status of an infantry battalion on active service is.

The minister replied that the information would not be given at this time. He was prepared to answer any reasonable question but wasn't going to be put through a long interrogation on the arms manual.

Mr. Drew said refusal to give the information to the weapon status of an infantry battalion was evasion which increased the need for a standing committee on defence.

The Progressive Conservative party would vote for the defence estimates because the sentiments are already made for this year. But next year his party would insist on a committee.

Mr. Claxton told Gordon Higgins (PC-Victoria East) that the government plans to take over the majority of the 32 British Admiralty properties in St. John's Nfld., and plans to recruit three army reserve units on the island.

T. L. Church (PC-Toronto Broadview) said Canada should lead the way to establishment of a Pacific pact along the lines of the North Atlantic Security treaty.

SEES STORM BREWING

Johannesburg — (CP) — A South African government official sees trouble in the future when a labor bureau plan for supplying native domestic servants goes into effect. He said the bureau would have no time to consider the foibles of housewives and added: "Knowing how fussy most women are, I can imagine the trouble in store for department officials."

Among numerous other accidents a panel truck smashed into a Toronto streetcar with injuries to the truck driver, B. J. Halborsen. Three passengers on a Danforth Coach Company motorbus were injured when it skidded into collision with a street car in Toronto's East end.

The snowfall was measured at five inches early today at the weather bureau at Malton, on the outskirts of Toronto. This figure applied generally to southern and eastern Ontario, with the snowstorm having moved eastward into Quebec. Occasional snowflurries were forecast for Ontario.

The temperature forecast was for a range of between 25 and 30 degrees over most districts, but it was much colder in the north. A minimum of 15 below zero was estimated for Moosonee on James Bay, and a low of 20 below zero at the famed cold spot of White River.

All Forces at Work

The Ontario Highways Department had all its forces at work in an effort to keep roads clear. The storm belt extended as far north as North Bay and driving conditions were described as very dangerous.

In the Kingston area snow fell until late in the evening, later turning to ice on the roads, and similar conditions prevailed around Guelph, Goderich and Listowel. Windsor had its heaviest snowfall of the season, turning to rain and sleet. Members of the Elgin County Council meeting at St. Thomas were forced to remain in the city overnight due to highway conditions.

Four out of five long-distance telephone lines between Sarnia and London were put out of commission by heavy snow last night.

In Eastern Ontario, the Lindsay-Peterborough district reported up to five inches of snow and Brockville got it some time later. Highways there were fairly clear but icy in spots.

Sewers Modern "Human Rats" Go

Montreal — (CP) — The day of the "human sewer rat" is over as far as Montreal sewers are concerned.

City authorities have decided that in future the disagreeable type of work which caused sewer maintenance men to give themselves that unsavory title is to be done with machinery.

Heretofore, a special gang of men, picked for their small stature, was retained for working in smaller sewers. They often had to work on little "flat cars" which rolled through the sewer, scraping the sludge before them.

Now the city has tried out a type of machinery which does the job mechanically, and workers will stay in the fresh air to operate the machine.

B. C. Exporters Hope to Obtain Major Share

Vancouver, Nov. 25 — (CP)— The Vancouver Sun said Thursday that a big United Kingdom lumber order is in sight for British Columbia.

The British timber control is asking for tenders on 100,000,000 or more board feet of lumber to be purchased with Marshall Plan funds. B. C.'exporters hope to get the major share.

Purchases will be on a competitive basis, and the contract, to run from January to March, will be worth more than $7,500,000.

B. C. lumbermen, however, will have to compete with Washington and Oregon for the business.

The Sun said the return of Britain to the B. C. market will mean a major boost to the province's economy, assuring jobs for thousands of workers.

It may also mean, said the Sun, a firming of local lumber prices. B. C. prices are expected to be lower than those in Washington and Oregon.

45-Year-Old Song International Hit

London—(CP)—From earning £100 ($310) a week as a music hall star, Bill Whitlock came down to £3 a week night watchman.

Now, at 75, his fortunes have changed. A song he wrote 45 years ago, the "Scotch Hop," has become a hit on both sides of the Atlantic as the "Hop Scotch Polka."

"I expect to make at least £3,000 out of it," grey-haired Whitlock said. "Already I have a fairly large sum in advance royalties.

"I'm staying on in the same house, but my landlady is giving me two rooms and a piano for £3 a week. I don't want to move. She was more than kind to me while times were hard.

"What tickles me is that it should have taken 45 years to discover my song."

Scottish Bank Notes Almost War Casualty

Edinburgh — (CP) — Scots are proud of their distinctive bank notes, but fighting the war they almost lost them in favor of a common note based on the Bank of England.

Thomas Johnston, wartime secretary of state for Scotland, said in an address here that considerable pressure for the change developed in London.

"What happened during that struggle will possibly be told many years after this, but I can say that we won the victory and the Scottish bank note remained."

$600,000 IN GIFTS

Montreal (CP)— More than $600,000 worth of food and clothing was sent last year to about 100,000 needy families in the United Kingdom through the United Emergency Fund for Britain, it was announced here. About 250,000 Canadian and United States citizens made use of the fund's facilities by donations.

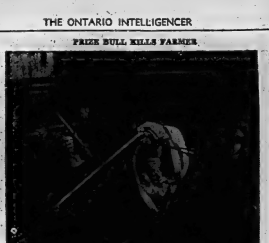
PRIZE BULL KILLS FARMER



Prize bull of Leo W. Thibodeau of Malton, Ont., was led away by farm hands after he had gored Thibodeau to death. Owner of one of the largest dairy herds in the district, Thibodeau is believed to have entered the animal's pen to feed it. He was found dead in the pen by his son, Paul, 17, went to fill a pail of water. When Paul returned, his father was being trampled and gored by the bull. With a pitchfork Paul drove the animal away, dragged his father out of the barn. His wounds were so severe, Thibodeau did not survive the trip to the hospital. — Central Press Canadian.

Great Britain Will Challenge For Davis Cup

By MICHAEL O'MARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Wimbledon, Surrey, England, Nov. 25—(CP)—Britain's lawn tennis association has announced: "Great Britain will, as usual, challenge for the Davis Cup and the Wightman Cup next year."

Many a centre court cynic might ask: "Why?"

This year's record would bear out the cynic. In the Wightman cup, United States women were unbeaten at Forest Hills, N. Y., for their 13th consecutive victory. Britain was eliminated from the second round of the Davis cup by Czechoslovakia.

Nevertheless, Britain, mediocre but not disheartened, continues to build for the future. In 1949, 1,163 pupils attended courses under the training of school coaches and youth leaders.

Demedlasi International prospects remain bleak. A. J. Mottram, the only Englishman with any pretensions to court class since the war, has been the mainstay of a shaky Davis cup team for three years; but, at 30, his game is past its peak.

Geoff Paish, two year younger, had a good season in 1949 but never seems likely to be a world beater.

Three promising youngsters are on the way up—John Horn, W. D. Rowe and W. T. Hough. All appear at least a couple of years away from the big time.

Cup Appears

A similar gap appears in British women's tennis between the best international—class players and the better juniors. Maybe it's unrevolutionary, but it's also true, that one of the top-notchers aren't as young as they'd like to be.

Mrs. Betty Hilton, now nearing the end of her career, had a grand 1949 campaign, reaching the semi-final of the United States, British and championships and the final of the Pan-American tournament at Mexico City. Jean Currey, also nearing the end of the road, holds two British national titles, the hard courts and the covered courts, and distinguished herself by beating Wimbledon winner Louise Brough of the United States in the French championships. Her game may stay in form for a year or two but its hardly likely to improve.

Two players of consistent promise, which rarely materializes into victory in a clutch, are Joy Gannon (now Mrs. Mottram) and Jean Quertier. If they ever show their true form consistently, it had better be in 1950, or Britain is in for another beating.

Front-Line Service Is Soldier's Pride

London — (CP) — A soldier's proudest claim is that he fought in the front lines, says Viscount Alexander in a foreword he has written for a history of the Irish Guards.

The book, by Major Desmond Fitzgerald, tells the story of the regiment in the Second World War.

The Governor - General of Canada has this word for the combat soldier: "When it comes to this business of fighting, the proudest claim a man can make is that he is a front-line soldier. "I am glad that in my earlier days my front-line service was with the Irish Guards."

DRILLS GO DEEPER

Negro Stowaways British Problem

London — (CP) — Britain is negotiating with colonial countries on ways of dealing with West Indians and West Africans who stow away on ships bound for Britain, Colonial Secretary Creech Jones told the House of Commons.

The announcement followed reports from Liverpool that hundreds of Negroes are living there on national assistance. Almost all of them reached Britain as stowaways.

One 28-year-old man from West Africa was said to have lived in Britain nearly two years, and to have worked only three weeks.

Evidence about the number of stowaways was given during the man's trial on charges of wounding another Negro with a knife. He was sentenced to one year in jail.

A police inspector told the court that a single man can get 26s ($3.90) a week in national assistance, plus an extra lodging allowance of 8s.

The inspector said stowaways cannot be sent back where they came "because they are British citizens."

"I am very concerned about this situation," commented Mr. Justice R. Sellers. "It is little enough for a man to live on, but when they stow away to this country we have to keep them."

STATE OWNERSHIP OF STEEL, IRON INDUSTRY LAW

Labor Will Have to Win Next Election to Take Over Key Plants

London, Nov. 25. (AP)—State ownership of Britain's huge steel and iron industry became law Thursday, but the Labor Government will have to win the next general election to take over the key plants in the country's economic structure.

The House of Lords put its seal to the disputed bill and the King signed it a few minutes later.

Thus the government of Prime Minister Attlee fulfilled the last of the campaign promises it made in the 1945 elections. But through a compromise with the strongly Conservative House of Lords the government cannot take over the industry until long after next year's general elections. The take-over date is Jan. 1, 1951, and the elections must come not later than next July.

Steel nationalization promises to be a major issue when the elections come at the end of Labor's five-year term.

Winston Churchill, Conservative party leader, had declared that the elections, among other things, will be a virtual "referendum" on the steel nationalization issue.

Promises Repeal

Churchill has promised to repeal the bill if his Conservatives win.

The Lords have blocked passage until now, even though the Labor majority in the House of Commons passed it. The Lords said it should be left open as an issue in the next elections.

The Labor Party compromised with the Lords, setting back the take-over date from May 1, 1950 which they had originally demanded in exchange for passage of the bill.

By formally cutting to one year the delaying powers of the Lords on Commons-approved legislation the Labor government could have overridden their objection to the state ownership bill. But the government maintained it would have been physically impossible to take over the industry technically by May 1, anyway, so it was willing to accept the delay and make the bill an election issue.

Belleville electric power consumers have not suffered a cut-off of current so far this year but the dark out periods may start again if everyone concerned does not cooperate to save hereafter every possible kilowatt hour.

This was the warning issued by Ontario Hydro Electric Regional Manager E. G. Gurnett yesterday appealing to the public to conserve electric power more so than ever before.

While the rainfall here in the last few weeks was appreciable he said conditions at the Ottawa Valley system are far from being favorable indicating that further drastic stoppages in electric output by industry and the home holder will have to be authorized, the greatest shortage in the Gatineau storage basin, where the majority of power supplied to this district originates, was 11 per cent higher than last year but still considerably below normal. Drainage into the basin at present has the conservation engineers worried and future possibilities are less encouraging than in 1946-49 season. The Ontario Power Commission as a consequence notified the Ontario Commission the early part of this week that they would not be able to meet their contracts. Undoubtedly the Ontario consumer will have to suffer likewise.

Shortage Critical

"While the shortage is very critical," he stated we still have the hydro to keep the present operation of the citizens we may be able to carry on without the necessity of imposing restrictions more than are already in effect".

Hydro Industry Conservation with the commission does not contain the interruption clause, has been the severest hit to date and one of the biggest losers is the Aluminum Plant of Canada plant at Kingston. "Sad part of the industrial cut-offs, said Mr. Gurnett "is that the employee suffers along with the employer and the condition is therefore a very serious one."

The interruptions with their cumulative effect can be blamed chiefly on the office workers who persists in burning house heaters and unnecessary appliances, the spokesman added.

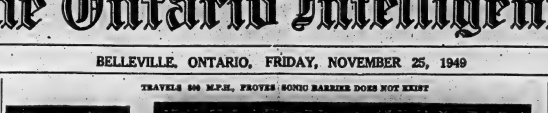
The Hydro Manager closed his interview regarding the warning to save every kilowatt hour possible.

MESSAGE OF THANKS

Ottawa, Nov. 25 (CP)—Defence Secretary Louis Johnson of the United States has sent a message of thanks, "warm and appreciation" for the part played by Canadian forces in the search rescue of 18 airmen down in the Atlantic off Bermuda. The message was read in the Commons Thursday night by Defence Minister Claxton. The men were picked up by the Canadian destroyer Haida.

FIRST WAR PENSIONS

The provisions made for pensioners in the United States was in 1776, when Congress promised invalid pensions to veterans disabled in the War of Independence.



The U.S. Navy's "Skyrocket" leaves a flaming trail as it roars off on one of its test flights in which it travelled in the neighborhood of 800 miles an hour. Test Pilot Eugene F. May, left, who took the ship up for tests said "in a properly designed airplane like the Skyrocket, there is no sonic barrier." Navy disclosed that the Skyrocket has repeatedly exceeded the speed of sound (760 miles per hour) in over 100 test flights. The ship is needle-nosed in shape, resembling a swordfish. It has sharply swept-back stubby wings halfway back on the fuselage and a combined jet and rocket propulsion. It is 45 feet long and 25 feet wide, weighing seven and a half tons loaded. — Central Press Canadian.

CLAXTON STATES NO RECORD OF ANY SECURITY BREACH

Private Companies Handle Bulk of Work

Ottawa, Nov. 25. (CP)—Defence Minister Claxton told the Commons Thursday there is no record of any breach in security involved in production of secret films for the Defence Department.

This included the government-owned National Film Board and two private companies associated Screen News of Montreal and Crawley Films of Ottawa. The two private companies have handled the bulk of secret defence work.

Mr. Claxton was replying during consideration of defence estimates to questions asked by LL-Col. D. S. Harkness (PC-Calgary East) regarding the fact that the Defence Department was withholding secret work from the film board while it was being screened by the R.C.M.P.

Lt.-Col. Harkness read from an editorial which had appeared in the Ottawa Journal which said:

"The decision of the National Defence Board to withdraw from turning over secret work to the film board came after its discovery that a secret film made for it by the film board actually had been made, or made in part, by people about whom the R.C.M.P. had already turned in 'information.'"

Asked whether this statement was true, Mr. Claxton said:

"My opinion is that that is not a correct statement of the case as far as the information of the Department of National Defence is concerned.

No Record of Leak

"I should add that, in connection with the processing and preparation of films, there is no record anywhere of any leak or of any breach of security."

Lt.-Col. Harkness referred to the apparent disagreement between Mr. Claxton and Prime Minister St. Laurent about whether the employees of the private companies handling secret work had been screened.

Mr. Claxton said today that five employees of Associated Screen News and 14 employees of Crawley films had been investigated by the mounties at request of the Defence Department.

This screening had taken place during 1948 and 1949. Each of the 18 persons was individually investigated and cleared for handling the secret work.

The idea of this was to clear the film board for doing secret work.

"In addition to the 200 persons in the production department of the National Film Board who are to be screened first, the whole board is to be screened."

Suggest Laxity

Clare Gillis (CCF-Cape Breton South) said the ministry explanations as to why secret work was being withheld from the film board are "far from satisfactory."

He said it was unfortunate that the Prime Minister and the other ministers had to get their information from the financial post or any other newspaper. It was a quotation from the post, a Toronto weekly, that set off the film board debate a week ago.

The fact that the information had appeared in the press before the minister knew about it" led him to believe that there must be a leak in the film board or in the defence department.

Mr. Gillis suggested there had been "laxity" in administration of the board. He urged that the film board employees be hired through the civil service and that the screening be done when they are joining the board.

The board should be given a clean bill of health as soon as possible. If that could not be done, if the board could not be trusted it should be closed up and done away with.

Mr. Claxton said he wished to make it clear that all branches of the board will be screened starting with the production branch.

As to suggestions that he did not know about the screening of the film board before last week, he said he was aware of it last May when the screening started.

City of Peace, Jerusalem, Teeming With Life Again

By ERIC GOTTGETREU

Jerusalem, Nov. 25 — (AP) — After years of terror, rebellion and war, the City of Peace is teaming with life again.

Although its Arab-Jewish war literally cut it into halves — the modern Jewish section and the smaller Arab-held old city — Jerusalem is flourishing.

The fact that the post-war future of Jerusalem as a whole has not yet been discussed by the United Nations General Assembly has not prevented Jerusalemites from starting to rebuild what has been destroyed.

Dr. Daniel Auster, mayor of the Jewish part of the city, estimates the population of that section at 100,000. He said that a post-siege decrease of 20,000 last year has been made up by returnees (including about 2,000 Israeli government officials and their families) and new immigrants.

There are no exact figures available on the number of civilian inhabitants in the Arab-held old city. Estimates by foreign consuls who are permitted across the armistice demarcation lines vary from 20,000 to 40,000.

Nearly all the Jews agree that the Palestine Conciliation Commission proposal for an international regime in Jerusalem is a still-born child.

Dr. Auster is sure the U.N. will confirm the present de facto inclusion of the modern part of Jerusalem in the Jewish state. He believes the U.N. will recognize that the P.C.C. proposal "is not only historically unjust and unrealistic, but also unworkable."

Green Light Is Symbolic

Meanwhile, modern Jewish-held Jerusalem is changing its face in a tempo never witnessed here before.

The rubble left from the heavy bomb, shell and fire destruction in the pre-war and siege disorders is being cleared away. Hundreds of houses have been repaired and a number of new streets laid.

TWO LEFER PATIENTS

Ottawa, Nov. 25 (CP)—Only two lepers live in Canada's lonely leper colony on Benitsch Island, off British Columbia's coast. This information was tabled Thursday in the Commons by Health Minister Martin for Mrs.)-Gen. G. R. Pearkes (PC-Nanaimo.) To care for the patients, the government maintains a nursing staff of two and generally spends about $10,000 to $15,000 a year in services, repairs and maintenance.

Victims were Al Ross, Robert A. Smith and Wilfrid Bauman, all of Halifax. Ross was a photographer on the staff of the Halifax Chronicle-Herald. They were on a hunting trip.

Recluse Loses Battle to Survive Against Cold

Eoglehart, Nov. 23. (CP)—The story of how Damyn Batelitz, 80-year-old recluse lost a battle to survive after becoming paralyzed from the hips down in his cold, shabby homestead was told today by Provincial Police.

Batelitz' body was discovered by a neighbor who became anxious about the recluse when he saw no smoke rising from the homesteader's shack on the outskirts of this Northern Ontario town 22 miles south of Kirkland Lake.

Police said an autopsy on the body showed Batelitz had suffered a brain hemorrhage which left him partly paralyzed. They said superficial wounds on the body, torn clothing and overturned pieces of furniture indicated attempts by the man to keep a fire going in sub-freezing temperatures and get himself food.

They estimated death came 48 hours before Batelitz was found.

Truck Hurled 60 Feet by Train, Two Men Escape

Walkerton, Nov. 25. (CP) — Two men escaped with minor injuries Thursday night when a Toronto-bound passenger train hit their huge transport truck just behind the cab and hurled it 60 feet. The truck was demolished.

Jack Martin, driver of the truck said he came over the brow of a hill 180 feet from the level crossing and saw the train approaching. He applied the brakes but the tires would not grip on the icy incline, so he tried to make the train to the crossing. Jack Weaver was the other occupant of the truck.

SISTERS FOUND; ONE DEAD

Philadelphia, Nov. 25 (AP)— Jannie Betty Henry, 12, in a state of near exhaustion was found Thursday beside the dead body of her younger sister, Elsie, in a ravine 100 feet below a Pennsylvania railroad trestle. The girls apparently had fallen from the railroad bridge. In a moment of consciousness the injured girl said her sister fell "through the trestle, heard her scream and ran to help her and I fell through too."

POLICE THWART ATTEMPT TO FREE "MAD KILLER"

Two Men Seized Admit Trying to 'Spring' Chicago Prisoner

Chicago, Nov. 25 — (AP) — Police patrolled areas outside the Cook County jail today after thwarting an attempt by two young men to free James Morelli, the "mad dog" killer, who is scheduled to die in the electric chair early Saturday.

Police said the two men seized near the jail Thursday night admitted they had been trying since last Monday to aid the doomed Morelli in escaping from the jail.

Morelli already has been granted five stays since he first was sentenced to death last March 19th. He was convicted of killing Emil Schmeichel Dec. 12, 1947, in a wild shooting spree in which two other men were killed and two wounded.

Police identified the two men seized Thursday night as Dominic J. Demaria, 20, and Erwin Leroy Burdick, 23, and said they had been friends of Morelli for seven or eight years.

Police said a bag which Burdick was carrying when picked up by four detectives contained two 19-inch hacksaw blades, a .22-calibre revolver, and 50 feet of fishing line.

Burdick's statement said he and Demaria were to signal Morelli by a lighted match. If the signal was returned, also by a lighted match, they were to move to the side of the north wall and look for a thin cord weighted by a washer. They were to attach the end of a fishing line to the cord and a bag containing the saws and the pistol to the end of the fishing line.

Burdick said they flashed the signal and in turn received a return signal Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights. But, he added, as they moved along the wall on each of the three nights, they could not find the cord.

Morelli, unknown to Burdick and Demaria, was moved from his cell-block to the death cell Thursday afternoon.

Globe Trotting Congressmen Run up Hefty Expense Bill

By GEORGE KITCHEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Nov. 25—(CP) — Globe-trotting United States Congressmen are running up a hefty expense bill. Officials here estimate that 135 members of the House of Representatives and 30 Senators either are out of the country, have been, or plan to go. And, when all the bills are in, the jaunts will cost the American taxpayer more than $150,000 for this year alone.

Exact information on the congressional globe-trotters is difficult to pin down, but those who arrange the transportation, issue passports and work out the details of itineraries say 1949 has seen the greatest exodus of Congressmen in history.

In Washington the trips are known as "junkets," but Congressmen themselves shy away from that word because the visits abroad are classified on the record as official business or inspectors.

Heavy Air Slate

The big rush of Congressmen to foreign lands has developed from the heavy legislative slate of foreign aid. During the last Congress has voted some $20,000,000,000 for foreign aid, arms assistance and national defence.

Most of the Senators and representatives are touchy on the subject of their jaunts, and insist that the money is well spent. Most of them work long hours on the trips trying to determine where and how the money is being spent, what conditions are like abroad and what should be done in the future.

But the trips do not always involve work. Foreign countries and officials usually are anxious to entertain the visitors, and United States diplomats and employees overseas always seek to please the men who control the purse strings.

Occasionally, a member will take his wife, daughter or friends along, but he pays the added expense out of his own pocket.

Exact costs to the government are difficult to determine, but congressional veterans say the average government expense for a trip to Europe and back runs about $1,200. Longer trips are higher.

Diplomatic Tempest

One diplomatic tempest has arisen overseas. Senator Elmer Thomas (Dem.-Okla.), leading a congressional group that handles funds for armed services, protested that his group was "snubbed" in Sweden. He warned that he might not favor any Swedish requests for aid in the future.

Swedish newspapers and officials, in turn, shouted "insult" and used strong words about Thomas.

Later, two members of the Thomas group differed with him and lauded Swedish hospitality.

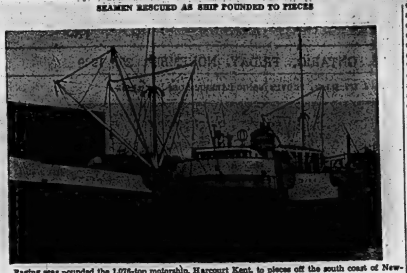
SEAMEN RESCUED AS SHIP FOUNDED TO PIECES



Raging seas pounded the 1,076-ton motorship, Harcourt Kent, to pieces off the south coast of Newfoundland after 21 seamen aboard abandoned the vessel when it ran aground on rocks. The sailors, now safely home, were saved by a rescue party who used ropes to reach them at base of a cliff where they had spent the night. — Central Press Canadian.

Cost of Living is Live Issue in New Zealand

Auckland, N. Z., Nov.-23 (CP), —The rise in the cost of living is proving one of the key issues in the campaign for the New Zealand general election to be held Nov. 30.

The labor government holds that its stabilization policy has controlled prices far more successfully than almost all other countries since 1939. It maintains controls over wages, prices, rents and real estate and pays subsidies to keep down the prices of certain essential commodities. The government stated this policy will be maintained except that controls will be relaxed over some commodities where supply makes price checks unnecessary.

But the opposition, the National party, is making the rise in the cost of living a principal point in its campaign.

In his election manifesto the National party says: "The party is determined to deal effectively with the basic causes of higher living costs, which it attributes to inflation, taxation, lack of incentives the interference and dictatorial attitude of the state, profit, price and property control, import control, union interference and lack of firm action."

The issue is likely to be a vital one at the poll. Labor can claim that the people are getting more money than ever before, but against this the opposition is advising voters whether they can buy as much in goods and services as they used to on lower wages.

No interference with the cradle-to-grave social security program is advocated by the National party. The building of this structure is one of the main points in the government's case for continued support. It claims to have "freed New Zealand from want and the fear of want."

Extension Plans

Labor proposes to extend it further to include specialist medical service and dental treatment. The National party is pledged to maintain it and also proposes increases in some of the benefits.

Some of the government's nationalization projects are more in dispute. Many services, such as railways, telegraphs and hydro-electric power generation were already state-owned when Labor came to power 14 years ago. Labor nationalization measures include the taking over of marketing of many primary products, the Bank of New Zealand, full control of currency and credit, airlines, much road transport almost all coal mines and workers' accident compensation insurance. All radio stations not already state-owned have also been taken over and by huge program of house building the state has become by far the largest landlord in the country.

Since the 1946 election the only major government steps have been nationalization of coal deposits, purchases of most coal mines not already state-owned and the creation of a Labor monopoly in workers' compensation insurance. No new nationalization measures are proposed by the government.

The National party's attitude to these measures varies. It would repeal outright the compensation insurance monopoly. Overseas state marketing would be replaced by marketing boards on which produce would have majority representation. The internal marketing department which controls the sale of many primary products in New Zealand, would give way, if the industries concerned desired it, to producer cooperative. The National Airway Corporation would be made into a public corporation with 49 per cent of the shares available for general subscription. Currency and credit would be divorced from political control State houses would be made available for purchase by tenants, instead of being for rental only as at present.

ORIENTAL INDUSTRIES
The most important industries of East Pakistan are cotton and weaving mills.

Detroit Preserves Unbeaten String in Tie With Chicago While Canadiens Trim Leafs

By JIM BASTABLE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Detroit Red Wings were held to a 3-3 tie by Chicago Thursday night, but they're still sailing along far in front of the National Hockey League race.

The Red Wings maintained a nine-point margin although Montreal Canadiens skipped into second place with a 5-3 victory over Toronto Maple Leafs. That victory by Canadiens spelled the fourth straight setback for the Leafs, defending Stanley Cup champions.

Those powerful Wings were well on their way to a ninth victory in 10 starts when the roof fell in on goaltender Harry Lumley. With less than three minutes left in the game, the Hawks blasted in three goals to take the split decision.

We the gave the Black Hawks sole possession of fourth place—three points behind the third-place Boston Bruins.

Fiery Ted Lindsay, the league's leading scorer, added two goals to his total Thursday night. They gave him a season's record of 11 plus 14 assists for 25 points. George Gee got the other Detroit goal. Gaye Stewart tallied two for the Hawks. Metro Prystai got the other.

Record Crowd

In Montreal a record Forum crowd of 13,905 saw the Canadiens battle Toronto behind a 3-1 count in the second period and then polish off the Leafs with two goals in the last period.

After their two goal splurge in the second period, the Leafs, just in from a long train ride from Boston and still smarting from a 3-1 defeat by the Bruins, faded badly.

Maurice Richard scored one goal and got two assists. Glen Harmon, the first Montrealer to score for the Habitants this season, tallied one. He did Leo Gravelle, Billy Reay and Norm Dussault.

Howie Meeker, Sid Smith and Bill Juzda were the marksmen for the Leafs.

The record crowd outstripped a mark that stood for 19 years. That was in 1930 when 13,059 crammed into the Forum to see the Bruins tangle with the Canadiens.

BIG SEVEN

(By The Canadian Press)

Detroit's sharp-shooting threesome—Ted Lindsay, Sid Abel and Gordie Howe—continue to lead the individual scoring field of the National Hockey League, but Lindsay is gradually pulling further away from his teammates. He scored twice Thursday night to boost his point-total to 25 for 11 goals and 14 assists. Five points behind is Abel who remains close up on Howe. Doug Bentley of Chicago holds down the fourth scoring spot with five goals and 13 assists for 18 points.

TWO NOMINATED

Oshawa, Nov. 25 — (CP) — Mayor Michael Starr and Hayden MacGregor were nominated for the post of mayor here Thursday night. Nominations were held for elections Dec. 5.

There were 38 nominations for 17 positions on the council, Board of Education and Public Utilities Commission.

3,000 Football Fans to Invade The Queen City

Montreal, Nov. 25 (CP)—A delegation of 3,000 rabid football fans prepared to evacuate this city today and head for Toronto to watch their Alouettes tackle Calgary Stampeders for the Grey Cup football championship.

When Montrealers awakened this morning a white blanket of two inches of fresh snow covered the ground and many, who had planned to travel by car, rushed off to add more confusion to the crowded railroad stations.

But nothing appeared to dampen the fervor of these Montreal fans. Some claimed they would hitch-hike despite the unfavorable weather.

One thing is sure and that is that every last one of the 3,000 seats alotted to the Montrealers will be occupied.

On the gridiron, Lew Hayman put his squad through their last drill before tomorrow's big game. There was no heavy work. The team dressed in light attire and sported brand new red toques.

"We'll wear 'em when we get to Toronto," said Captain Frankie Filchock. "And we'll wear 'em to keep warm."

The team will not be alone in wearing the toques, hundreds of Montreal fans have purchased the bright tasseled woolen headgear and will match Montreal on the best the west has to offer in a challenge against the cold—something to consider when you're watching a football game in November.

Alouettes also have four volunteer cheer leaders who will parade up and down the sidelines with their blue-blanc-rouge togues.

Talked War Into Job

The cheer leaders talked their way into the job. All students at Sir George William College they had their train fare and necessary expenses for the trip but no ticket for the game.

They marched boldly into the Alouette office and announced their purpose and their readiness to supply their own special uniforms. The plan worked.

They'll be on the job, with assurance they will get into the game if the Alouettes executive bee to throw them bodily over the wall of Varsity stadium.

Hayman is still doubtful whether or not he will use Jack Harper, tall halfback, who suffered a dislocated shoulder here last Sunday against Hamilton Tigers. Red Nowner is a likely candidate for the spot.

The squad will leave by train this afternoon escorted by a flock of official, and team supporters. Once in Toronto they will be limited to their hotel and kept under cover until game time.

Fred MacMurray's "Secret Weapon" passes out at the crucial moment in this scene from "Father Was a Pullback," another hilarious comedy from Twentieth Century-Fox, opening at the Capital Theatre today. The picture, which co-stars Maureen O'Hara with MacMurray and has a cast headed by Betty Lynn, Rudy Vallee, Natalie Wood and Thelma Ritter, gives a new twist to a football coach's troubles with a losing team.

Four-Team Race For Top Honors In East Division

(By the Canadian Press)

It's still a four-team race for top honors in the eastern division of the American Hockey League as only four points separate the clubs.

New Haven Ramblers snapped a second-place deadlock with Buffalo Bisons and pulled to within a single point of the leading Providence Reds Thursday night when they defeated the Reds, 5-2.

A 6-4 victory by Springfield Indians over Cincinnati Mohawks moved the tribe to within a point of the idle third-place Bisons.

Hershey Bears appear to be out of the running momentarily as they trail Springfield by seven points. The Bears and Pittsburgh Hornets battled to a 2-2 draw in the only other league contest Thursday night.

At New Haven, the Ramblers scored two first-period goals and were never headed after that. Billy Mickoski and Fern Perreault were the marksmen.

Nick Mickoski scored another Rambler goal in the middle period while Chiek Webster and Steve Hyrmnak tallied in the third frame. Providence goals were by Harvey Fraser and Eddie Kullman.

Gary Gordon paced the Springfield attack with a pair of counters while Kennie Hayden, Harry Pidhirny, Kelly Burnett and Gordon Tottle fired singles.

Ted Campeau, Jimmy Moore, Bert Hirschfeld and Joe Lepine scored for the Mohawks, it was their 16th low in 21 games.

At Hershey — a last minute gamble paid off for Pittsburgh.

Trailing 2-1 with only 63 seconds to play, the Hornets yanked goalie Gil Mayer and sent an extra forward out as a faceoff was called beside the Hershey cage.

Ricky Robussen, tied the score immediately after the face-off on a 30-footer.

Rudy, Migay and Frank Poriss scored for the Bears while Roly McLenahan notched the other Pittsburgh marker.

Ted Williams Most Valuable Player in Loop

New York, Nov. 23 — (AP)— The Boston Red Sox may have failed to win the American League pennant but they possess the circuit's most valuable player in Ted Williams.

The brilliant batting star, whose team lost the flag to New York Yankees on the final day of the season, gained some measure of revenge when he defeated the world champion Phil Rizzuto and Joe Page for the coveted award.

Williams' selection by a committee of 24 members of the Baseball Writers' Association, three from each city, was double-edged. He was named the first time in six years that such an honor was bestowed upon a member of a non-pennant winning club.

Detroit's Hal Newhouser, back in 1944, was the last player to accomplish the feat. Two others, Charley Gehringer and Jimmy Foxx achieved that feat since the writers' took over the voting in 1931.

It was the second time that Williams has won. The tall, slender Yankee ace the final day and finished second in '42 and '47, losing by one vote to Joe DiMaggio in the latter year. Lou Boudreau, Cleveland's playing manager, won last year.

Williams, the 31-year-old native of San Diego, paced the league in home runs, runs batted in, runs scored, doubles and total bases but lost the unofficial batting title to Detroit's George Kell on the final day.

He received 272 points, 96 more than Rizzuto. The peerless relief pitcher got 164 points.

THERE'S NOTHING WEAK ABOUT THIS SEXI

New interest in wrestling both in U.S. and in Europe has brought out the ladies, both inside and outside the ring. The gals put on their act just like the men and the "wreaker sex" tab seems to be somewhat misleading. Wide-Open Split Between Unions Almost Certainty

Toronto, Nov. 25 (CP)—A wide-open split between the American Athletic Union of Canada and the government-sponsored Ontario Athletic Commission was threatened in a certainty Thursday night. The rift brought up at opening of the three-day A.A.U. annual meeting featured an otherwise tame session.

"There seems to be no desire on the part of the Ontario Athletic Commission to co-operate with the A.A.U. of C. in the interests of amateur sport" and "it would appear that this unloh must eventually refuse to allow its boxers admission to national championships," Prof. Nelson Hart of London, Ont., told the presidential address.

Prof. Hart said the O.A.C. has taken a position in reference to boxing which cannot be accepted by this union, or approved by the International Boxing Federation." He added the definition of an amateur approved by the A.A.U. of C. in 1939 "still stands but is not being enforced by the Commission."

The A.A.U. definition stipulates that amateurs must not accept financial renumeration for their athletic ability.

Prof. Hart outlined details of correspondence between the O.A.C. and the A.A.U. relating directly to the "control of, and regulation governing amateur boxing which have never been settled or even seriously considered in the interests of amateur sport.

He "reluctantly suggested" to the meeting, attended by representatives from British Columbia, Alberta, Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec, that:

"1. The Ontario Athletic Commission is not prepared to adopt the amateur rules of boxing, approved and supported by the International Boxing Federation and used in the A.A.U. of C.

"2. The Ontario Athletic Commission apparently wishes to control boxing legislate for amateur athletics in Ontario without regard to any other province or country, and with no intention of reasonable co-operation with the A.A.U. of C."

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

TIPS FRIDAY

"Tippy-I-Ay, Tippy-I-Ee, we are the Stamps' from Calgary."

We have no worries, we have no frets. We gonna lick hell outta Alouettes".

That's the roar that is emanating from the lusty western throats of the supporters of the colorful Calgary Stampeders on the eve of the great gridiron classic scheduled for Varsity Stadium tomorrow afternoon.

But down Mawrrall way, the theme is different.

"Bring on them Stamps and dem colorful hats,

Bring on Ole Sugar, and 'Buck' McCallum too,

When dose Larks start to flutter and hit ole paydirt,

Not a Stamp, or supporter will be wearin' de skirt".

Perhaps never in the history of Canadian football has such interest and enthusiasm over a finals game risen to such a terrific pitch. Last year's colorful parade and near-hysterical post-game high flinks will be like a prayer-meeting on comparison to what will be staged in Toronto before and after the gridiron classic. Toronto, the Good, is letting down its hair to give the popular Stampeders and their merry supporters a welcome that would hardly be surpassed by that given royalty. The west coast has crept into the hearts of the people of good ole Hogtown last year, and remained there permanently. Even the hard-boiled newspaper scribes to a man silly as fond of sentiment as a strawberry social is of rum swizzles, have closed their eyes and wished for them, against their feelings, are calling the Westerners to win.

Not to be outdone by the swashbuckling crew from the prairies will be the colorful western paraphernalia, palomino horses, pretty sowgirls, poker-faced Blackfoot Indian chiefs, cheechawkers, hill-billy bands and cowboy bands, mechanical mackinaws in all colors of the rainbow, and a couple of montanese of the Paul Dallio-marked St. Katrine", blue-blooded Westerners of the old school of James Street, who will be on hand to add a riot of color to offset or add to that of the rollicking boys and gals from the wide-open spaces out Calgary way.

'Tis reported the'boys and gals from the eastern metropolis will invade Toronto in the celestial garb of the movie-do-bole, the skiller and the snow-shoer. Brilliantly-sashed mackinaws in all colors of the rainbow, and other habilimente peculiar to the Quebecois will be on hand. At least the twain meets in a few brilliant shades, but the meat of the brilliancy will be seen in the supporters. There will be a grand party in downtown Toronto when the Toronto Maple Leaf Club dedicates their new home. High flinks will carry on all night no matter which team wins.

Smart season ticket holders down Montreal way discovered a simple method of adding a few smileons to the bank account. By virtue of their being season ticket holders they were given priority for their Grey Cup tickets and holders they were given priority for their Grey Cup tickets and holders they were given priority for their Grey Cup tickets and but took the tickets anyway. Now they're making forty bucks a pair — and getting it. In Toronto last before game time if you happen to have a brace of the pasteboards, hold 'em in the air and yell, "Who wants 'em for forty bucks?", then the air and yell, "Who wants 'em for forty bucks?", then the brass fairsell or you'll be killed in the rush. Last year the scalp laddies saked $50 at noon Saturday, and were almost mobbed by the rush of customers.

According to reports from Montreal, very little Calgary money has found its way that far east, and consequently the Alouettes have been made 2½ to 5 favorites with the price much shorter in Toronto, amounting like 9-5. The Larks are even money to win by six points, in Montreal.

"So what!" yipped a carefree Calgarian the other day, as he laid the maximum on the line for his Stamps to win. "Supposing I do lose, I'm only spending Ottawa Rough Rider money."

Another scent sidled up to what looked like a prospective victim for his sculptor activities. "Lotsa beef" he whispered out of the corner of his mouth, "Wanna get a couple tickets for the game?"

The victim looked about. No one was paying an attention to them. He nodded his head. "How much?" he whispered.

"Thirty bucks gets you the pastics," came back the hush-hush talk.

They repaired to the gents' powder room. Money exchanged hands, and a small envelope was pressed into the pocket of the victim.

Excited, he rushed upstairs to his hotel room. He waved the envelope in the air. "I've got 'em, I've got 'em," he shouted.

He had 'em all right. When he opened the envelope he discovered he had a pair of tickets to the Grey Cup finals—but they were dated 1945.

Northern Electrics won their fifth straight victory in the District Hockey League at Memorial Arena last night, sending their rivals, the CNR Diesels by a 7-5 count. It was their second near the victory that stood out but the fine beat of hockey dished up by both squads. Forgotten was the rough record style that both teams have favored and with all players centering their activities on the puck, the speediest was one of the best games seen in the league this season. It was fast, clean and wide-open hockey and the fans got a big kick out of the play. It proved definitely that hockey can be played as it should be played especially by those two topflight squads.

Diesels faced a stiff task when they iced only ten players. Injuries and inability to put in an appearance reduced the Trainmen squad to that number and the most of them played sixty minutes. On the other hand Northern had the regular squad out. Injuries cropped up again with Desgr. Bastedo and Bill Hurst requiring medical attention after the game.

Trenton Flyers roared into undisputed second place in the league standing by virtue of the Diesels' defeat, and their victory over their service rivals 6 Repair Depot. The game was anything but exciting and it was not until the third period that the teams came to life and displayed the hockey they are capable of playing.

And now we off to Toronto and the Ontario Minor Hockey Association annual meeting to see Mr. King Eddy set for 8:30 tomorrow morning. Then to the Knife and Fork League in the dills hotel — and we hope and trust, the football game. And right here and now we crawl out on that well-known limb. Ready, here 'tis, Alouettes by a touchdown.

Northern Electric Takes Diesels, Trenton Flyers Grab Second Place With 6-2 Victory Over No. 6 R. D.

In one of the best games played this season, Northern Electric won its fifth consecutive victory and kept intact its undefeated record in Memorial Arena last night when it turned back the bid of a short-handed CNR Diesels crew by a 7-5 score.

In the first half of a district hockey league twin bill, Trenton Flyers surged into undisputed second place in the league standing when they defeated the 6 Repair Depot, RCAF 6-3 in a game that lacked the usual fire of the service club squads. The loss was the fourth for the Repairmen who are now in the cellar with a quartet of losses and one tie.

Northern Electric 7 CNR Diesels 5

Diesels iced only ten players with the rest laid up owing to injury or inability to play. The game was featured by the absence of the usual rugged rough style of hockey these teams play and with both squads using the puck rather than the man, the fans were treated to a wide-open free-scoring style with penalties at a minimum. Only three sentences were handed out to referees St. Louis and Fitzpatrick and all occurred in the first period with two going to Diesels.

Most of the Diesel crew were 60 minutes men as the team had only four players in reserve. At that they played heads up hockey and twice held a two-goal lead over the speedy Electrics.

The first setback came with nine minutes old when Cousins took Ken Murphy's pass to notch the first counter for the winners. A later Diesels roared back with the equalizer from the stick of Leo Goyer with Gerry Moher getting the assist.

Diesels took over for the first few minutes in the second period and fired home two quick goals from Leo Goyer and Bill Hurst.: It was clean, hard-checking hockey with the absence of rough stuff speeding up the game and both teams remaining from using the body to an appreciable extent.

Keith MacDonald raced down centre ice with Leo Goyer in tow and the latter's pass enabled the fleet winger to reduce the Diesel lead to one.

Electric Tie Score

Electrics tied the score in the first minute of play in the third heat when Jackie Wardhaugh took Pete Jones pass to dent the twine. Diesels swept back to the attack and rammed home two goals in five minutes from the sticks of Tommy Schreider and Gerry Moher.

Then Electrics took over. With the score 5-3 against them the fast-skating front lines of the Electrics surged to the attack and they rammed home four goals in five minutes to make the count 7-5. And that's the way it ended. Mulvihill, Cousins, Semark and Wardhaugh accounted for the tallies in that swift-moving third period splurge.

Jackie Wardhaugh got two and an assist for Electrics. Cousins got a pair of goals with Macdonald, Mulvihill and Semark accounting for the balance.

Leo Goyer sparked the Diesels attack with a pair of goals and two assists. Schrieder, Moher, Hurst got the remaining three.

Trenton Flyers 6
No. 6 Repair Depot 3

In a game that lacked the usual fire of the service teams, Trenton RCAF Flyers took over second place in the league with their defeat of 6 R.D. by a 6-3 count. The game was slow at times and was by far different to the spirited exhibitions staged by the teams against other squads.

It was clean hockey with only six minor penalties being handed out by the officials. Play was definitely in the last stages of the game and six minutes had sped before Filion of R.D. defencoman put his team one up. "Pop" Lester evened the count for Flyers with just seconds to go and the rest of the period saw both goalers turn back forays of the opposing forwards.

Jackson, Flyers fleet winger put his team one up in the first goal scored in the second period.

Flyers added two more in the first eight minutes of play in the third heat with goals by Miller and Zaleski. Twigg, for R.D. grabbed a loose puck after a Flyer ganging attack and raced in alone to beat Keyes cleanly at the mildway mark. Flyers definitely had the balance of play in the remaining minutes scoring two goals from Parks and O'Meara.

The teams—

6 R.D.—Goal, McKenna; defence, Schmidt, Fillon; centre, Jones; wings, Twigge, Demille; subs, Carlisle, King, Koech, M. Jones, Johnson, Watson, Whatam, Bubbs, Starks, Broderick, Tomasini.

Wet, Snowy Weather Dampens Stamps Hopes of Aerial Victory

Oakville, Ont., Nov. 25—(CP)—The weatherman isn't playing ball with Calgary Stampeders in the hard-fighting dominion football championship, in their Grey Cup appointment with Montreal Alouettes at Toronto Varsity Stadium Saturday. It looks like a slippery going and the Stamps aren't modders.

A sudden break in the weather, from cold and clear—ideal for aerial offence which is Calgary's specialty—to a heavy snowfall of from three to five inches Thursday and early today, put a damper on the Stampeders' supporters. The weather forecast is "scattered snowflurries" throughout today and it could possibly black out the much-ballyhooed forward-passing duel between Montreal's Frankie Filchock and Calgary's Keith Spaith, two imports.

The Calgary fans, looking out at Toronto's snow-covered streets recall the western Canada interprovincial union league game this season when the Stampeders, playing in a heavy snowfall, lost their first game in two seasons—A 9-8 setback by Saskatchewan Rough Riders.

They also recall that, under chillier conditions the season before at Regina, Stamps boomed from a first-half 19-8 deficit with the Roughriders to a 22-19 triumph. They are hoping the third time, if snowy conditions prevail tomorrow afternoon, the foothills city club will come up with their second straight Grey Cup victory.

Until today, the 20,000-odd fans who were lucky enough to snare tickets for the Canadian sports spectacle of the year held high hopes they would witness a wide-open aerial game between Filchock and Spaith. This was the game, football experts figured, that would settle the much-debated east-west argument which of the two is the best flinger.

With a slippery ball, and tricky underfooting, the clubs probably will stick to a ground attack. In this department, the experts figure Montreal has the edge.

Stampeders' Finals: Daily weeks training here today and drive to Toronto early tonight to a downtown hotel and 10 p.m. curfew. Off-duty city police will patrol the floor where they will be quartered. Their duty is to discourage over-enthusiastic football fans from bothering the players.

Riley (Rattler) Matheson, 33-year-old import who made the western interprovincial all-star team in an outside position this year and coach Les Lear—if he plays—and there is a great possibility he will—can be counted on for superb defensive play.

Lear, who has played both the Canadian and American game, and has developed into one of the hardest-driving coaches in the sport in Canada, calls the beefed-up Texas the "greatest linebacker to come into Canada."

The Stamps received good news Thursday when it was announced by club physician Dr. Ken Calvert that ends Woody Strode and Sugarfoot Anderson would "definitely start." Strode skipped practice until Thursday due to a bruised shoulder and Anderson, in bed for most of Wednesday due to a small dose of influenza, took his spot in Thursday's light signal drill.

Toronto, Nov. 25 — (CP)—In event of a tie in points after the regulation 60-minute Calgary-Montreal Grey Cup game here Saturday, the teams will play two 10-minute overtime periods, Dr. W. A. Campbell, president of the Canadian Rugby Union, said Thursday.

In a telephone interview from his home in Kingston, Dr. Campbell said that in event of a tie after the two 10-minute periods, the clubs will continue "until darkness intervenes."

And if it is still tied? "I suppose the game will be replayed," he said.

Picked Canadian Soccer Team Ties U. S. Squad

(By The Canadian Press)

The picked Eastern Canadian soccer team from Toronto, Hamilton and Montreal gave a fine exhibition of clever combination play Thursday at New York to hold a strong American League all-star squad to a 2-2 tie in the annual series of games for the Thiner Cup before a crowd of 2000.

Since the international games started in 1947 Canada has been tied and beaten by Chicago; tied and won from St. Louis, and held even Thursday by the American League which will play a return game in the Dominion next Summer.

The first country to win three games will gain possession of the trophy.

Both teams Thursday set a lightning-fast pace as soon as the ball was set in motion but the Canadians were the most dangerous. The Americans put on strong pressure but were unable to get near the danger zone through the fine play of the Canadian fullbacks.

A rugged band of Dundas Ont., Bombers invade Westmount, Que., Saturday for a crack at the Dominion Intermediate A football title and the town's first gridiron championship in 40 years.

The Bombers call it a national international rugby final but actually its an eastern title. The Canadian Rugby Union does not recognize any national intermediate championship because western teams never challenged for such a title Percy Robinson, secretary of the C.R.U., said.

Garnet Steeves, up from the Hamilton Wildcat Juniors, will pace the Ontario champion Bombers when they meet Montreal Donnacona Sorrey in the sudden-death final. The Bombers entrain for the Montreal suburb today along with several supporters and members of town council, who helped arrange the playoff.

At Toronto, police, Thursday night denied reports that they were investigating circulation of counterfeit tickets for the Grey Cup football final between Montreal Alouettes and Calgary Stampeders Saturday.

It was reported that counterfeit $2 tickets had been sold in a downtown restaurant. All legitimate tickets have long since been taken.

Inspector Albert Lee of the police morality department said "No one has reported anything along that line to us. We have not had counterfeit ticket trouble in previous years and nothing we have heard would indicate any trouble now."

Alex Mason, Canadian amateur middleweight title at Port Arthur and a member of the British Empire games team, announced at Sudbury Thursday night that he will be unable to accompany the team to New Zealand next month.

He said he couldn't get leave of absence from his employers for sufficient time to cover the trip.

Mason won the Canadian middleweight title at Port Arthur last month. He defeated Johnny Ravenda of Montreal in the final.

The official Jockey Club handicapper at London Thursday picked Nimbus as the outstanding three-year-old of the season in English racing.

Master Light was named the No. 1 two-year-old in the ratings of the handicapper, Geoffrey Freer.

Nimbus, a bay colt by Nearco out of Kong, won the derby and the 2,000 guineas. He recently was retired to stud.

Master Light is a chestnut colt by Signal Light out of Mashaq. He is the current winter book favorite for next year's derby. He is owned by E. A. Brown.

Former Manager Of Winnipeg Team Picks Alouettes

Toronto, Nov. 25. —(CP) — Joe Ryan, for years an enthusiastic rooter and a successful master mind for Winnipeg football teams came out Thursday on the sunrise side of the annual east-west argument.

The former manager of Winnipeg Blue Bombers confessed that when Montreal Alouettes and Calgary Stampeders clash Saturday for the Canadian gridiron title, his hopes will ride with the eastern team for the first time since he first got into the football business in 1932. He goes further and picks Alouettes to wrest the title from the defending champion Stahpeders.

You don't have to look far for Ryan's change of heart. The man who played an important part in building the Blue Bombers into a powerful machine in the 1930s now serves as secretary-treasurer for the Alouettes and works for a Toronto brokerage firm.

But his prediction is something else again. In all the years he led Winnipeg teams into the east he never got on the record with a published prophesy on the outcome. But now he is confident that the Alouettes have the power to knock off the Stamps.

Terrific Pass Attack

Ryan says the Stamps have a powerful club.

"I've seen Calgary play twice. They're a good club with a terrific pass attack, the best I've seen. But I still think the Alouettes will win."

He figures the Alouettes, taking reserves into account, has a superior line, that Frankie Filchock is a better quarterback than Keith Spaith, and that the Alouettes have a more potent running attack with Virgil Wagner, Bob Cunningham and others to carry the mail.

He admits that the Als haven't got a pair of outside wings with the physique or hands of Sugarfoot Anderson and Woody Strode. But he argues that the Montreal outsides are all good pass receivers and are better defensively than the Calgary pair. He can't see Spaith outkicking Fred Klejk and he figures Ches McCane's rates with Keith Graham as a placement artist.

Back of all that, what appeals to Ryan is Montreal's depth. "If Les Lear can keep his first 14 men going he'll be awfully tough. But after that 14 he's got little or nothing to throw at us."

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, Nov. 25. (AP) — Thirty-seven words were responsible for the most famous backfield in football history . . . And tomorrow ma "Four Horsemen" of Notre Dame, the "Seven Mules" and their substitutes will gather at South Bend for a 25th reunion that is a tribute to the skilled sportswriter who typed those words. . . . It was Grantland Rice who set in an open air press box after Notre Dame's thrilling 1924 victory over Army and wrote: "outlined against a blue-grey October sky, the Four Horsemen rode again". . . . And George Strickler later concocted the idea of photographing Stuhldreher, Layden, Crowley and Miller, in full football regalia—astride a quartet of sway-backed livery-stable nags. . . . Now Strickler got lead and Strickler's picture assured athletic immortality for those four players. . . . They'd be called corny now and probably wouldn't get by an eagle-eyed sports editor, but maybe those enthusiasts were right and the blase moderns are wrong. Those Notre Dame players deserved all the publicity they received, and most of them have been a successful since graduation as they were at football.

Bet's All, Brothers

They're telling this one in Texas on Blair Cherry, whose Longhorns have lost two one-point decisions this season and one by two points. . . . Seems Blair and a doctor crony were deer hunting. Just to get Cherry's mind off his troubles. . . . They have a standing bet on which one bags a buck with "the greatest number of points on its horns . . . So when the doc brought in his prize, it was a seven-pointer . . . and Cherry, no matter how often he counted, couldn't make it more than six.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Contrary to the opinion of the non-technical, an experienced bridge player does not smell a slam. He discovers it. How? Simply by combining his own values with those disclosed by his partners.

Take a look at this deal:

NORTH
	♠A K 10 7 4 3
	♦A 9 7 3 2
WEST	EAST
♠Q 9 6 2	♠J
♥J 6 5 4 3	♥K 10 9 8 6
♦None	♦K Q J 10 8 5
♣10 5 4 3 2	♣A 7 6
SOUTH
♥Q 7 2
♦K 7 6 4
♣K Q J 8

The bidding goes like this:

South	North
1 D	2 S
3 C	3 S
3 NT	4 NT
5 C	6 D

From the moment of the south opening, north had ideas of a slam in diamonds. His preponderance in trick count tells him there may be a play for it. Probably grand slam if south has an ace.

The immediate jump takeout by north assures they will not stop short of game, it shows at least six tricks with two aces among them. There was no hurry. Better get more information, if possible.

The four no-trump bid by north is the ace and king prober. Five clubs by south is the convention signal for showing no aces. With an ace missing in their pair, small slam was high enough.

South did not show support for a rebiddable spade suit. So, north avoided that suit as trumps. Anyway, the six diamond bid as trumps is the one most evenly divided between the pair.

Opening lead from west was a club. East took it with the ace and returned his spade jack. Dummy king polled this in. What to do next is now a problem. In expert play this means the safest.

Temptation is to lead one round of trumps at once. This is a mistake. Right there is where the timing is lost. Be in the chance to make the contract. Back up and start over.

Hollywood, Nov. 25 — (AP)— How much social security can a horse use? Gene Autry's Champion is getting $25,000 worth.

The horse is the beneficiary of the strangest insurance policies in this town of strange insurance policies. Everything has been insured—from Jimmy Durante's nose to Betty Grable's Gams.

Now comes Champion.

"I want to be sure that if anything happens to me, Champ won't have to end his days pulling a milk wagon," explained Autry.

So the policy was signed and sealed this week. It provides a $25,000 endowment to take care of the horse. That can provide a lot of oats and carrots.

"The fund will provide $100 a month for feed and $100 a month for someone to watch after Champ," Autry added.

The socially-secure nag is actually the second Champion, the first having died in 1945 at 16 years.

Champion II now is four years old and will perform another 13 years before retiring to clip coupons.

"The Fallen Idol" (Korda) has finally realized this coast. It was too long coming, for similar U.S. films (especially, "The Widow") have robbed some of its impact. Still, it is a tasteful job with flawless acting (Ralph Richardson, Michele Morgan) and direction (Carol Reed).

Big Four Players Dominate Eastern All-Star Squad

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 25—(CP)— In case anyone remains unconvinced, the Canadian football team's role in top football league in the east was reaffirmed today when announcement of the 1949 all-eastern team showed it a virtual carbon copy of the big four all-stars.

Football writers and coaches in the rigid clinch selected the team and a second-string lineup for the Canadian Press, decided the intercollegiate and Ontario unions weren't in the same league. They also selected the Big Four All-stars to the 13 starting berths.

Ottawa's Rough Riders failed to drop Ottawa's Andy Gordon from his unanimous choice at halfback as real Alouettes for the quarterback position.

That mean Ottawa Rough Riders still won the most places with five players named. Alouettes caught four places, Hamilton Wildcats, again Eastern champ Iceland, at 23 still to reach his prime in a great football career, was the only Toronto Argonaut to make it.

The voting was weighted to give each player strength to each of the eight cities.

Here are the two mythical teams:

First Team

Bob Paffrath, Riders, flying wing; Royal Copeland, Argos, half; Howie Turner, Riders, half; Virgil Wagner, Alouettes, quarter; Don Loney, Riders, end; Eddie Michalowski, inside; Herb Trawick, Alouettes, middle; John Wagoner, Riders, middle; Tooby Alouettes, outside; Bob Hood, Wildcats, outside.

Second Team

Tom Casey, Wilcats, flying wing; Jack Parry, Western, half; Bob Cunningham, Alouettes, half; Bob McFarlane, Western, Hall; Andy Gordon, Riders, quarter; Jake Gaudaur, Tigers, snap; Don McCracken, Argos, inside; Fraser Morneau, Windsor, inside; Fraser Kirkland, Argos, middle; Joe Kirkland, Argos, middle; Tip Logan, Queen's, outside; Chuck Anderson, Alouettes, outside.

Three Candidates Shown

With first and second team choices counted on a 3-1 basis, the Big Four also took five of the second-string places. Of the other seven, Interprovincial stars won four and O.R.F.U. three.

As on the Big-Four All-Stars, the only three Canadians to win first-team places were Copeland, scrappy outside Ralph Cosby of Alouettes and Don Loney, the powerful Ottawa snap. Besides their nine starting positions, United States imports gained four second-team places.

The starting backfield gives Flichock a halftime that lacks nothing. All four are great all-round performers but each has his specialty. The Riders' Bob Paffrath from Redwood Falls, Minn., is the blocker. Howie Turner, his teammate from Rocky Mount., N.C., is the punter. Virgil Wagner, Alouettes great star from Belleville, Ill., is the plunger; Copeland is the dazzling inside-field runner.

The two Wildcats are the only newcomers to all-eastern honors. Vince Scott, a 24-year-old inside from Redwood Falls, Minn., is the blocker. Howie Turner, his teammate from Rocky Mount., N.C., is the punter. Virgil Wagner, Alouettes great star from Belleville, Ill., is the plunger; Copeland is the dazzling inside-field runner.

The two Wildcats are the only newcomers to all-eastern honors. Vince Scott, a 24-year-old inside from Leroy, N.Y., played with Notre Dame and Buffalo Bills. Pass-catching end Bob (Robin) Hood, Tom Gladden, Buffalo, performed in both the Rose and Sugar Bowls for Universities of Alabama.

Inside Eddie Michalowski and middle John Wagoner both made their first appearance in the second line in a row since coming to Ottawa last year. Eddie from Wilmington, Del., and John from Gibsonville, N.C., Herb Trawick, the big Pittsburgh Negro, has been selected ever since coming to Alouettes four years ago, as has Wagner.

Wagner, Trawick Popular

Wagner and Trawick were the most popular choices. Wagner, the east's top scorer for four seasons, gained 127 of the 130 votes cast. Trawick had only one less.

An oddity was the selection of Chuck Anderson to a second-team end position. The husky Negro, who made the Western All-Stars last season at centre for Calgary, won't be playing against the Stampeders in the Dominion final tomorrow because he was a surplus Alouette import under Canadian Rugby Union rules allowing five.

Other Americans chosen to the second squad were Tom Casey, the Wildcats flashy Negro triple-threat; Joe Kirkland, the 230-pound Argo middle, and Gordon, the Riders' passer from Villanova University. Gordon barely got the call over George Arnott of Western.

Even though the college league twice tested its first-class clay, the selectors chose Jack Parry, Western's triple-threat half; Bob McFarlane, Western, Hall; Andy Gordon, Riders, quarter; Jake Gaudaur, Tigers, snap; Don McCracken, Argos, inside; Fraser Morneau, Windsor, inside; Fraser Kirkland, Argos, middle; Joe Kirkland, Argos, middle; Tip Logan, Queen's, outside; Chuck Anderson, Alouettes, outside.

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle:

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma had to call me to supper 2 times on account of me being up to the last 2 chapters of my new lybrery book, and Christopher Columbus was still flying over Spain and nobody knew if there was enough fuel left to get away safe or not, and after supper in the living room ma said to pop, I suppose wild horses and all the king's men couldn't drag Benny to his homework before he reads those last 2 chapters.

I think that's very smart of him, pop said. He knows it's hard enough for him to keep his mind on one thing at a time, much less two, now can he also do a good job on his lessons while the siren voices of those grindstone a whole hour past his bedtime.

Aw, like fun, I said. I'm going to do my homework ferst and then finish my book when I can enjoy it with a free mind, I said.

probably a plot but not wanting to take any chances.

Which I did, thinking it was

RAWDON

Rawdon—Stirling Wadtre was filled almost to capacity on Wednesday evening last when West Hastings district W.I. met the leadership of their new president Mrs. Roy Fuhr. There is a member of River Valley W.I.) held a large rally of the eight institutes in the district and entertained as their guests the new Canadians at Stirling.

The officers of the district were in charge of all the duties in connection with the event and by 8 p.m. the huge crowd were seated and all in readiness to enjoy the good things in store.

Officers Present

Seated on the platform with Mrs. Bush were district officers Mrs. Sam Hutchison of Wallbridge, past president; Mrs. Geo. Burkitt of Uniondale, 1st vice president; Mrs. E. B. Fisher of Chatterton, secretary treasurer; Mrs. Melville Sine of Uniondale federated representative; Mrs. Louis Rodgers of Stirling, delegate to Area convention; Mrs. Clarence Holmes, of Bay of Quinte, past president federated Women's Institutes of Ontario.

The branch officers seated on the same platform were: Chatterton, Mrs. Ben Bleecker and Mrs. Loree Reid. Bay of Quinte, Mrs. John Reid and Mrs. Casey Ketchenon; Wallbridge, Mrs. Albert Fisher and Mrs. Harold Phillips; Ploegrove, Mrs. Frank Fiddy and Mrs. Harry Coulter, Uniondale, Mrs. Gerald Herrington; Stirling, Mrs. Henry Dafoe; River Valley, Mrs. Harold Morgan; Sidney Juniors, Miss Jean Morris.

Rally Makes For Fellowship

Mrs. Roy Bush capably welcomed the large assembly and said the rally was held as all the W.I. members of the district could become better acquainted, and that in the great program of citizenship and Canadianization, that as a district all could learn more about the new Canadians and become more friendly with them. She introduced the ladies seated on the platform and in the worship service the "Mary Stewart Collect" was read.

400,000 New Canadians

Mr. Arthur Duncan (one of Stirling's boys) who is now residing at Batawa, and is director of Public Relationship in that town was master of ceremonies and he spoke briefly. He said there were 400,000 new Canadians in Canada, and it was up to the people of the land to set a good example of citizenship to these people.

The Slovenian Glee Club were heard in outstanding choral work under the direction of Mr. Tozar, a recent arrival in Canada, under the Federal Department of Labor scheme who appeared twice on the programme. During this presentation the vast audience sat in almost perfect silence.

Mr. Jerry Collibet gave a solo act of athletic prowess.

National Dancers

Eight junior members of the Democratic Czechoslovak National Alliance of Canada presented a lengthy number of folk dancing in full national costumes. This group are all Canadians having been here ten years. Their beautiful costumes made a very pretty picture as they tripped to music provided by Miss Chicka. They were trained by Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Cheka.

Mr. Duncan told of the 300 such groups who gave a picture of the beauty of a flower garden as they presented their number on October 30th at "Soldiers Field" Chicago.

Gymnasts Demonstrate, "Parallel Bar"

A group of five gymnasts of the famous Sokol Gymnastic Club of Batawa directed by Mr. Jaroslev, Janecka of Batawa — who became a full-fledged Canadian citizen a year ago,—gave a splendid demonstration of "parallel bar work." These boys are not competitive, but co-operate, and firmly believe in working together, living together and playing toge'ther.

MEMBERS DRIVE FOR PROROGATION ON DECEMBER 3

Legislation Aimed At Plugging Loopholes

Ottawa, Nov. 26. (CP)—Members of the Commons, driving for prorogation by Dec. 3, Friday put on one of their most active sittings since the session opened Sept. 15.

The work ranged from adoption of a motion prolonging current sitting hours to passage of legislation aimed at plugging loopholes in Canada's Combines or anti-price-fixing act.

The Combines Bill was used by the opposition as the basis for a bitter attack on the government and Justice Minister Garson in particular, for the way they handled the now famous report on an alleged combine in the flourishing bakery trade.

The bill was adopted on division—without a formally recorded vote—and now goes to the Senate where it must receive three readings and royal assent before becoming law.

Earlier, members adopted a motion eliminating their half-holiday on Wednesdays and their Saturday holiday. They now will sit from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m., Mondays through Saturdays until prorogation, with one hour breaks for lunch and dinner.

Transport Minister St. Laurent made one exception and that was for today the house will rise at 6 p.m.

At the House opening, Finance Minister Abbott tabled correspondence which disclosed that the Saskatchewan government plans to take over rent controls next April 1. As a result of the move, the land increases announced by Mr. Abbott Nov. 3 will not go into effect in that province.

Study of estimates, the passage or advancement of some of the more minor legislation and another one-hour filibuster on pipe-line bills were among other developments during the sitting.

Clear and Cold Weather for Toronto Game

Toronto, Nov. 26 — (CP) — Bright sunshine and a temperature of 30 degrees was in prospect for this afternoon's East - West football game. A low of four degrees Friday night left the playing field at Varsity Stadium frozen hard but it softened somewhat this morning under the bright sun.

This morning workmen swept snow from the stands. Friday city equipment cleared the snow from the field. A light coating of snow remained in some places and the field executive said that it expected to mark the lines with the usual method of the cupfoundary white.

No fresh snow was expected before or during the game.

Continues Smoking While Car Turns Over Seven Times

Goderich, Nov. 26 (CP) — Councillor John Graham plunged over a 75-foot embankment in his automobile here Friday and continued smoking his pipe while the vehicle rolled over seven times. He ended up in the back seat — with the briar still in his mouth. Damage to the car: one cracked window.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Toronto, Nov. 26 — (CP) — Synopsis: Temperatures over Southern Ontario early this morning were the lowest of the season, between zero and 10 above, while below zero temperatures were general over the remainder of the province. A storm has been moving rapidly southeastward across the prairies and is now causing continuous snow over Manitoba and Northwestern Ontario, and freezing rain over North Dakota. Ahead of this storm temperatures will rise today over Ontario and snow will develop across southern regions by early afternoon.

Contact With Natural Phenomena Makes Islanders Superstitious

By RUPERT JACKSON
(Canadian Press Correspondent)
Leading Tickles, Nfld., Nov. 26 (CP)—Although Newfoundlanders hate to admit it, they are a superstitious bunch.

The fisherman's trade brings him into constant contact with the elements, and people the world over who are constantly in contact with natural phenomena are prone to superstition.

But it is no simple but lucky good luck symbol for the fishermen of Newfoundland. Of course they'll wear trinkets to guard them from the devil, little cloth figures dangling from their boat engines and the like, but the stronger superstitions of Newfoundland can prevent accidents, provide fresh fish, prevent sickness and many other things.

In the more remote parts of Labrador, the Eskimos go even further than that. If a child dies a live dog is buried with it, the dog to act as the child's guide to the other world. As the Eskimos says "a dog can find his way anywhere."

In most Newfoundland outports, there is no plumbing and water is drawn from a well in the back yard. Sons fishermen's wives would not stop even their bitterest enemies drawing water from the well, for this would put a curse on themselves or on some member of their families. The curse is that the person effected will die away from home, without chance to bring a drink of water.

A fisherman prefers not to stand alone on a crossroads after; midnight, and he'll never sit along on the bank of a brook or river. He will never pass a knife to a spitting knife without taking a small coin in exchange, because the knife and coin would sever the bonds of their friendship.

Fishermen will not go to sea sure cure for sore eyes. The seventh son of a seventh son is employed for cures for any disease and is better than any doctor. Any girl named Mary has the power to cure lumbago if the sufferer lies down on the floor and allows her to walk across his back.

The fishermen even have a substitute for insecticides: toss your baby through the fork of a Rowan tree and he will be immune from all infantile diseases.

Hunter Tramps Word 'Come' In Snow Near Shelter Hut, Where RCAF Crew Finds Him

Windsor, Nov. 26 — (CP) — Safely home after being lost six days in Manitoulin Island bushland in Northern Ontario, John Wolford, Windsor automobile plant worker, is making a good recovery from the effects of his ordeal. He lost his way during a hunting trip.

The 43-year-old Wolford was brought here Friday in the R. C. A. F. plane with which rescuers found him Thursday while cruising over the 43,000-acre Wikwemikong Indian Reserve. Wolford had tramped the word "come" in the snow near a hut in which he found shelter. Wolford told rescuers he had not eaten for six days.

Wolford stepped from the plane into the arms of his wife. He then introduced the aircraft crew to Mrs. Wolford, saying:

"This is the great crew that saved my life. These are the boys that got me. It's great to get back."

Indian trackers from the reservation, led by Chief Jos Pete Pangowish, scoured the dense bush country of the reserve's lower peninsula at the height of the search for Wolford.

Working closely with them under direction of Ontario Provincial Police officers were scores of district residents familiar with the rugged section, who set up search headquarters at the home of Jack Trudeau, game overseer on the Wikwemikong Reserve.

Wolford disappeared Nov. 18 after a boat carrying his hunting party was driven ashore. Companions said he wandered away from the group while repairs were being made to the boat.

W. German Pact With West Powers Seen as Great Stride Toward Peace, Rehabilitation

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press Analyst)

The new pact between the west German Republic and Britain, the United States and France looks to be a mighty stride toward peace and rehabilitation in western Europe.

This agreement is as close as the western powers could come to making a formal peace treaty with the Germans at present. Between east and west, it makes the Bonn Republic an integral part of the economic system which is being inaugurated in western Europe. It sees the terms of dismantlement of second - rate German industries, and in return the republic promises to co-operate in keeping down Germany's war potential.

Heart Burnings on Both Sides

Naturally the past months' achieved without heart burnings on both sides. Unhappy France has had to thrust some of her fears that the new Germany may revert to aggression. Britain and other countries see reduced trade revenues for themselves in Germany's rehabilitation. And the Germans are clamoring for easement of their burdens.

Obviously rehabilitation of Germany and its integration in the European Recovery set-up isn't an altogether altruistic project on the part of the western powers. It is a common-sense recognition of the fact that German industry is essential to the welfare of the rest of western Europe. That being so, the western Allies have to take the chance—and it may be a long one —that Germany won't get militaristic as she did after the First World War.

The British press, which has every right to be critical of any German concessions, in general approves the new agreement. The London Times calls it "a remarkable proof of good sense and statesmanship," and accords special praise to Foreign Secretary Konrad Adenauer.

"If he has done well for his country," says the Times, "he has also done well for Europe, and he has emerged as clearly the supreme court of Canada to rule on the validity of the federal rental controls.

The case is not expected to come before the court until some time next February. If the government's controls are upheld, they will be extended beyond the date of expiry, next March 31.

DUST STORM IN ALTA.

Edmonton, Nov. 26 — (CP) — An unseasonable dust storm Friday swept through southern Alberta and southwestern Saskatchewan. The storm, carried by a Pacific air disturbance, limited visibility in some fields for more than three hours at Medicine Hat, Alta., and brought gusts of wind up to 74 miles per hour at Lethbridge, further west.

Three Survivors Of Cruise Ship File Suit

New York, Nov. 26 — (CP) — Three survivors of the cruise-ship Noronic Friday filed suit for Canada Steamship Lines, Limited, Canada Steamship Lines, Limited part owner of the vessel, which burned to Toronto harbor Sept. 17 claiming 118 lives.

The three plaintiffs are Ben Katz, Max Norman Fields, and John R. Singyis, all of Cleveland, O. There was no mention in the papers of the nature of injuries received by the plaintiffs.

The suit charges that the fire "was due to the unseaworthy condition of the vessel." The papers allege that the unseaworthiness was due to the fact that the "walls were dangerously coated with paint, varnish and other inflammable materials."

The suit complains that there was no adequate sprinkler system or automatic fire-fighting means on board the ship, that there was no adequate fire watch and that fire hoses and other equipment "was in an unseaworthy condition."

The suit also claims negligence on the part of C.S.L. and a breach of contract in that the defendant did not provide the passengers with safe passage.

Katz is asking damages of $150,000 plus $475 for personal property lost as a result of the fire; Singyis is asking $100,000 plus $450 for personal property and Fields is claiming $100,000 plus $600.67 for personal effects. The suit was filed in New York because the C.S.L. has an office here.

CHURCHILL IMPROVING

London, Nov. 26 — (AP) — Winston Churchill's boss reported today he is "making progress" in his recovery from a bad cold which has kept him indoors all week.

Plan Expansion In Development Of Oil Production

Edmonton, Nov. 26—(CP)—Imperial Oil Limited, which this year put $30,000,000 into Alberta oil development, plans to match that amount next year, G. L. Stewart of Toronto, president announced Friday night.

Mr. Stewart said at a press conference:

1. There is an estimated 1,000,000,000 barrels of oil "in sight" in Alberta fields.

2. Imperial Golden Spike No. 4 test well, 7½ miles south of Edmonton, "looks comparable on first tests to its neighbor, Imperial Schoonyi No. 3, which is well in Canada.

3. There now are sufficient reserves in Alberta to produce 150,000 barrels daily for one-half the Canadian requirements. Lack of refineries and economic factors have restricted production to about 90,000 barrels daily.

4. Logical site for a further refinery with a capacity of possibly 100,000 barrels daily is Edmonton where Imperial Oil has purchased a site.

5. With completion next year of the interprovincial pipeline from Edmonton to Superior, Wis., Alberta production will be doubled. The oil will be shipped to Canada by boat from the pipeline terminal at Superior, Wis.

6. Oil will flow to Edmonton as company president, Mr. Stewart is accompanied by six executive officers from Toronto.

7. Imperial Alberta's production is still far short of the daily output of 2,000,000 barrels in Texas, there is no reason "to be" more fields in the province, he said.

In the 3½ years since the discovery of the Leduc field, reserves "in sight" have mounted to 1,000,000,000 barrels.

Estimated reserves at Leduc are 250,000,000 barrels, Mr. Stewart said. There "could be" 500,000,000 barrels at Redwater, another oilfields would more than make up the balance.

PROVINCES MAY HAVE CONTROL OVER RENTALS

Freedom of Action Allowed by Abbott

Ottawa, Nov. 26 (CP)—A new way has been opened for provinces to choke off the Dec. 15 rental increases.

Finance Minister Abbott has indicated unwillingness to maintain the rent status quo in any province that indicates it will take over rental controls next spring.

Thus Mr. Abbott has agreed to hikes for Saskatchewan which has informed the finance minister it will enter the rental fields next April 1.

Consider Matter

There was little immediate reaction for other provinces as to whether they will follow Saskatchewan's lead. Some, like Alberta, Manitoba and Quebec, said they would consider the matter.

Agreement in principle (on current rents) stellings in Saskatchewan was disclosed in correspondence between Mr. Abbott and Premier T. C. Douglas of Saskatchewan and and Premier Maurice Duplessis of Quebec tabled Friday in the commons.

The rental increases, scheduled to go into effect next year, will include hikes over current levels of 18 per cent for unheated self-contained flats, 15 per cent for houses and 22 per cent on heated accommodation, although the percent boost is authorized for rentcontrol areas.

For Uniformity Reasons

Mr. Douglas said Saskatchewan was entering the field even though it believed controls should remain in the hands of the dominion, because of "uniformity and other considerations."

But its faith had been shaken in the federal government's real intention of staying in the rentals field other than "in name only."

Meanwhile it was disclosed that the federal government has passed the rental order-in-council asking the supreme court of Canada to rule on the validity of the federal rental controls.

The case is not expected to come before the court until some time next February. If the government's controls are upheld, they will be extended beyond the date of expiry, next March 31.

GARGANTUA DIES

Miami, Fla., Nov. 26. (AP) — Gargantua the Great, frightful gorilla who awed 40,000,000 circus fans, died Friday in air-conditioned cage. He wasn't known just what killed the 550-pound, five-foot-nine gorilla, who had lived to the ripe old age for gorillas in captivity — of 19 up to 24 years. He had pneumonia, complicated by cancer.

Report Says Use of Vitamin E Of Little Value in Heart Disease

Toronto, Nov. 26 (CP)—The long controversy over the merits of vitamin E was said to end in certain heart conditions was revived today with publication of a report that it is practically of no value. The two London, Ont., doctors who have specialized in vitamin E treatment privately revealed that the report was meaningless.

The "report to the Medical College of Physicians and Surgeons, presented here Friday by Dr. Evan Shute, Greenwood, covered last treatment of 80 patients suffering from congestive heart failure over a period of three months at the Toronto General Hospital.

Dr. Wilfrid Shute said they had one half of the patients were given 300 milligrams per day of alp a tocop eral (vitamin E) and the other half were given identical capsules containing only an inert oil. The report compared results with patients using the different capsules.

It said: "The administration of vitamin E did not appear to influence the rate of clearing of fluid from the lungs any more did it appear to influence the incidence of recurrence of failure after discharge from hospital."

The report said that of 11 patients who died during the test period, six were on the vitamin capsule and five on the other. Of 44 instances where the patients showed signs of failure, 23 were on the vitamin capsule and 21 on the other.

Listing these and similar figures from the test, Dr. Greenwood's report said: "We cannot feel that the administration of high dosage (vitamin E) in a dosage of 300 milligrams daily has materially altered the course of heart failure in this group of patients."

But Wilfrid Shute and his brother, Dr. Evan Shute, founders of the Shute Foundation of London, Ont., and long advocates of the vitamin E treatment, suggested that the vitamin was "misused" in the Toronto test, and contended that Toronto doctors were prepared in advance to bring in an unfavorable report.

Dr. Wilfred Shute said they had consistently advised that vitamin E should be started with much smaller quantities than 300 milligrams per day, and that only one such an experiment as was performed by the Toronto General Hospital if he knew anything about vitamin E," he said.

Of the Toronto test as a whole Dr. Wilfred Shute said in a statement from London: "Calling it "The Toronto series of cases is ridiculously small. One would scarcely compare it to our experience, which is more than 100 times as great in point of number. When they say they have achieved no results, their report is a little too fantastic . . . something which gave no results can scarcely be considered a test at all. It was first announced."

Commons Passes Bill to Plug Loopholes in Combine Act

— (CP) — 90 "Yeas," "Nays" Prevailing—Act tightens up three western provinces is expected to be the first test of Canada's revised anti-price-fixing legislation.

The Commons Friday wound up one of the bitterest debates of the session by passing a bill to plug loopholes in the Combines Investigation Act.

A number of bakeries in British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan have been charged with conspiring to set uniformly high prices, an offence under the Combines Act.

Justice Minister Garson has indicated that the government was delaying prosecution until the bill to tighten the Act had been passed.

W. J. Browne (PC — St. John's West) expressed the hope that the bread industry will be prosecuted before the end of the two-year limit in which such prosecutions can be launched.

"If members will get busy and finish this bill we will prosecute right away," said Mr. Garson.

Within a few hours, the House rose for the week.

The main provision of the bill is to enable the government to get difficulties encountered by the prosecution in getting information on combines. It was accepted by the judge as evidence.

Such bills are usually aimed by the Combines Investigating Commission while it is investigating whether there is price-fixing in an industry.

Discussion Relieved

The commission is a branch of the government established for the specific job of investigating suspected industries with a view to establishing existence of an illegal price-fixing combine.

Last year some 1,900 documents of this kind were seized as evidence in a case against dental firms accused of attempting to eliminate competition in prices.

The judge said the prosecution must prove that letters it offered as evidence of price-fixing were written with the knowledge of the directors of the accused companies.

Elected Mayor On Way to See East-West Game

Toronto, Nov. 26 (CP)—Only through a flood of congratulatory messages is Don MacKay able to realize he has been elected mayor of Calgary, home of the Dominion football champion Stampeders.

When the ballots were still being counted in Calgary's civic election Wednesday, the 35-year-old mayor-elect was en route by air to Toronto to see the Stamps defend their crown against Montreal Alouettes in the Grey Cup final today.

"I have been thrown into it's whirlpool of activity, helping to promote the Calgary shows, and haven't had a chance to realize the full impact of what happened on election day," MacKay said Friday night in an interview.

Youngest ever elected civic magistrate in Calgary he said his ultimate goal would be to blend the best elements of both business and labor interest in giving the city the best possible government.

Attempt Reported On Party Leader In Colombia

Bogota, Colombia, Nov. 26 — (AP)—An assassination attempt on Liberal party leader Dario Echandia was reported Friday night as Colombia prepared for a disputed presidential election tomorrow.

Echandia, his party's presidential candidate until it called for a boycott of the election, apparently escaped injury. But two party colleagues with him were reported killed and his brother Vicente and his bodyguard were reported wounded.

The reports came from friends of Echandia. With Bogota under a nightly curfew to hold down pre-election violence, details were not immediately available.

Police action against Liberal demonstration, including firing of shots into the air, and a Liberal-called general stildown strike added to the tension here.

Conservative Laureano Gomes remained the only candidate in the voting 7 marrow in fill the presidency now held by Conservative Mariano Ospina Perez. The Liberals announced their election boycott after several hundred persons were reported killed in numerous clashes between Liberals and Conservatives. Each party blamed the other for the fighting.

Twice Friday crowds shouting "vivas" for the Liberals tried to assemble in main squares of Bogota.

Each time troops were rushed to the scene and charged the gathering mobs of people with their rifle butts. At bogle Warantoga, shots were fired over the heads of the hundreds of men, women and children.

At the firing, the demonstrators scattered quickly, many of them with their hands in the air.

Says Boy Who Ran Into Car Chased By Another Boy

Complaint that carelessness on the part of Boy Scouts chasing across Dundas Street without looking following Scout meetings at the Kiwanis building, was heard today from Dr. R. M. E. Ward, local dentist, who warned that such practices may possibly lead to a serious, if not fatal accident.

Thursday evening Dr. Ward was driving along Dundas Street during a downpour when a young boy ran into the side of his car as he attempted to cross the street. Fortunately the lad was not injured.

"It was only a miracle that I did not strike the boy," stated Dr. Ward. "As it was I managed to stop my car within about 20 feet but I might very easily have run over the boy."

Dr. Ward stated the boy who ran into his car was being chased by another boy in a game following the closing of a Scout meeting at the Kiwanis centre. He said he had observed the same carelessness on the part of the boys on other occasions following Scout meetings.

WHEN BABY COUGHS
When sickness strikes the youngest member of your family—the infant, your first thought may be to buy a simple remedy which has been recommended to you. So you visit your pharmacist and ask him, perhaps, for a cough preparation for the little one.

There is no legal restriction to prevent the pharmacist from selling you a cough syrup. But there is a strong, unwritten ethical obligation in Pharmacy which leads him to suggest diagnosis by a physician before any medicine is given to a coughing baby. This is exactly the same advice he gives his wife when their own child is sick—"Call the doctor."

Once the physician has diagnosed a baby's illness and prescribed the appropriate medicine., the pharmacist's responsibility begins. He renders his professional service to the little patient by preparing the prescribed medicine with skill and care acquired through years of scientific training.—Reprinted from a copyrighted advertisement published by Parke, Davis & Company.

The 700-ton Norwegian sealer Norsel has arrived in London, Eng., on her way to the Antarctic with a Norwegian-Swedish-British scientific expedition, including a Royal Air Force party. The scientists taking part in the enterprise (first international expedition to the Antarctic) will reach the Antarctic in January and will spend two years there. Northwest Rebellion Veteran, George Bey and Wife Celebrate Their Diamond Wedding

Veteran of the Northwest Rebellion and former foreman with the public works department in this city, Mr. George Bey, and Mrs. Bey, 43 Dundas Street, East, yesterday celebrated the 60th anniversary of their marriage.

Life in recent years has not been too kind to the couple who on November 25th back in 1889 exchanged their marriage vows at the home of the bride's parents in Tyendinaga township. In good health until four years ago Mrs. Bey then suffered a stroke and since has been completely blind. Mr. Bey is handicapped by rheumatism and is hard of hearing.

Born in the United States, Mr. Bey came to Canada as a boy with relatives. Mrs. Bey is the former Cynthia Marcle, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Marcle. Mrs. Bey is 77 and Mr. Bey 86 years of age.

Following their marriage Mr. Bey enlisted with the Midland Battalion and at a member of that battalion was sent West at the time of the Northwest rebellion to assist in putting down the uprising. He was in the West only four months but medals from that campaign are prize possessions of the elderly veteran.

Back in the east again Mr. Bey obtained work at Point Anne and 35 years ago moved to the city and since then has lived in the house he now occupies. Until 43 years ago he was foreman with the city public works and assisted in building many of the present sewers.

Mr. and Mrs. Bey have three children still living. They are Mrs. Clayton Potter of Vancouver, a daughter, and two sons, Arnold and Calvin, both of Belleville.

TRENTON

Mayor, Council Given Acclamation

Trenton, Nov. 26. (Special) Setting a record for nomination procedure at Trenton yesterday, one hour and 30 minutes after the meeting opened results were known and nominations closed for another term. Town clerk and Treasurer C. G. Lacy presided as returning officer and chairman of the meeting.

Apparently Trenton electors are satisfied with their civic heads since Mayor Kenneth Couch and all but one of the old councillors who resigned voluntarily earlier were returned to office by acclamation. Six nominations for School Board posts may cause an election since there are only three seats open for contest in the education field. Wayne Simmons, John Owens and J. D. Kinney are the newly nominated candidates for the Board of Education but up until this morning only one had qualified

The new council member Mr. Charles Allore was elected by acclamation as well. His nomination was moved by retiring councillor Gerald Wesver and seconded by Councillor Clarence Saylor.

Councillor Wesver asked to retire to devote his full time to mounting business obligations.

For Mayor Couch this is the fourth term as chief administrator.

Nomination results were as follows: Mayor, Kenneth Couch, (acc.); Council: Victor Ryan, Ross Burtt, Claude Graham, William Bradshaw, Clarence Saylor, Charles Allore (acc.). Public Utilities nomination: S. O. Graham (acc.), Public School Board (three to be elected): Lloyd York, Grant Hubbard, N. M. Sprague, Wayne Simmons, John Owens, J. D. Kinney.

Colder Weather Smaller Market

Jack Frost most certainly put a "quietus" on the outside market this morning, as produce was noticeable for its complete absence at an early hour. The inside market had a small showing.

Fowl, fine quality roasters ranged from 48 to 50 cents the pound, while yearling hens for stewing were 45 cents the pound.

Eggs were fairly plentiful with grade A large selling at 53 and 55 cents the dozen; grade A medium at 50, and grade A small at 45 and 48 cents the dozen.

In the fancy work department, aprons were $1.00 and $1.15 to $1.30 for overall adults. Children's aprons ranged from 75c to $1.00. Children's dresses were from $2.50 up, and wool knit dresses for one and two year olds were from $3.95 to $4.00. Sweaters, $2.25; bonnets $1.00 and fine knit mitts 60 cents. Three-year-old tam and mitts, $1.60. Hot dish pads 15 cents.

One vendor had several "Joy Loaf for Christmas" boards. These burn with different colored lights, and are exceptionally attractive.

Cakes were about the same as last week. Doughnuts, 40 cents; nut loaf, 40 cents; tarts, fruit, 50, white cooking, small size 2 dozen, large cookies, 20 cents the dozen. The few vegetables offered included cauliflower, at 15 to 25 cents each, according to size; little pepper mixed, 10 cents each; larger Hubbards at 25 cents each, and turnips at 10 and 15 cents each.

IN MEMORIAM

JURY — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather Charles Richard Jury, who passed away November 27th, 1948.
Memories are treasures no one can destroy.
Death is a heart ache nothing can cure.
Some may forget you now that you've gone,
But we shall remember no matter how long.
Wife, children and grandchildren.

NEWELL — In loving memory of our dear sister, who passed away November 28, 1948.
Time heals not a secret tear,
Keeps her memory ever dear.
Time takes away the edge of grief,
But memory turns the key every leaf.
Always remembered by sister Carrie and brothers Billy, Dan and John.
N36

NEWELL — In loving memory of our dear daughter, Patricia, who passed away November 28, 1948.
We who love you sadly miss you
As in memory we recall
In our lonely hours of thinking
You are always there.
Sadly remembered by mother and dad.

Kingston Man Killed in Crash

Kingston, Nov. 26 (CP)—Clair Palmer, 50, president of J. W. Palmer Motors Limited, Kingston, was killed Friday night on Highway No. 2, six miles west of the city, when the motor car he was driving hurtled into the rear of a parked transport.

Palmer was returning from Toronto where he had gone from Oshawa after taking part in a curling bonspiel. His new 1949 sedan crashed into the rear of a transport owned by Chuckrow and Sons, Inc., of Troy, N.Y., and was driven by Henry Jones, 31, of Troy. The truck also had an assistant driver, Sam Davis, of Troy.

Provincial Constable W. W. Alexander said the transport loaded with 600 cases of eggs, had stalled on the highway. The driver said, "I had run out of gas and I went to Kingston to get gas for them. When I returned Davis was just pouring the gas into the tank when there was a terrific crash. The front of the Palmer car went in underneath the rear of the transport, putting the rear wheels out of line. The car was crushed."

Traveller to West Coast Finds Saskatchewan Interesting Province

By M. HALSTEAD HORN
4th Installment

Failing to find accommodation in Yorkton, Sask., we continue on Highway No. 16 until nearly dusk, when we stop at a small town with a very comfortable small hotel. Right here we think I should explain that we have left behind us the hard surfaced highway and are travelling on gravel roads.

The province of Saskatchewan is very short of stone and gravel in sufficient quantities to make real highways and although the roads are really necessary if we are going to have our share of the tourist traffic, it is expensive to bring in those materials at present time.

When our prairies are more densely populated no doubt we shall have better highways out in the meantime we are losing much of the profitable tourist traffic because after driving over the hard surfaced roads it does not take much driving, over some of the roads to make one complain.

Leaving in the morning we continue on No. 16 to Dafoe. During the war years a large air training school was situated close to Dafoe, now most of the buildings have been sold and moved to other towns to be remodeled for homes to relieve the housing shortage. At Dafoe we turn north on No. 6 as we are going to Melfort situated in the Carrot River Valley, and where we lived for twenty-seven years.

Since leaving Clear Water Lake we have hurried along, our friends Mr. and Mrs. McPherson who live on a farm near Melfort, flew from Saskatoon to Toronto late in May and are returning with us. They are becoming anxious to be home as they run a large farm and then too the election is coming up.

Came to Melfort, during a nice warm rain and everything looks wonderful, it just we have not seen a crop anywhere on our trip.

As we are going to stay with the McPhersons on their farm we drive to their home and find everything fine, even a new car in the garage waiting to be driven. The following day my husband and I drive to Melfort a matter of twelve miles and what is twelve miles after the driving we have done.

We are welcomed by many friends but that was surprising as the west is one of the friendliest spots one can find. Everyone is anxious to know if we liked the east better than the west and I must admit I talked so much that I had a sore throat. It was nice to meet so many friends again.

I would like to tell you many things about Melfort and the district, but will only mention that the town is situated in a wealthy district, since the farmers around Melfort have never known a crop failure, the soil is black and rich.

When we first knew Melfort, there was more mixed farming than there is today. Many hogs were raised and one out of every seven grade A bacon type hog, shipped out of the dominion came from the Carrot River Valley. The hog special on Saturday mornings to Winnipeg usually carried forty-three cars. Sorry to say that is not the case now. Wheat is over two dollars a bushel is too tempting, why raise hogs with all the work connected with raising when wheat brings that price?

Making the McPherson home our headquarters we drive out and went as we pleased until after they had harvested their crop. They farm around two sections of land, 1,280 acres, using the most up-to-date machinery obtainable.

In 1918 we knew of farmers with eight hired men the year around, using sixty-four head of horses to farm three sections of land, 1,920 acres, and during harvest time employing twenty-eight men, some of those men coming from eastern provinces at reduced rates to help with the haying.

I remember one year when young men from the Old Country were given the opportunity to come and help, their fare being ten dollars. Now all that is changed, rubber-tired tractors, cab heaters and radios, have replaced the horses, tractor drawn and the combine have taken the place of the threshing mill and the stook team. One hundred and six self-propelled combines were distributed throughout the Melfort area this year 1949.

Mr. and Mrs. McPherson took off their own crop this year, hiring a neighbor's son, to drive the truck to haul the grain from the combine to the elevator or the farm granary.

They started as soon as the dew was off the grain, and having power lights on combines tractor, continued to work until late in the evening, often eleven o'clock before they called it a day. Where the acreage was larger, the outfits ran all night and it was a common sight to stand in the road in front of the McPherson farm and count nineteen outfits working. The country being so level the lights could be seen for miles.

Throughout the Carrot River Valley crops were excellent and varied from twenty-five to forty-five bushels per acre. The weather was ideal, sunny and warm days and cool nights. Of course, the prairies are blessed with cool nights, except for probably two or four during the summer and we speak of them as Ontario nights.

I would like to mention the beautiful sunsets. Due partly to our crystal clear atmosphere, the sunsets and afterglow are especially lovely. Were you to see on canvas a painting of a western sunset, I would not blame you if you remarked, "Oh, that is much overdone, or what a dream!" In words of mine can do justice to the picture in the clouds of unsurpassing beauty, put there by the artist Mother Nature who is most artistic in her use of those pastel shades combined with the most gorgeous golden crimson color. I have heard folk who have been away from the prairies remark on their return, "Oh, how I missed the sunsets."

Often at night we have an equally gorgeous display of color in the Northern Lights. I have seen them stretching across the heavens in long, fleecy drapes, that ripple and change color from all the opalescent hues to the deepest crimsons, they fascinate me and are a beautiful sight never to be forgotten.

There are many other things I would like to tell you about but I must hurry on, as we wish to spend a few days in Saskatoon. We drive on highways 3 to St. Louis then No. 2 to the junction with No. 5, into Saskatoon it is around 168 miles so we decide to go by No. 6 to the junction with No. 5, and into Saskatoon as it is on a different route, but I cannot say we were any better off, we state a place of note and also plenty of rain, and believe me I feel the province really needed more black top highways.

Saskatoon is a beautiful, clean city of sixty thousand population. I first saw the city in 1913 and many changes have taken place since then. They have wide paved streets, well lighted, modern business blocks and numerous hotels, plenty of shops, fine stores and grocery stores and for mildly a very fine shopping centre. The government storage elevator, Quaker Oats milling plant, Saskatchewan pool elevator and flax mill are situated within the city limits. There are several fine parks, also a swimming pool for the children, while one of the women's organizations took after Memorial Avenue where a tree with a memorial tablet is planted in memory of the boys who never returned. Another memorial is the Cenotaph near 2nd Avenue with a beautiful chimes clock that strikes every hour and half hours also the quarter hour.

The south Saskatchewan river flows through the city and a few years ago it was dammed to provide an adequate supply of water and to provide water for boating as well. Saskatchewan is a word of Indian origin meaning "muddy water."

A couple of miles out at Sutherland is the experimental farm and forestry farm and in the summer, one can take his picnic basket out and spend the day as the grounds are spacious and very beautiful with shade trees and flowers.

Saskatoon is on the Class A fair circuit and the fair, held usually in July lasts for a week.

The large C.N.R. hotel is built on the bank of the Saskatchewan River, the entrance facing the avenue while the rear opens on to the sunken gardens, leading to the river. The civic body is landscaping on both banks of the river on either side of the hotel to form a grand park where band concerts are held during the summer months.

Saskatoon has always been very keen on sports and there is a large curling rink with artificial ice and a big hospital is to be built soon after the new year.

A large arena with artificial ice is provided for hockey and skating and many of the top stars in hockey today have played on ice in Saskatoon. Before the war special trains carried hockey enthusiasts in to see the regular games and later the playoffs.

There are many up-to-date brick schools, the higher education there is the Technical school, the University of Saskatchewan, Emmanuel College, The Convent and the Normal School.

During the war there was a large air training school in Saskatoon and the Normal School building was used to accommodate some of those in training Saskatoon is on the Trans-Canada air route and the prairie people are becoming very much air-minded.

There are many beautiful churches practically every denomination being represented. There are two modern up-to-date hospitals in the city. I would like to mention that around seventy-five per cent of the students attending the university are from the homes of our new Canadians.

There are many beautiful homes in the city and many more are being constructed and one thing you will notice are the beautiful gardens. The western people are very fond of flowers and there is keen competition for Saskatoon for the prize given for the best front garden and also for the best back garden. It is a city of many trees, poplar, weeping willow, golden willow, and silver maple with some Mountain Ash.

Tabernacle Ch. To Dedicate Chancel, Organ

Tabernacle United Church will celebrate its 139th anniversary on Sunday. The services both morning and evening are of great significance to members and friends of the congregation. During the past five months the church has been undergoing considerable renovation. A new Wurlitzer electric organ, has been installed also a new Chancel, complete with furnishings. A complete new lighting system has also been introduced. These are to be dedicated at the morning service as a memorial to those who gave their lives in the Second World War.

Wing Commander Rev. R. M. Frayne B.A., B.D., guest speaker of the day, will dedicate the renovated church, assisted by Brigadier Fraser Pullen and Lieut.-Com. J. A. Jarvis. Mr. A. D. Archbold, organist and choir director will present the new installations for dedication.

The choir, under the direction of Mr. Ted Robbins, with Mrs. M. C. Duff as soloist will render a generous program of appropriate music. Mrs. J. D. Kilpatrick will be guest soloist.

Hardy Lilies should hold a place in our gardens quite as important as roses. Until quite recently we failed to realize much about this great family of plants which for their sheer beauty, grace and loveliness should hold a prominent place in garden planting. They are easy to grow with an understanding of soil preparation. The wide list of bulbs that are available permits the beginner to select many kinds and colours to suit his individual taste.

Above is illustrated a Japanese Lily of challenging beauty, comparable to the Madonna Lily, and the famous "Golden Lily of Japan", known as Lilium Auratum.

Secure proper drainage and rich loam. They prefer light shade and a ground cover to keep the soil cool. Our catalogue contains directions for proper depth to plant. This varies with the variety.

GROWTH IN THIS AREA

Important changes and developments have come in the Trenton area and for that matter in all this district, in the past few years. The growth of the R.C.A.F. base next to Trenton with the latest development of an important community for the personnel of the air base is of great significance.

Somewhat north of Trenton Batawa came into being a number of years ago and has grown to a community which is playing a part in industrial, business and community life of the district and Province.

Belleville's expansion to the east and west and north is another development which has come within the twelve mile area during the waterfront from Trenton to Belleville and from the water front northward to Bayawa.

The growth is phenomenal and yet steady. The air base establishment is permanent and the situation in Belleville, Trenton and Batawa is promising of continued growth.

DICKENS AND LONDON

Charles Dickens, that great Victorian novelist whose characters are known to all English-speaking peoples, is in the news again, says Stratford Beacon Herald. One hundred years ago the first of the monthly parts of "David Copperfield" was published on a local lady. By a strange coincidence a house in which Dickens lived for some time is for sale at the moment, and Dickens lovers hope it may be bought and turned into a permanent memorial to the novelist. The house, which overlooks the harbor, is a well-known landmark in the town.

There have been Dickens developments in London, too. Readers of "Pickwick Papers" may remember that on one occasion Mr. Pickwick was asked "Where do you hang out?", and he replied that he was "at present suspended at the George and Vulture." Now the George and Vulture was no creation of the author's imagination. Its name can be found in the London telephone directory today and one can eat there now, just as Charles Dickens did a hundred years ago. It stands, as a matter of fact, in a courtyard just off Lombard Street, in the heart of the city, guarding within its doors the true atmosphere of the Victorian chophouse.

Well, in this chop-house there meets this Autumn for the first time for ten years what is known as the City Pickwick Club — a number of Dickens enthusiasts meet to dine here in the true Dickensian fashion. The club was founded in 1909, but its meetings were suspended during the Second World War, and it will be a happy day when the members meet once more and address each other again by their adopted names, as Mr. Jingle, Mr. Snodgrass and Mr. Pickwick!

PERSONAL INCOME TAX

Analysis of its affairs for the year 1947 by the Department of Revenue tells us that that period Canadians paid $1,297,999,404 in personal income tax — the largest sum on record.

That year 139 persons reported taxable incomes of more than $100,000. They had, these 139 Canadians, a combined income of $22,468,000 and on it they had paid total taxes of $13,942,000.

These presumably are "the rich" so many good people want to see "soaked." Well, they were soaked in 1947 to the extent of about two-thirds of their income, and if the Government had taken every cent of that income the Treasury would have had no more than an extra $8,500,000.

It is true that these fortunate Canadians had an average of some $60,000 left after income taxes, and we are not suggesting that in the circumstances they were over-taxed. But the figures do show, we think, the unreality of the sort of thinking which has it that if only we compelled the big fellows to pay more we could relieve the little fellows of a large part of their tax burden. That just doesn't work out, because there are so few rich and so many ordinary people. —Ottawa Evening Journal.

I hope I shall always possess firmness and virtue enough to maintain what I consider the most enviable of all titles, the character of an honest man. — Washington.

But now that I have life to lose
I do not want to die."

God sends His children down to earth
For purposes He hides,
The hour for all of death and birth
The God alone decides.

"Not now! Not now!" to God we pray.
"Renew the failing breath.
Upon the earth we'd longer stay,
It seems too soon for death."

By birth we reach this world of men,
By death we're called away.
To come, to go — the moment when
Is left for God to say.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

PEOPLE AS MERCHANDISE

The salesman's best sale is that one in which he has first sold himself. Selling, in only a matter of time, or merit, that a sale of the product offered is completed. A clerk in a store can either repel or attract a possible customer, by the manner of his approach.

We even buy our friends. Not in any material sense, however. We pay in pleasantness, sincerity and friendship when buying personality. These are things that are not matters of money or of stock. They are of the quality of people — something of craftsmen in appearance rather than the most exquisite spun product of the weaver of gold.

The one out of a job has himself alone to sell. And when he does a good turn at this he usually does a good turn for his firm in the selling of their ideas, and products as well. That's the way it works. Invisible ideas are carver at work, too. People put themselves into their product, thus becoming invisible merchandise. It may be in the shape of a long established trade-mark, or the name of its creator, but there it is to give a guarantee of worth and genuineness.

We make our own worth in this world. Often it takes a long time before it is given proper appreciement, but that should bother none of us, so long as we're conscious of our own worth, and demonstrate it sincerely each day of our lives. What is superior to personal appreciement is the spirit is higher in value than to own a friend or several.

Take our beautiful antique furniture for an example. Most of it takes the name of the designer and early maker. Those craftsmen put themselves into what they made. And this in true of every good piece of work the creator buries something of himself within. That part is priceless.

Ideas, and the skill of people can be bought, but not their souls, their loyalty, and their interest beyond the pay envelope. These latter are what they give freely and happily. That's what makes people so outstanding in a material world.

On the Resources Department estimates, George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, urged establishment of a royal commission or a parliamentary committee to "protect the rights of mining" full citizenship rights and equal advancement opportunities to Canada's Indians.

He said the Indian population is increasing rather than decreasing and no time should be lost in giving every Indian boy and girl educational opportunities equal to those of any other child in Canada.

He had met Indians all across Canada and felt that, given education and equal opportunities they could take their full place in society.

In Ontario, for instance, there were Indians prominent in various professions. It was examples such as these that showed that parliament had a responsibility to extend a helping hand to the citizenship to those whose background was so much a part of this country.

Mr. Drew said he thought the first move could not be made "rashly". Because of the "deplorable state that already had been given, there were some obstacles in the way of the move.

"Education was a provincial matter, but more than provincial education was needed. The education had to be given the surrounding where the Indians could feel at ease they got out of it they would be able to put their learning to good use.

Rate Increase

Transport Minister of the State Secretary's Department, State Secretary Bradley said the rate of promotion in the civil service from Assistant to Chief Clerk from now will be increased. There now are 1,000 assistants to the number of 77,000 (temporary.

Mr. Macdonald a bill authorizing federal subsidy of $15,000,000 to assist in construction of an all-Canada railway line through the Great Eastern Railway in British Columbia.

Members adopted a bill authorizing the government to nationalize all the assets of the communication facilities. Under this bill Canada will be a party of a treaty with other commonwealth countries under which they agreed to nationalize such facilities.

Assets of the Canadian Marconi Company, and the Canadian interests of Cable and Wireless, Ltd., a United States company, will be expropriated and placed in the hands of the proposed new Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation.

In the second debate on pipe lines, members blocked passage of a bill to incorporate the Alberta Natural Gas Company. It is one of two companies seeking incorporation. The other is Prairie Transmission Lines Limited.

The debate marked the sixth time in a row that the measures have failed to advance. Opposition is to plans of companies to run their pipe lines from Alberta gas field through United States territory before serving British Columbia.

Tells of Decision To Take Canadians To Train in U.K.

Toronto, Nov. 26—(CP)—Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, former commander of the Canadian Army Overseas, said Thursday night that but for the insistence of a statesman, a diplomat and a soldier, Canadian troops might have bypassed the United Kingdom to fight on the Continent without retraining.

Addressing members of the Empire Club of Toronto, Gen. Crerar said Winston Churchill, then First Lord of the Admiralty, was reluctant to assume the responsibility of bringing Canadian troops through the submarine-infested waters of the North Atlantic.

He said he and Minor Minister T. A. Crerar (no relation to the General), Canada's representative at the Dominions Conference in London, and Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner to London, arranged a special conference with Churchill.

Cities Revert To Standard Time

(By The Canadian Press)

The confusion caused by Standard Time in one place and Daylight Saving Time in another will be finally over tonight — for the very moment.

The last Ontario cities keeping Daylight Time put the clocks an hour back to Standard Eastern Time tonight.

Most of the centres which adopted Daylight Time for the summer months switched back to Standard Time weeks ago, but many others remained on summer time as a power-saving measure.

Reverting to Standard Time are Toronto, Oshawa, Peterborough, Belleville, Oshawa and Cornwall.

The official time change comes at 2 a.m. Sunday.

Those who revert back on Standard Time Nov. 6, and Galt switched back on Oct. 29. All others reverted on Sept. 25.

Houde, Colorful Montreal Mayor, Has Little to Say in Commons

By HAROLD MORRISON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Nov. 26—(CP)—Camillien Houde, colorful mayor of Montreal, has developed into one of parliament's big surprises.

Observers predicted before the session began that the round inexperienced member for the new riding of Papineau would toss Commons traditions overboard in bombshell, Montreal's chief magistrate has thrown a few crackers.

He's quietly in one corner of the chamber, saying little although the debate has turned from one controversy subject to another.

Friends and reporters have asked him when he proposes to make his maiden speech. He merely smiles and shakes his head.

Chances are, his friends now say disappointedly, the mayor won't even make his maiden speech in this session. He'll merely sit it out, listening and watching.

But when the next session comes along, some time next January or February, the fiery mayor of Montreal, who still appears to be feeling his way into parliamentary procedure, may make the fur fly.

Mr. Houde, who shies away from interviews, won't commit himself in so many words, but he leaves the impression that he will have a lot to say on such matters as Dominion - provincial constitutional conferences.

In fact he appears to be just biding his time on Dominion-provincial conference on the controversial question of unemployment insurance. One way he may use Jan. 10 and to find out what Primes Minister St. Laurent, has up his sleeve.

And he appears to be hoping that when the next session rolls around, the Supreme Court of Canada will have given a verdict on the validity of Dominion-provincial conferences on the controversial question of unemployment insurance. One way he may use Jan. 10 and to find out what Primes Minister St. Laurent, has up his sleeve.

DAMP LIVING ROOMS PERFECTLY HEALTHFUL

The present alleged housing shortage has created an unusual living arrangement for many persons. We hear of garages and attics being converted into living quarters and life in trailers has become commonplace.

Crowding, makeshift toilet facilities and lack of ventilation figure ominiously as health hazards in this confused state of affairs. The lack of facilities for frequent washing of the hands with soap and water is a menace under any circumstances. Lack of ventilation is the most prejudicible aid to the spreading of contagious disease.

The lack of heat is probably the least menacing, if menacing at all, of all the discomforts imposed upon people by living in undesirable quarters. The standard demand for artificial heat in this country is considerably beyond that of the average Americans visiting in England for instance, are frequently comfortable in an atmosphere quite acceptable to the natives. The British people subscribe to no nonsense about their cool houses being an advantage in preference to their health. As a matter or scientific fact, the temperature inside their houses has nothing to do with their health.

A great many persons forced by circumstances to live in basements appear to disregard such fixtures as ventilation, but view the element of dampness with great concern. The notion that in some manner the dampness gains access to the body and results in rheumatism is a common misconception, is very wide spread. "Catching cold in the back" is frequently attributed to living in damp rooms. All of this, of course, is absurd.

People thrive in regions of both high and low humidity. A damp room is merely an enclosed area of high humidity. People live their entire lives under high degrees of humidity, as for instance in the tropics, and in impunity. Workers in laundries, for instance, are not subject to any illness on account of the high degree of humidity in which they spend many hours each day. Actually, from the standpoint of humidity, they are much better off than those who spend their hours in abnormally dry areas. I repeat that dampness of the walls, ceiling, floors and air in a room in the basement or the doctor's office without detaining the patient from her ordinary activities and without giving any pain is as effective as the old fashioned and extremely uncomfortable operation in hospital.

Just within the past two or a model dairy enterprise," the three years, the back to the land reason is rather hard-boiled. You can't help but health and reason when his tire- become involved in all sorts of less patients besiege him. In cases social relationships that are essential to your business success. of real emergency he can be at After you reach the top, nothing hour away.

This is true also of businessmen. Two or three generations ago, the typical family living for successful businessmen to buy a farm in their elder years. But now it is the farm that has been born on the farm, and hankered after country life in their comfortable decline. The proportion of country-born men in the cities is far less, nowadays. But the number of men with money to spend on their harvest is in fact growing.

"In my case," admitted a very prosperous industrialist who bought a farm and turned it into this session. He'll merely sit it out, listening and watching.

Strength for the Day

CAN YOU MAKE IT WORK?

Dr. Wilfred Grenfell was one of the great figures of the closing decades of the 19th centuries. He was a physician who left a comfortable practice in London to go to bleak Labrador where there was no physician and where a forgotten segment of humanity endured pain and suffering which was indescribable. Here, he remained the whole of his adult life, and died leaving behind him a beautiful memory. He was a man of deep religious convictions and best of all he lived his religion every day.

Here is what he says about religion: "Absolutely the only value of our religious life to ourselves or to anyone is what it fits us for and enables us to do, Creeds, when expressed only in words, clothes, or an abnormal life, are daily growing less acceptable as passports to Paradise. What my particular intellect can accept cannot commend me to God. His 'well done' is only spoken to the man who 'wills to do His will'."

Religion is not the complicated matter we often imagine it is. In fact, it is so simple a child can understand it. But only the utterly sincere can make it work.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A Girl Who Needs an Understanding Mother

Dear Miss Fairfax:

What is a girl supposed to do when she has a mother who just isn't understanding at all? All my mother does is nag and nag. I guess like most girls, I want a mother with whom I can talk over all my problems but I have to face any trouble by myself.

Wherever I buy some new clothes she always says, "You're always asking your father for money. You get everywhere you want, and all you ever do is buy clothes when you already have so many," which is untrue. I don't have half the things other girls do. Also, when I'm on the phone she never fails to say, "All you do is talk on the phone".

I don't like saying this, but my mother has made me dislike her very much. Will you tell me what to do before I decide to join the service so I can get away from this house, because I feel I just can't stand it any longer?

U.

Dear "U.":

The first thing I always wonder when I read a letter like yours is whether or not the daughter, on her side, has done everything she should to show her mother that she is a responsible and considerate person. You may be this sort of girl and have done your part in trying to be a companion to your mother. On the other hand, do you think there is any possibility that you behave in a way that makes your mother consider you still a child? That is something for you to think over and decide for yourself.

If, after thinking things over honestly, you feel that the trouble really is more on your mother's side than on yours, then what you should do is go to the wisest and most understanding older person you know, whether it's some relative, a teacher at school or the mother of some one of your friends, and talk your problem over with her. If you know a girl whose mother is the kind you would like to have, and who has the sort of relationship with her daughter that you want to have with your mother, then she would be the person for you to talk things over with.

Won't you try this and let me hear how you make out?

Returning Gifts When Engagement is Broken

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We are five girls who work together. One day we got on the subject of broken engagements. When a girl breaks an engagement, naturally she returns the ring, but we want to know if she should give back all the gifts people have given her. Some of us say she should, and some say she shouldn't. Who is right?

Five Undecided Girls

Dear Girls:

Standard etiquette says that when a girl breaks her engagement she should return any gifts of value that have been given to her.

Small personal things of little consequence, such as pieces of lingerie, guests towels and the like need not be returned.

Christmas Cards from Teacher

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I am a teacher in a public school of quite a large city . . . the children in my classes are very young children, I am devoted to them, and I am planning to send each one a Christmas card. Am I right in assuming that my signature should be "Margaret M. Duncan", (for example), and not "Miss Duncan", which is how the children know me, of course.

2. Should I send Christmas cards to my Jewish pupils as well as to the Christian ones?

"Teacher"

1. A signature should not have the title before the name. . . therefore "Miss Duncan" is not correct, and neither is "Miss Margaret Duncan". Correct is "Margaret Duncan". Or, if you prefer, (though it is not so gracious and friendly) "M. M. Duncan".

2. Since you are planning to send cards to some of the children, please send a card to every child in your class . . . this is very important, particularly for children of this tender age who are so joyous and eager about receiving cards. If convenient, choose a different design of card for each child, and, if you wish, give cards with "The Season's Greetings" to each Jewish child. (This year I have seen many especially charming cards with this greeting on them.)

The City and State Must Always be Given in Announcement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please settle these two arguments:

1. Is it absolutely necessary that, in formal announcements of a marriage, the names of the city and state where the marriage took place be given? (Or would it make a difference if the announcements were sent out quite a time after the marriage took place?)

2. When the couple themselves announce their marriage, should the formal phrase be used, "have the honor of announcing their marriage"? (This phrase was suggested by an engraver who insists it is advised by some etiquette authorities.

George W.

A. Yes! It is absolutely necessary, in a formal marriage announcement, to include the name of the city and state where the marriage took place. And it makes no difference in this rule that the announcements are not sent out directly after the marriage has taken place. (It is far better not to send out formal announcements than to send them incorrectly worded.)

2. I think the phrase "have the honor of announcing their marriage," used in the announcements sent by the couple themselves, seems rediculously stilted. And as a matter of fact, although this form is occasionally "suggested", I have never seen this form used in this type of marriage announcement. The customary form is:

announce their marriage

The fine and traditional form is: "have the honor of announcing" . . . is perfect for the usual announcement made by the bride's parents:

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wells have the honor of announcing the marriage of their daughter

But in recent years this fine form, even in this case, has been superceded by the brief "announce".

Keep Nails in Tip-Top Condition

Martha Hyer, screen star, likes to manicure her own nails in between regular trips to the beauty shop. After careful cleaning, shaping, she applies polish.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Fastidious care of the finger nails is as necessary as fastidious care of the hair, even more so as soiled eaves may harbor bacteria, be a menace to the health. Manicurists say that the use of rosy polish has made some girls careless about keeping the eaves beautifully clean, that the surrounding cuticle is not creamed as it should be. Appearance isn't everything. Nails suffer from neglect, become thicker, show ridges.

Professional grooming, by a conscientious operator, isn't the whole story either, because a three-minutes friction with cream every night is a part of every woman's beauty duties. By brisk massage the underlying flesh is nourished by the blood streams and the nail fabric is kept in condition. Do not get the idea that cream will cause polish to go patchy; it won't. You cannot put the bright veneer on a creamed surface, but you can use cream without dimming the glow.

By frequent anointing, the surrounding flesh is kept pliable and free of the nails. If it clings at any point it will break in time; then you'll have hangnails.

If you finish up any shreds with the orange wood stick work them free and remove with the curved needle point scissors. When buying manicure instruments of any kind, do not economize. Buy those of high grade steel. They last a lifetime.

If manicure scissors become dull, take them to a store where barber shop supplies are sold, they will be tightened and the blades sharpened.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMIESON

Excessive perspiration

Your preacher of pulchritude realizes that offensive perspiration is an unpleasant topic. But, as there are girls and women who seem to be unaware of this affliction—that interferes so with social and business life—it seems necessary to touch upon it now and then. Also, there are pretty ladies who fancy that it is a matter that should receive attention only in the summer season. It ain't so! Wool frocks and sweaters can cause as much moisture in the armpits as summer heat.

While the daily bath is a health and beauty measure, it may not prevent this affliction. Cleanliness, of course, is the first law of daintiness and grooming. Fastidious bathers usually have fresh, colorless complexions, because a rousing scrubbing with soap suds and a brush, every single day, helps the skin to function normally as an organ of elimination and removes dead cells to which sweat deposits cling.

Perspiration is not just a liquid product. It contains chemicals that remain on the flesh after the moisture evaporates. These chemicals can only be removed by friction, and that is why a bath brush with firm bristles should be employed. After the bath there should be a drying with a coarse towel that takes hold with a grip.

Every woman should play safe use a deterrent or deodorant in the armpits. These toiletries come in various forms—creams lotions and powders. If one doesn't do the business, another one will. It is important that one should read the directions carefully. Some of the liquids close the pores, need to be used only occasionally. There is no danger to the health. There are millions of pores elsewhere to carry on.

An unstable nervous system can cause excessive sweating, of the city and state where the marriage took place. And it makes

Moist palms are traced directly to nervous tension. In such cases a girl must set her physical house in order by learning to breathe deeply, by getting outdoor exercise every day, by cultivating mental hygiene, never cutting down on the regular eight hours of sleep at night. Nervousness is usually caused by some form of fear, and fear is devastating, not only to health and happiness, but to appearance.

Air your wool frocks before hanging them in the closet.

If you suspect that you offend, air your wool frocks before hanging them in the closet. Change undies often, stockings every day. Don't fancy that the use of perfume will disguise the odor of perspiration! It won't. You cannot cover up one odor with another.

'Y' Bridge Club Elects Officers

Six tables were in full swing at the Y.M.C.A. Bridge Club on Tuesday night. During the evening the following were elected to head the club for the coming year: chairman, Bruce McGregor, vice-chairman, Jean Vickers; secretary treasurer, Vera Keegan, social convener, Rita Harrison.

Mr. and Mrs. A. R. May, Bruce McGregor, and Tim Meeus gave bridge instruction, both fundamental and advanced theory, to all those who desired some coaching. Certain tables were set aside for beginners while instruction at other tables was for more advanced players. A friendly competition took place at the remaining tables, and it was decided that in future weeks the evening would close with refreshments.

To join the Y.M.C.A. Bridge Club one must take out a two dollar basic membership in the association. This entitles the member to join in all the social and educational features for a twelve month period. A pleasant evening of bridge, including instruction, general play, and a happy fellowship with others, is planned, and the Y.M.C.A. invites all interested people to join this Thursday night club.

PINE GROVE WI.

Pine Grove Women's Institute met for their November meeting at Mr. J. Marshall's home, Oak Lake, with Mrs. F. Pinkle, presiding.

Mrs. H. Coulter showed copies of the following books which are obtainable from the Ontario Department of Agriculture for a charge of request and are highly recommended by Miss Anna E. Lewis, provincial director:

"Your Money's Worth in Foods"; "Salads All the Year Round"; "Canning Ontario's Fruits and Vegetables" and "School Lunch Dishes."

Mrs. F. Campbell reported on the sending of food parcels to Britain and on motion of Mrs. F. Lindenfield it was decided to purchase ten dollars worth of food to be sent as soon as possible.

The secretary reported on the supper held in the school during November 11th and plans were laid for a similar one to be held on Thursday, December the second.

The sum of ten dollars is to be donated to the Sick Children's Hospital.

In the absence of Mrs. N. Parks Mrs. Bartlett had charge of the current events nothing many items of local interest.

Mrs. F. Pinkle then called on Mrs. F. Campbell, convener, to take charge of the remainder of the program.

Mrs. F. Lindenfield gave a reading "Canadian Education Week."

"The Best Is Yet To Be" by Mrs. G. E. Reaman was read by Mrs. H. Coulter, and "The Secret Builds the Nation" by Mrs. L. Pinkle.

Mrs. Campbell then went on to say, "Education now encompasses much more than the three R's. For centuries the structure of our society and civilization rested upon the three great pillars, home, church and school. But years have brought change. The self-sufficient worker and the self-sustaining community are disappearing and so in part is the home and family life. Instead of the simple life, mechanization, industrialization and urbanization have taken over. So as the powers and responsibility of the home and church have been diminished that of the school has increased in the training of youth. Many of our standard and school subjects are important chiefly to train in clear thinking for a good citizen in a thinking citizen."

In conclusion Mrs. Campbell quoted from Nicholas Murray Butler: "I have boiled down the importance of education to just two things: character and good manners. A man or a woman who can develop good character with good manners is educated because everything else will come. Without those two things there is no use of having scholarship. The school teachers because you cannot put anything with people who not do anything without these two all. have not developed these two important things—character and good manners."

The hostess and committee served delicious refreshments.

Women's Symphony Orchestra Unique in the Musical World

By ALBERT HUNTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Nov. 26 (CP)—Feminine "pulchritude" or "crying jags" are allowed when dark-haired Ethel Stark wields the baton.

"It's strictly music," she said of the Montreal Women's Symphony Orchestra, unique in the musical world.

No one has ever disputed their title — the only women's symphony, directed by a woman, in the world.

But despite their individuality and international recognition, they are laboring under a two-fold handicap.

"There's the old buzzbox, lack of finance, and everyone knows why of treatment," the attractive conductor said in an interview, "and the 'petticoat' effect," she said, "but only for the first time. After that, the public comes to hear the music, not to see us."

"We don't want people prejudging us because we're women,"

she added, her grey-green eyes flashing. "We're content to stand on our own musical record."

When asked how the women stand up under the strain of practice and public performances, she replied;

"I've directed both men and women, and I'll take the women any day. They're hard, willing workers, and can stand the strain better than men".

The hard work paid off in 1947 when the orchestra played to a packed Carnegie Hall, the first Canadian Symphony ever to play there. Since then it has received "stacks of offers" from all parts of the world, requiring payment of fares. But so far, the cost of travel and maintenance has been prohibitive.

Miss Stark — the only unpaid member of the orchestra—recently returned from a European tour as guest conductor and soloist in Belgium, France, Italy, Switzerland and Austria.

Local Association

On Monday evening at the home of the Commissioner, Mrs. J. Watson, the executive of the Girl Guide Local Association, held their first meeting for this season. The minutes of the last executive meeting were read and approved, together with the treasurer's report. The Commissioner asked that the various chairmen would have prepared their respective reports to be presented at the annual meeting of the Association to be held early in the New Year, when we hope the Leaders of Guides and Brownies will be present. The Commissioner reported there were 140 Brownies and 75 Guides in Belleville, with a waiting list in several instances and the hope of other packs and companies being formed in the near future.

Company 1 Girl Guides

Last Tuesday was the day of a big event for the 1st Belleville Company. Over 100 Brownies Guides, Recruits and Leaders, gathered at St. Thomas' Parish House for a big "Flying-up" Ceremony.

Twelve Brownies were very excited and proud as their Brown Owls pinned on the new wings, and in the delightful words of the ceremony told them to "take their Brownie grin and some Brownie magic in" to the Guiding. Then having been challenged at the horseshoe by Diana Lewis, Company Leader, each Brownie shook hands with captain and lieutenant and took her place in the Guide horseshoe.

Mrs. J. Watson, commissioner, who was in charge of the meeting, spoke a few words to the gathering, and as a very nice surprise presented the company with its warrant. After the "Flying-up" the Brownies gave the new company a wonderful Grand Howl. Then everybody joined in singing the hymn beloved of Brownies "Jesus Bids Us Shine", and Mrs. Watson said a Brownie prayer.

After an exciting game, everyone settled down to listen to a delightful story told by Brown Owl, Mrs. Leach of Pack 4. All were spellbound by the adventures of the gallant little Wee Scot with the wonderful satchel, which held all his loyal friends—the fox, and the wolf, the ladder and the river, and the bees! The meeting was brought to a close with a big sing-song and the singing of Brownie Taps.

Brownies who received their wings were as follows—Pack 1, Josephine Fulton, Marjorie Ann Clark; Pack 2, Sondrya Ann Hantle; Pack 3, Margaret Brandt, Dorothy Kelsey, Loren Donaldson, Anne Forrester, Adrienne Campbell, Sheila Kells; Pack 4, Kennedy; Pack 4, Beverley Brown, Betty Jane McLuskie.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

By WINIFRED E. WILSON

OUR DESTRUCTIVE HAWK

Very unfortunately Hawks in general have a bad reputation, yet the majority are quite innocuous—even beneficial. The member of the family chiefly responsible for this is the handsome but destructive Goshawk, largest of the three species placed under the heading "Accipiters," all of which are capacious. Because of greater size, it does by far the most damage. We may be thankful that this destructive bird is not to be found in settled districts except from late fall until early spring. Only when food becomes scarce do the breeding grounds fall reach across the northern part of the continent. Then does this hardy Hawk move south.

To the majority of us any Hawk is simply "a Hawk." As one is seldom seen to rest, and close by is important to learn how to recognize each kind by its silhouette and manner of flight when passing overhead. Accipiters' tails are long and narrow, their wings short and rounded; they progress by alternately flapping and sailing, with a minimum amount of soaring.

The savageness of a mother bear is penalized only too well by anyone foolish enough to climb near her nest. Her terrible talons can pierce right through a leather coat. The home is usually in a cavern in the breeding woods, and placed about 35 feet from the ground. Nestlings are born helpless, naked, and blind. Effects of Alcohol On Body Discussed By W.C.T.U. Group

The November meeting of the W.C.T.U. was held in the Y.M.C.A. reception room. The president, Mrs. Farnsworth, conducted the opening exercises. Mrs. MacFarlane had charge of the devotional period, and took as her theme the parable of the Sower" and in closing, read the poem "What Then?" written by Burt L. Pice for the "Shantyman" a paper available to the men of the lumber camps.

The secretary's report stressed the importance of having "The Tidings" in every home. The treasurer's report followed showing $91.92 available for temperance work. It was decided to send $50 to the County treasurer and $50 to the Provincial treasurer.

Effects of Alcohol

Mrs. Bennett then presented chapter 2 of the study book dealing with the effects of alcohol on the circulatory system and on the different organs. It was interesting to learn that two-thirds of the weight is water and thirst results when the supply of water in the body is insufficient to care for all the purposes for which it is necessary.

Through the study of physiology and hygiene, it is learned that there are two chief body systems: the finely organized nervous system with its brain, its brain distributing channel, the spinal cord and network of nerve fibres; and the system of the body with means of message and reply. The circulating system of vessels, arteries and capillaries of which the heart is the great force pump, existing to nourish all the digestive system, in which different kinds of food are treated by different chemicals until the food is reduced to a substance which can be assimilated by the cells. Alcohol affects all these systems and the efficiency of the body.

More Alcohol Outlets

The Clip Sheet dealing with alcohol and crime was presented by Mrs. Gerstine, Mrs. Northcott, and Mrs. Mills.

At first there were seven cocktail bars on Yonge Street, Toronto. Now Eaton Kirk and Isn't that a tremendous increase? For the twelve months March 1945, the total liquor sales were $170,000,000. In 1948 they were up to $170,000,000. Is this increase not alarming? According to Easton Kirk, president of Acadia University, Canadians are now the most intemperate nation in the world.

Canadians should be ashamed and decide to end this increasing sale of beverage alcohol.

Why are men and women so indifferent? Women have a majority vote; why do they not awaken and use the franchise to crush the monster evil, 'Alcohol Beverages.'

MARIO ... in his distinctive feature about Food ... What's Cooking?

By the author of "THE FACE IN THE ASPIC"

King Midas would have turned into aluminum if he had lived 80 years ago.

This was the period when aluminum was more worth more than gold. Napoleon III used aluminum forks and spoons at his banquets befitting a man of his distinction.

The emperor, unhappily, didn't have enough aluminum to go all around his big table. He personally used the precious metal, while guests of lower rank had to be content with the more ordinary gold service.

It's an amazing fact that housewives still use this aluminum pots when heavy cast aluminum is available for all types of cooking. A thick aluminum pot, or one that's at least thick on the bottom, is absolutely necessary to provide slow even heat for most cooking purposes. It's the kind of cheap permanent investment that pays off in swell stews, sauces and braised dishes.

You can boil a stew or a pot roast in a thin pot at 212 degrees and the meat will be done, and not eaten. You can simmer it slowly in a heavy pot, at 190 degrees, and it will be fork-tender and will hold its shape.

Use your heavy aluminum pot or saucepan to braise a shoulder of veal. Just as beef is in mode is made with red wine, so this lighter meat is made with white wine.

VEAL A LA MODE

Serves 6

Have the butcher tie and bone a 3 pound cut of shoulder of veal for stewing.

Place the meat in a deep bowl. Add 1 cup tomato juice, 1 cup dry white wine, 1 sliced onion, 1 bay leaf, 1 clove garlic, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon pepper, 1-2 cup chopped onion, 1-2 cup chopped celery, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce.

Cover bowl and let meat remain in liquid 24 hours. Turn meat several times to be marinated on all sides. Remove and wipe dry. Sprinkle well with flour on all sides.

Melt 3 tablespoons fat in a heavy skillet. Brown meat on all sides. Remove meat to a heavy slow pot. Add liquid in which meat was soaked. Simmer slowly until tender, from 2 to 2½ hours—do not boil.

Remove meat to platter. Skim off fat. Thicken sauce with cornstarch, if desired—2 tablespoons cornstarch diluted in 3 tablespoons cold water, poured slowly into boiling liquid. Strain gravy over sliced meat on platter.

Do you want a particular recipe, or have you a cooking problem? Write Mario, care this paper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope for his reply.—Ed.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

VINCENT E. WILSON

OUR DESTRUCTIVE HAWK

Very unfortunately Hawks in general have a bad reputation, yet the majority are quite innocent—even beneficial. The member of the family chiefly responsible for this is the handsome but destructive Goshawk, largest of the three species placed under the heading "Accipiters," all of which are rapacious. Because of greater size, it does by far the most damage. We may be thankful that this fearless, savage bird has been in rest, and since all Canada except from late fall until early spring. Only when food becomes scarce in the breeding grounds that reach across the northern part of the continent does this hardy Hawk move south.

To the majority of us any Hawk is simply "a Hawk." As one is seldom seen in rest, and close by it is important to learn how to recognize each kind by its silhouette and manner of flight when passing overhead. Accipiters' tails are long and narrow, their wings short and rounded; they progress by alternately flapping and sailing, with a minimum amount of soaring.

The savageness of a mother Goshawk is realized only too well by anyone with enough interest to climb near her nest. Her terrific talons can pierce right through a leather coat. No home is usually is a conifer well inside dense forest, and usually 40 feet up from the ground. Nestlings are fed rabbits, squirrels, and birds in proportion. A powerful enough to carry off a Ptarmigan or even a 12 inch fluffed Grouse, and likes nothing better than poultry.

When they leave home young Goshawks are brown and not lighter underneath, the white breasts heavily streaked in brown; adults are pale blue-grey, with white stripe over the eye, and yellow legs and feet are common to all ages.

Female Hawks are always larger than males. In the case of Goshawks the average lengths are 24 and 22 inches respectively. A large, young, female Cooper's Hawk (another Accipiter) might easily be mistaken for a small young, male Goshawk, but the latter is almost identical, the difference between the rounded end of one tail and the straight end of the other is not noticeable, and it is possible for them to be the very same size. This mistaken identity is harmless. But when a useful, young male Redtail instead of the real culprit is killed by a poultry farmer, the similarity of these birds is regrettable.

Wife Preservers

Woolens (such as sweaters, blouses, etc.) should always be washed by hand after washing. Squeeze excess water out by rolling garment in towel, then loosen it, while still damp, with loose tension. Dry flat on a clean towel in the sun. An Turkish towel and exposure most of the moisture out before hanging.

Effects of Alcohol On Body Discussed By W.C.T.U. Group

The November meeting of the W.C.T.U. was held in the Y.M.C.A. reception room, with president, Mrs. Farnsworth, conducted the opening exercises. Mrs. MacFarlane had charge of the devotional period, and spoke as her theme the parable of "The Sower" and in closing, read the poem "What Then?" written by Burt L. Pike for the "Sharptman" paper available to the men of the lumber camps.

The secretary's report stressed the importance of having "The Tidings" in every home. The treasurer's report followed showing $81.52 available for temperance work. It was decided to send $30 to the County treasurer and $30 to the Provincial treasurer.

Effects of Alcohol

Mrs. Bennett then presented chapter 3 of the study book "Alcohol and You" the effects of alcohol in different substances and on the body. It was interesting to learn that a person's blood is 1/13 of his weight is water and thirst results when the supply of water in the body is insufficient to care for all the purposes for which it is necessary.

Through the study of physiology we learn, that if we breathe that there are three chief body systems: the finely organized nervous system which has its seat in the brain, its main distributing channel, the spinal cord and its network of nerves fibres supplying every part of the body with means of communication, the circulating system of veins, arteries and capillaries of which the heart is the great forces pump, causing nine pounds of blood to make complete circuit of arteries every minute, thereby feeding hungry body cells and collecting waste material. The digestive system in which different kinds of food are treated by different chemicals until the food is reduced to a substance which can be assimilated by the cells. Alcohol affects all three systems and the efficiency of all three.

More Alcohol Oolitis

The Clip Sheet dealing with cocktail bars was presented by Mrs. Gerstine, Mrs. Northcott, and Mrs. Mills.

At first there were seven cocktail bars in Toronto, Yonge Street, Toronto, now there are 27.

Isn't that a treamendous increase? For the twelve months before March 1945, the total liquor sales were $70,000,000. In 1948 they were up to $170,000,000. Is this increase not alarming? According to Eaton Kirk Connell, president of Acadia University, Canadians are now the most intemperate nation in the world. Canadians should be ashamed and decide to stop increasing sale of beverage alcohol.

Why are men and women so indifferent? Women have a majority vote; why do they not use it and use the franchise to crush the monster evil, 'Alcohol Beverages'?

Interesting Movies on Bermuda Trip Shown

About 40 Christ Church A. Y. P. A. members enjoyed a delicious supper prepared by Mary Kellar on Wednesday evening. Supper meetings are on a bimonthly plan, recently instituted by the young people.

During the early part of the evening, a short worship service was held in the church, with the Reverend W. E. Mann officiating, who led in a discussion on the development and beliefs of the Anglican Church, following which, Mr. Ted Follwell was introduced to the young people by the president, Jeane Greene.

Before Mr. Follwell showed his colored movies of Bermuda, he gave a short geographical introduction about the islands that make up the British possession. Bermuda, the islands were taken by Mr. Follwell during his recent trip in Bermuda, and they proved most interesting and educational to all present.

MARIO... in his distinctive feature about Food... What's Cooking?

By the author of "THE FACE IN THE ASPIC"

King Midas would have turned into aluminum if he had lived 80 years ago.

This was the period when aluminum was actually worth more than gold. It used to make all aluminum forks and spoons at his banquets befitting a man of his distinction.

The emperor, unhappily, didn't have enough aluminum to go all around his big table. He personally used the precious metal, while guests of lower rank had to be content with the more ordinary gold service.

It's an amazing fact that housewives still use thin aluminum pots when heavy cast aluminum is available for all types of cooking. A thick aluminum pot, or one that's at least thick on the bottom, is absolutely necessary to provide slow even heat for most cooking purposes. It's the kind of cheap permanent ware that pays off in swell stews, sauces and braised dishes.

You can boil a stew or a pot roast in a thin pot at 212 degrees and the meat will be done, soft and raggy. You can simmer it slowly in a heavy pot, at 180 degrees, and it will be fork-tender and will hold its shape.

Use your heaviest aluminum pot or saucepan to braise a shoulder of veal. Just as beef a la mode is made with red wine, so this lighter meat is made with white wine.

VEAL A LA MODE.

Serves 6

Have the butcher tie and bone a 3 pound cut of shoulder of veal for roasting.

Place the meat in a deep bowl or crock to marinate for 24 hours.

Add 1-2 cup chopped onion, 1-2 cup chopped celery, 1-3 cup chopped green pepper, 1 teaspoon chopped garlic, 2 tablespoons vinegar, 1 cup dry white wine, 1 cup water, 6 crushed whole peppercorns, ½ teaspoon chopped fresh thyme and 3 tablespoons salad oil.

Cover bowl and let meat remain in liquid 24 hours. Turn meat several times to be marinated on all sides. Remove and wipe dry. Sprinkle well with flour on all sides.

Melt 3 tablespoons fat in a heavy skillet. Brown meat on all sides. Remove meat to a heavy aluminum pot. Add liquid in which meat was soaked. Simmer slowly until meat is tender, 2 to 3½ hours—do not boil.

Remove meat to platter. Skim off fat. Thicken sauce with cornstarch, if desired—2 tablespoons cornstarch diluted in 3 tablespoons cold water, poured slowly into boiling liquid. Stirfor gravy over sliced meat on platter.

Do you want a particular recipe, or have you a cooking problem? Write Mario, care this paper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope for his reply.—M.

MUSIC AND ALL

The 325 Calgary Stampeder fans arrived in Toronto Thursday morning by special train from the West. They brought horses, Indians, chuck-wagons and a model train to say nothing of an orchestra to provide music for their square dances en route and in front of Toronto's city hall. The Buckaroos, shown here, are all ready for the Stampeder-Alouette game Saturday. Bev Bandur is the guitarist while the little singer on the left is Leone Daude.— (CP Photo.)

Almost buried in her work is pretty Adele Marshall, of the administrative staff of the 1950 Canadian International Trade Fair. Before she is through, more than 300,000 business men, throughout the world will receive personal invitations from the Canadian Government to visit the fair in 1950. Although the fair doesn't open until May 29, the invitations have already been sent to such far away places as India and Pakistan. All told, through trade publications and personal mail, invitations will be directed to 80,000,000 business men in 23 languages. — (CP Photo.)

ONLY SURVIVOR IN PLANE CRASH

Eleven-year-old Isaac Allal who was found weeping amid the bodies of 34 persons killed in the flame-gutted wreckage of Netherlands DC-3 which crashed into a Norwegian mountain Sunday night, is shown after he was taken to a hospital at Drammen, 30 miles southwest of Oslo. Miraculously, he escaped with only slight injuries from the crash which killed 27 Jewish refugee children, four overseers and three nurses. Among the bodies were those of Isaac's two brothers and a sister. The chartered DC-3 was flying the children from Tunis, North Africa, to a Norwegian rehabilitation camp before their scheduled transfer to Israel. — Central Press Canadian.

VERY MUCH ALIVE, WAS VERY DEAD

J. B. Settles, 59-year-old railroad machinist, of Zanesville, Ohio, was "dead" for seven minutes during an intestinal operation. Dr. Charles Murrey quickly made a chest incision, took out the patient's heart and massaged it back to life. Four days later Settles sat up in bed as shown above. He is expected to be released from the hospital in a few days and Dr. Murrey said he should be as "good as new." — Central Press Canadian.

CHECKS CORROSION

A scheme developed by four Canadian physicists in a Halifax dockside laboratory may provide the solution to a problem that has faced ship owners since steel hulls were first used — how to prevent corrosion. These two Royal Canadian Navy photos show how effective the new process has been on naval vessels. Left photo shows a corroded, rusted keel and propeller after five months under water. Upper right is a zinc plate which, when it reacted with steel and sea water, was supposed to generate an electric current and prevent corrosion. It never was satisfactory. The four physicists substituted magnesium bars for the zinc since that metal generates more intense current. The photo at right shows how little corrosion there is on the propeller of a vessel so equipped after months of underwater exposure. — (CP Photo.)

Panama Has Third President In Six Days

Panama, Panama, Nov. 25 — (CP)—Arnulfo Arias, a fiery 43-year-old surgeon, early today became Panama's third president in six days by proclamation of congress.

The congressional approval apparently put the stamp of legality on the latest coup by Panama's third president-making police chief, Col. Jose Remon.

Remon, who forced the ouster of President Daniel Chanis, Jr., Sunday, late Thursday night defied a ruling of the supreme court and announced that Arias was the new president a few minutes before, the court had ruled Chanis was still the constitutional president of this central American country.

Enemies Until Thursday

Strangely enough, it was Remon who ousted Arias in 1941 after he had served as the republic's president for a year. Until Thursday they were bitter political enemies.

The mad-in-the-street didn't know for sure which of three men was really president. But on the latest coup by Panama's third police behind him, seemed to be wielding the power.

With the forced ouster of Chanis Sunday, Police chief Remon had his cousin, vice-president Roberto Chiari, sworn in as president and made Chanis sign a letter of resignation.

But Tuesday Chanis tore up his resignation before the national assembly, claimed he was still president, and touched off a wave of demonstrations in which one was killed.

Under Remon's protection, Chiari then asked the supreme court to say who was president. The court ruled that Chanis was still the man and Remon's police moved in fast to install Arias, defying the court order.

The whole crisis started last Saturday when Chanis tried to oust Remon as police chief.

Urge Premier Ask Rental Increase Suspension

Toronto, Nov. 25—(CP)—E. B. Jolliffe, Ontario C.C.F. leader, and Farquhar Oliver, Liberal House leader, Friday called on Premier Frost to write to the Dominion government immediately asking for the suspension of rent increases in the province, Mr. Frost was absent.

Reports reaching Queen's Park that the Ottawa government would prohibit such increases if the province so requests, brought immediate comment from the opposition leaders.

"All Premier Frost has to do now is write to Mr. Abbott (Finance Minister) . . . to have Ottawa delay the operation of the rent control changes until the Ontario Legislature has time to discuss the subject," said Mr. Jolliffe.

BIG MAST PIVOTS ON TWO-INCH BALL

To accommodate Britain's present 150,000 television owners, the British Broadcasting Corporation built the tallest television mast in the country. Top, it rises to a height of 750 feet and weighs upwards of 90 tons. The mast pivots on a ball bearing, above, just two inches in diameter. Television output in England is expected to reach 350,000 by the end of 1950. This newest television set up will serve a population of over 6,000,000 and will transmit programs relayed from London. To allow "give" in a high wind the shaft rests on a specially curved bear plate in the centre of which is the bearing. — Central Press Canadian.

'Hard Core' Issue Concerns D.P.'s And Refugees

Ottawa, Nov. 25. (CP)— A new phrase has emerged, a Commons committee learned Thursday night, to sum up part of the tragedy and misery of post-war Europe.

It is "the hard core," A.D.P. Heeney, undersecretary of the eternal affairs department testified.

The hard core is the hardest-to-settle portion of the tens of thousands of refugees and displaced persons still hoping for a permanent home, said Mr. Heeney.

For reasons of age, health and other causes, they have been passed up again and again while thousands of others left the D.P. camps for countries around the world—34,000 of them for Canada.

They are the big headache in a "vigorous program" by the International Refugee Organization to get several hundred thousand more persons settled before its mandate comes to an end next year. Mr. Heeney saw little chance that the campaign will succeed fully by the deadline.

The campaign's success would depend on the willingness of a number of nations to accept the D.P.'s on a generous scale, Enquiries were being sent to those nations to see if they can take in more, possibly by lessening their present immigration bars against them.

Chicago Livestock Show Marks Golden Jubilee

Chicago, Nov. 26. (CP)— Agriculture's biggest show, the International Live Stock and Grain Exposition, opened its doors today for its 50th annual eight-day run.

Gathered under a single roof for the exposition's Golden Jubilee are more than 11,500 head of cattle, horses, sheep and swine with an estimated total value exceeding $5,000,000.

Two dozen Canadians — mostly from Ontario — have entered livestock classes.

While a corps of livestock judges began the painstaking task of selecting the finest specimens of beef, pork and lamb on the hoof, a group of grain experts were pouring over some 3,000 samples of grains on display, including some of the finest from four Canadian provinces.

Many of the livestock and grain entries from the Dominion won top prizes at Toronto's Royal Winter Fair which ended last Wednesday.

Grain entries from Ontario, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia lined the corridors of the exposition's 7,000 seat amphitheatre at the gates of Chicago's stockyards.

Entries were anonymous and no list of the Canadian grain exhibitors was issued. Their names will be released as judging in each class is completed.

Several Canadian

Winners Entered

But it was learned that several of the Canadian winners at Chicago in other years again entered samples.

They included Sidney John Allsop of Red Deer, Alta., Chicago wheat king the last two years. He also won in 1934.

The world wheat queen, Mrs. Amy Grace Kelsey of Erickson, B.C., also is entered. She was runner up to Allsop last year and this year was crowned world wheat queen at the Toronto Winter Fair. Boosting her chances for a second Chicago title is the fact she pushed Allsop down to third place in the Toronto show. Mrs. Kelsey, 36, won the wheat queen title at Chicago in 1946.

Canada has taken the Chicago wheat crown every year since 1929.

SAYS SUBS STILL DANGEROUS

Edmonton, Nov. 26. (CP)—The submarine again would be the greatest menace to sea lanes in the event of another war, rear Admiral F. L. Houghton, vice chief of the Canadian Naval staff said in an address here Friday night. "There is threat to this continent from the air across Arctic wastes but this threat is not so urgent a problem as the ability of a determined enemy to interfere with and perhaps cut off entirely our shipping lanes by means of submarine warfare," he added

Reeve Jack Kincaid of Madoc village, was given acclamation for reeve and it is expected that members of council will also be returned without an election. All four of last year's council, Judson McGowan, Phillip Rivers, Wesley Hulin and Murray Smith were nominated, while a fifth nominee, Percy Derry, has still not declared his intention of standing.

There will, however, be an election for the school board with six nominated and four to be elected. Nominated were: Jack Baker, Ernie Lough, Kenneth Holmes, Kenneth West, Robt. McCoy and Kenneth Nicol.

The two members of this year's Hydro board, Tom Rupert and Percy Nayler, received acclamation.

Bruce Martin Heads Hastings County Growers

Bruce Martin, well known Corbyville district farmer, was named president of the Hastings County Vegetable Growers' at their annual meeting held at Canniton town hall on Tuesday evening.

Vice president of the association is Charles Long of Shannonville with Fred Mitchell, Belleville R.R. 6 as secretary treasurer, and Elwin Hart, Everett Hubble, Clare Carter, Charles Hilton, Stirman Lazier and Thomas Kielty, directors.

Clare Carter, who was re-elected as director on the Ontario Marketing Board, gave an account of the years' work and also led in discussion of various resolutions which will be forwarded to the marketing board.

Mrs. Bruce Martin, woman's delegate to the annual convention at Hamilton last year gave an interesting report.

Roscoe Robson, M.L.A., for Hasting, East, paid tribute to Mr. Carter for his work on the marketing board and also for his assistance to the agricultural committee composed of members of the different political parties. He also stressed the importance of properly advertising vegetable products and of the need for farmers to be well organized at a time such as this when farm prices are on the decline and while prices of what he has to buy are on the increase.

Delegates for the annual convention to be held in Hamilton Dec. 6 and 7 are Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Martin, Charles Long, Fred Mitchell, Sherman Lazier, Everett Hubble and Thomas Kielty.

U.S. POPULATION UP

Washington, Nov. 26—(AP) — The United States population was 149,947,000 Oct. 1, the Census Bureau reported Friday. It is estimated to have passed 150,000,000 since then. That figure, which includes 497,000 in the armed forces overseas, represented a rise of nearly 1,000,000 during the first nine months of this year.

Football Fans Remain Inside Before Game

Toronto, Nov. 26 — (CP) — Baby, it was cold outside today, and the yips and yays of the Calgary Stampeder football fans and the 'Alouettes sont la' chants of Montreal supporters were confined to the indoors. Crowds in the seventies in this chilly Grey Cup day did their early celebrations in hotel lobbies.

The downtown streets were almost deserted.

Cowboy-garbed Westerners nudged shoulders with toque-clad Montrealers and there was plenty of good-natured ribbing about this afternoon's big game. There were rumors of bets hitting the four-figure mark, with the Eastern champions established as favorites at odds ranging from 6-5 to 2-1.

The Calgary team, 1948 Grey Cup winners, quartered in the Royal York Hotel, was up early and players wandered around the corridors and lobby. Alouettes in the King Edward Hotel, four blocks away, took it just as easy.

Probably the main topics of conversation revolved around the two-syllabled word that has echoed from Calgary to Montreal and intermediate points: tickets.

Two Toronto Marlie Enteries Win Victories

(By The Canadian Press)

The two Toronto Marlboros entries in the Ontario Hockey Association still are going strong. A goodly-supply of scoring power was the keynote last night.

In the Senior 'A' loop almost the whole team had a hand in the win as Marlies went on a scoring splurge and crushed Owen Sound Mercurys 11-2. The junior Dukes came through in the final period to down a scrappy bunch of Barrie Flyers 5-4.

In other games last night, Kitchener-Waterloo drew to with in one point of second-place Owen Sound by blanking the last-place Hamilton Tigers 3-0 in a senior tussle at Hamilton. In other games Windsor climbed to a second-place tie with Toronto St. Michael's College, the only idle team last night, by defeating Guelph Biltmores 5-3.

The last-place Stratford Knuckleers had to be satisfied with a 3-3 draw with Oshawa Generals, and Galt Black Hawks staged a last-period drive to down St. Catharines Teepees 8-3.

At Toronto, Marlies surged into a 4-1 first-period lead on goals by Johnny McLellan, Johnny McCormack, Don Rope and Red Johnson. Bruno Favero counted a singleton for the Mercurys in that session.

The third period was all Toronto. Counters were registered by Frank Sullivan, Chuck Blair, with his third of three, and Al Buchanan. Hugh Bolton, husky Toronto rearguard, counted the 11th goal for the winners before Jack Ingoldsby sallied in with the Owen Sound scoring. Blair tallied two more and Bob Hassard got one to end the scoring.

Come From Behind

At Barrie, the Marlies had to come from behind to score the win. Ewen Annastis, Jerry Toppazzini and Real Chevrefils flashed the light in the initial frame for Flyers while George Ukes and Lorne Pirie turned the trick for Toronto.

Toronto grabbed the lead in the second on goals by Danny Lewicki, George Armstrong and Jack McKenzie, but Barrie came back to tie it up, Stan Long and Rick Rogg counting.

Larry Regan's pair of goals in the final session gave the Dukes the hard-earned win.

St. Catharines blew their chance for a second place tie when Galt tallied five times in the third period to win 8-3. Teepees were leading 3-1 at the end of the first on goals by Mel Mullen. Then George Ford tallied his second and Jack Hill counted once in the second to tie it up.

Teepees took a one-goal lead on Bill Aloff's goal in the third but Galt came roaring back with Pete Conacher, Jack Lumley, John Green, Bronco Horvath and Godfrey rapping the rubber home. Teepees made a belated comeback attempt but it produced only a single by Bill Aloff, his second of the game.

In the game at Guelph Windsor sprang into a two-goal lead as Glen Skov and Bob Rawlyk whipped counters in for the Spits.

Scoreless First

Biltmores counted their lone counter in the middle frame. Vic Dimarco, who turned in a creditable effort through the whole game, was the marksman. Windsor close out the scoring in the final period, Mike Delich picking up the point with a solo effort.

Oshawa and Stratford played through a scoreless first period.

Both Football Clubs Will Use Aerial Attack

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 9—(CP)—This is it—the day when the men who have been weaned from the boys, battle it out for Canada's greatest sports prize, a crossed-up 16-inch high mug representing the ultimate in the Dominion's senior football picture. It's the end of a long autumnal grind.

It is the end of the trail for Calgary Stampeders, victors in the four-team Western Canada intersectional union, circuit, and Montreal Alouettes who have landed on top of the eight senior clubs in Eastern Canada.

The question confronts thousands of fans from one end of Canada to the other who have wagered untold thousands of dollars as will the Grey cup returns to the Stampeders for the second straight year or to Montreal for the first time in 18 years?

The betting boys have made Lew Hayman's Alouettes the favorites over the Stampeders who have lost only three games in two years, including the last-fourth pre-season 14-13 exhibition game to the All Stars.

Coaches of both clubs are noncommittal on the outcome. But no matter which—one it goes, Toronto is host to the most colorful spectacle in the Dominion's sports calendar.

...Ah Are Favored

It's anything from 8-to-5 to 9-to-5 the Ah Ahs, who are odds liable to level off before the 1:45 p.m. EDT kickoff in Varsity Stadium.

If the Stampeders lose on the field they will still can cake edge in the color department. Mayor Don Mackay has packaged Calgarians, complete with chuckwagons, flap-jacks, full-blooded Indians, a cowboy band and 10-gallon hats made the 3,000-mile trip to Hogtown to up for their Stampeders.

Hundreds of toque-clad Montrealers arrived in the city late Friday night, but they presented a sombre picture compared to the gay Westerners. They came in on trains with Hayman's charges, all wearing blood-red toques, and almost immediately disappeared to their hotels.

No Talking to Press

Hayman clamped a strict no-talking-to-the-press order on his players and the coach, who has piloted them to seven championships since 1933, and used the same tactics himself.

Both clubs play an offensive game with the aerial attack their main ground-gaining tactic. The 20,000-odd fans are looking for a big duel between Montreal's Frankie Filchock and Calgary's Keith Spaith—weather permitting.

The forecast is for scattered snowflurries—in the evening. A heavy snowfall hit Toronto Thursday night and early Friday and the field was under tarps. Thirty-degree-above temperatures are in prospect, which means frozen ground.

FRANKFORD

Top Hatters Lengthen Lead in League

Frankford—Frankford Bowling League featured every possible combination of wins and losses Thursday night. Top Hatters lengthened their lead to five points in the league, by taking five points from the Happy Gang, who were forced to bowl a John Doe, with only four bowlers present. It was perhaps the closest contested series of the season, as the Happy Gang who opened up a single pin, dropped the second by three pins, with the Top Hatters winning the rubber by eighteen pins. In the other games, Greenhorns took five from the Head Pins, with Maisie Rankin of the Greenhorns setting a new ladies' high single for the season with 332. Captain Ray Walker of the Greenhorns also promised a box of chocolates to any of his girls who rolls over 250. This is the second one in as many weeks, and it this keeps on, Ray will have to start working overtime in his insurance business. Uniques took four points from the Skrilners, and took over second place in the league. In the other contest, the Aristocrats made it seven over the Merry Macs, revenging the clean sweep the Merry Macs made on their last meeting.

	W	L	Pts.
Top Hatters	22	8	53
Uniques	21	9	51
Merry Macs	18	12	42
Aristocrats	18	12	42
Greenhorns	15	15	35
Happy Gang	13	17	31
Skrilners	13	18	28
Head Pins	11	19	22

In the Major League at Quay's Tuesday night, Frankford battled all out against the high-flying Lafferty's Transports, and were successful in gaining two points. The irony of it all was that both teams rolled triples well over 2700. In the third game, which was really the heart-breaker for Frankford, the boys had to make a 1234 game, only to have Lafferty better it by 12 pins. It is most encouraging to the boys, however, to know that they are as good as the best in the league.

Attacked Repeatedly

The opposition attacked the government repeatedly for failing to heed the law which requires that such combines reports must be made public within 15 days of receipt by the minister of justice.

The flour-milling report was first presented to Mr. Garson last Dec. 29. It was not made public until early this month, almost 10 months later.

Charges of law-breaking, concealment of reports and disregard for parliament were hurled at the government during the long debate.

It culminated when Angus MacInnis (CCF-Vancouver East) demanded Mr. Garson's resignation. He said Mr. Garson had no right to be in charge of enforcing a law which he had broken.

Explaining the delay in publication of the report, Mr. Garson said the cabinet didn't agree with the contents of the report. It wanted to check on whether the charges in the report were correct.

Report Held up

The government, Mr. Garson said, had finally decided that the flour-milling companies should not be prosecuted because what was described as price-fixing during the war was done on the orders of the Prices Board, a government agency.

The report was thus held up until all these factors had been determined but the government was able to explain its position simultaneous with the publication of the report.

This didn't satisfy the opposition. The Progressive Conservatives contended that there was no excuse for failing to make the report public within the two months.

The C.C.F. said the government had failed to prove conclusively that the price-fixing had resulted from Prices Board direction.

F. A. McGregor, combines investigation commissioner, resigned partly because of the government's failure to publish the report last January.

In discussions Friday, John Diefenbaker (PC—Lake Centre) asked Mr. Garson whether such reports would be published within 15 days in future. Mr. Garson said they would.

Two Withdrawn

Before the bill was finally passed Friday, the C.C.F. proposed two amendments, both of which were withdrawn when the government said they were unacceptable.

The amendments were moved by M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader. One would have provided a faster method of dealing with companies accused of price-fixing.

It would give the government authority to order corporations to break up a combine within 10 days or face possible penalties of $1,000 a day after the time limit.

Mr. Garson said this was probably against parliament's legal jurisdiction.

The second amendment would bring services under combines legislation in addition to producing industries. The association of radio broadcasters was used as an example. It would be discouraged under the act from setting uniform prices for its stition.

As a result of this case, the government decided to change the law so that in future the letters will be accepted in evidence unless the company directors can prove they had no knowledge of what the letters contained.

At one stage of the long and heated discussions on combines, Mr. Garson said that unless this provision was passed the government could never hope to win a combines case.

When the bill was passed it ended a splitted debate centred on the report of alleged price fixing in the flour milling industry.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

How far ahead can you plan a tough and dangerous bridge contract? Analyze it as might an expert in the deal you see here:

NORTH
♠A K 10 7 4 3
♦A 9 7 3 2

WEST — EAST

♠Q 9 6 2 — ♠J
♥J 5 4 3 — ♥K 10 9 8 7
♦None — ♦8 6 5 4
♣10 9 4 3 2 — ♣A 7 6

SOUTH
♥Q 7 2
♦K Q J 10
♣K Q J 8

South was declarer in a small slam of six diamonds. The opening lead from west was a club. East put in with the ace and jack came back from there. Dummy took this with the king.

Now look at what the declarer must consider. Six side tricks can come in with the two top spades, heart ace, three good clubs. Straight finds in trumps will produce five more.

This will leave the contract one shy of the needed 12 tricks. Something must be planned to drag in the 12th. And the time to do it is before the timing is spoiled. Not after.

Obviously it is first necessary to use two trumps for ruffs. And before all the trumps are pulled. With so many spades in the combined hands, it is safer to ruff the hearts.

Pulling a round of trumps at once seems advisable. But it would lose the contract. Finding east with four trumps, the timing is lost. South cannot be entered for the final trump pull.

An expert plans against the worst. When necessary, he considers the possibility of all outstanding trumps being in one hand. Better than being caught by surprise.

So, the heart ace cashed trick three. A trump from north entered south. South led a heart that dummy ruffed. Another trump lead went to south. The third south heart was ruffed high in dummy.

The last dummy trump entered south who then pulled the final diamond. In this manner the trumps supplied six tricks instead of only five, and remaining high black cards had the rest.

Anticipate the worst before a deal is cursed.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Nov. 26 — (AP) — Burt Lancaster tells how he was able to avoid "going Hollywood."

"I was luckier than most," he said. "I didn't come to Hollywood until I was 32 years old.

"You might say I had my abnormal days before I came here. The very young people who some here are intoxicated with the excitement and glamor. Hollywood has never bowled me over.

"The only thing I've gotten out of Hollywood is a better living. And I'm doing the kind of work I like.

"I don't separate my career and my marriage. Why should I? That's the reason a man gets married — to share his work with his wife. Hollywood is no threat to our marriage.

"My kids are too young yet to be spoiled by living in Hollywood. No doubt some day the fact that their father is a movie star will influence their lives somewhat. I can just hope that they will be intelligent enough to overcome it."

Closed Sets

Do you know what a "closed set" is? Well, it's one of occupational hazards of a movie reporter. It happens when the producer, director or star puts his foot "emphatance" sign on the stage door.

Naturally, I'm agin 'em. But there are two sides to every issue and here is the actor's as presented by Joseph Cotten:

"Visitors are okay when you have a large set with several people working in the scene. Then the spectators have plenty to look at without concentrating on one object, or actor.

"But it's tough to be doing an intimate shot and have people constantly bobbing up and down in your line of vision.

"Love scenes are especially hard to do on a crowded set. Visitors are naturally keen to see the hero plant a big kiss on the girl's rosy lips. They crowd in closer for a good look.

"For example, the other day I was playing a love scene with Joan Fontaine in 'September.' We were playing to a packed house and the visitors kept moving in closer. When we came to the climax, I almost found myself kissing a school teacher from Milwaukee."

Eleven Spend Freezing Night Aboard Launch

Midland, Ont., Nov. 26 (CP)—How a party of seven adults and four children spent a freezing night huddled on a launch in Georgian Bay was told by provincial police yesterday.

The 11 battled a heavy snowstorm and flaw in one boat to bring the body of a boy for burial at Penetanguishene near here. They had set out from Twelve-Mile Bay, a few miles up the channel, with the body of the young son of Mr. and Mrs. George Courriere.

When trip started from Twelve-Mile Bay, Andrew Courriere and his sister Mrs. Wilfred Isaac were with the body in a 24-foot launch, while the rest travelled in a 18-foot launch fitted with a cabin.

Barely a mile from the starting point the engine of the larger craft exploded and the boat caught fire. The passengers and the boy's body reached the other launch in the small boat they ha' bee : trailing.

With the entire party on the one launch, incressing wind and snow forced them to take shelter behind Split Rock, some miles north of here in the channel that winds up the eastern shore of Georgian Bay.

They spent all Thursday night huddled on the launch with the temperature hovering around 10 degrees above zero.

At daylight yesterday they started out again in heavy seas and managed to make Honey Harbor, 19 miles northeast of

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop started to look in the bookcase after supper, and ma said, What book are you looking for, William?

I'm not looking for any particulier book, and that's a mity lucky thing, because the way these books are arranged, any book I happened to want would be sure to be submerged forever out of its alfabetical depth, pop said. By golley I'm going to make order out of this jungle rite now, he said.

And he took all the books off the shelves and layed them on the floor, and just then Mr. Lewis called him up on the telefone to ask him to come over to the bowling alley to help make up a team, and pop said he'd be rite over, and ma said, William, how about that litter of books on my floor?

Being can arrange them, it'll give him a little training in scientific management, pop said, and I said, Aw heck, pop, I have to do my hom werk, I haven't got time to put all these books back according to the alfabet. I wouldn't mind exercising my muscels a little by putting them back about 5 at a time just according to like wy I happen to pick them up, I said.

But that's just the way your father doesn't want them, ma said, and pop said, You're wrong, my dear. I've changed my mind. Let's make our bookcase a simbol of the freedom of litterture, with every book having an equal opportunity to achieve first place, regardless of the name its author was accidently born with. Let's strike a blow at the vicious sistem of Alfabetical preference in the fine arts. We'll have a really free lybrery — where a writer named Zed Zabrusky has as much chance to find himself the top man on the top shelf as a writer named Aaron Aarons, he said.

And he quick put on his hat and overcoat and went, ma saying, Sutch a man.

Meaning him.

Gideons Meet, Memorial Bible Plan Explained

The November meeting of the Belleville Camp of Gideons was held in Lattimer's Town Room, with President Angus Hannah in the chair.

Don Williams reported on the placing of Bibles and New Testaments in some Tyendinaga and Sidney township schools as well as the four public schools of Belleville, as part of a Dominion-wide program to give every school child who wants one a New Testament of his own, and to provide Gideon Bibles to schools for use in devotional studies. Bernard Redner spoke of making a start on giving New Testaments to the schools of Prince Edward County schools. President Hannah reported on a trip he and Harold Greenwood Hospital to check their requirements, and suggested contacting the new Bancroft Red Cross Hospital regarding placing hospital Bibles there.

Instituting Plan in City

The Gideons are an association of Christian business men, who gather into "Camps" in many cities, for the purpose of placing the Bible in hotels, hospitals, prisons and schools. The Belleville Camp numbers about a dozen, and is active in the instituting of the Gideon Memorial Bible plan in this city.

Christians of all denominations have long felt that there should be a better way of paying tribute to the memory of a departed loved one — some practical means of giving expression to the full depth of esteem and sympathy with which one's heart is filled upon the home-going of a Christian friend or loved one.

Bible Plan

The Gideon Memorial Bible plan meets this need. Through the facilities of the Gideons, and by arrangement with the funeral directors in this area, one is now enabled to dedicate to the memory of a departed loved one, well bound copies of the complete Bible — as many needed and to receive assurance that these Bibles will be placed where they may bring untold blessing and comfort to many.

Assuming that a dear friend or loved one has just passed away and that the funeral has not yet taken place. In this case, simply contact the funeral director in charge and tell him how many Bibles you would like to dedicate. Pay him for the same. The director will place one bible; three dollars-three Bibles, and so on. The funeral director will then set up a Bible display, with a sympathy card bearing your name, will remain on view among the other floral tributes at the profession of the funeral service. The funeral director will give a temporary receipt for the money and when he turns this money over to the nearest Gideon Camp treasurer, you will receive an official receipt for each dollar received the Gideons will place one Bible, according to the regular practice of the association, in some institution where same may be read by the public.

Treasurer Vernon Weir reported that the Memorial Plan was taking shape in Belleville and that already many are taking advantage of it, through the hearty co-operation of the funeral directors.

It was reported through the kindness of the Belleville public Utilities, their window had been secured for the Gideon display during the week of November 28th.

Katharine Cornell Splendid But Play Harshly Criticized

By PAT USSHER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 26 (CP) — Katharine Cornell came back to Broadway this week in a play which, alas, does not merit the fine acting and lavish production she has devoted to it.

"That Lady" is a drama based upon the romance of a Duchess which rocked the Spanish Empire four centuries ago. The time is late in the 16th century; the reign that of Philip II, who sent the armada against England, the ill-starred Duchess is Ana De Mendoza, Princess of Eboli.

Miss Cornell is splendidly alive as the widowed Duchess who defies Philip's wrath by her affair with his secretary of state. But the play as it slowly unfolds the romance and its tragic sequel, fails to capture the grandeur of Spain at the zenith of its imperial grandeur. It is tedious and talky, only attaining dramatic quality during the closing scenes.

Most New York critics like Ilose in Toronto where the play seem earlier, commended the acting but criticized the vehicle. Richard Watts, Jr., in the New York Post said: "That Lady' is a routine costume melodrama, the melodramatic excitement left out and a plethora of words substituted." Brooks Atkinson, in the Times said: "Apart from the acting, directing and production, 'That Lady' is an ordinary stuff." Even more scath- ing was Howard Barnes of the Herald Tribune, who wrote: "'That Lady' is dressed in tatters but it is a woeful play, indifferently staged and acted."

August Strindberg's tragedy of married life, "The Father," has been given a third New York revival.

With Tyrone Power, Raymond Massey in the title role and directing, the 60-year-old drama is frequently eloquent. But it is a dated conversation piece in which too much of the talk has little sense and dramatic meaning.

"The Father" is the story of malevolent wife who deliberately drives her husband insane in a contest for control over their only daughter.

Sharing the acting honors in the production at the Cort theatre is Mady Christians, who is robustly evil as his wife.

'Bud' Gehan Aboard 'Haida' Rescue Vessel

Tweed — "Bud" Gehan, well known local young man, son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Gehan, of Tweed, is cook on the Canadian destroyer "Haida" which picked up the 18 survivors of the ditched American B-29 off Bermuda over the weekend.

The survivors were picked up Saturday afternoon after an United States air force B-17 had sighted them about 600 miles northeast of Bermuda, the ship on which "Bud" is cook then took the survivors to port, landing at Hamilton, Bermuda, on Sunday. Bud's father is proprietor of the Dominion Store in Tweed.

Move Library to Arena Property

Operations to move the library to the skating rink will not commenced this week under the direction of Felix Rashotte. When the library has been moved, Joseph Rashotte, contractor of Tweed's new municipal building, will immediately start the excavation work. The library will remain on the rink lot until the premises are ready in the new building which will probably be some time in the early spring.

It is understood that Mr. Rashotte has agreed with Reeve McCarry and members of the village council to continue with the new building on a cost plus basis rather than the original contract figure.

Evening Auxiliary

The Marion Coon Evening Auxiliary of St. John's United Church met on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Wallace Johnston. The president, Mrs. Harold Foster, opened the meeting with the call to worship. Mrs. C. Sharp, and Mrs. B. H. Conner entertained the members with a duet. Chapter III of the study book, "Growing with the Years" was summarized by Mrs. McCoy's group.

After the meeting closed, the hostess and her assistants served delicious refreshments. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. A. Maynes on December 8th.

Tweed Receives Publicity In Dutch Press

Tweed has been receiving considerable publicity in Netherland's newspapers following a series of picture taken by John Postma, a "new Canadian" employed on some months at the farm of William Woods. The young Dutchman, an enthusiastic photographer, has taken pictures around Mr. Woods' farm and also got a number of "wood shots" at Tweed Fair in September. These were sent to friends in Holland and interested Dutch newspapers have reproduced them. As a result Mr. Postma has received numerous letters from people in Holland who are anxious to come to Canada to make their future home here.

SENT TO TRIAL

Kemora, Nov. 28 — (CP)—Lacross Creed of Kenora at a preliminary hearing Friday was committed to stand trial on a charge of murder in the Nov. 3 knife-slaying of his brother-in-law, John Richmond Sherman. The 20-year-old youth is alleged to have knifed Sherman fatally during a fight following a wedding reception at the Creed home.

Martin's Summer

By Vicki Baum

In himself, he had become strangely unbalanced and unsteady. He lolled about like a ship without ballast. The reason perhaps was that he had lost faith in himself, or almost lost it. The outburst of the worldly-wise Herr Lymenhop had overwhelmed him. Herr Meyer was a shadowy figure. Martin thought often about Herr Meyer, and the more he thought, the more vague Herr Meyer became. Probably Herr Lysenhop was right. Undoubtedly he was right. Martin gave up. He gave up expecting any letter. It was no use expecting such a thing to happen outside fairy stories and novels. Herr Meyer had gone to America and left no address. He was beyond th reach of letters, legal proceedings, or personal chastisement. The outlook was dreary.

Sometimes Martin had a meal and sometimes not. One morning he was so beset by hunger that he was off to Schweinshackel's by ten in the morning and spent three every penny that the last fine day had brought him. He filled and warmed himself with food. He began with liver sausage and then devoured the whole menu—soup, meat, vegetables, entree, potatoes. In between he swallowed bread and mopped up the gravy with it. He ordered an omelet too, and ended up with cheese.

On the way back he met the Mayreders with Pamperl. The Mayreders were good-natured people, and they thought sometimes that Martin got very little to eat. They asked him to lunch with them and would not take a refusal. At midday he ate his second meal for whose five courses he could scarcely find room after having already done himself so well.

On the way home he was caught in a storm that passed on in a shower of rain, and in front of the Petermann he was accosted by the von Brinckmanns— aunt and niece. They too, wished to entertain him, and they took him out onto the terrace that in Martin's absence seemed so vacant and meaningless, beneath the pattering rain, and there he was given coffee and cakes. He felt a slight nausea over the sweet treats, but he overcame it. Fraulein Stefanie von Brinckmann sat beside him in so radiant and undisguised a state of felicity that the fashionable visitors to the Big Petermann stared, and some even pointed at her.

"I've put something for you in your cabin," Frau Brindl whispered from the office as he went home, and she put an abashed finger on her lips. Brindl needn't know anything about it," she whispered with a knowing wink, as if conjugal fidelity were at stake.

Inside his hut he found some bilberry tarts, a particular specialty of Frauenser housewives. Bilberry tarts have to be eaten within two days after they taste very good. Martin forced himself to eat three of them, to avoid hurting Frau Brindl's feelings; he gave to Mats, who was raking the sand outside now that the rain had stopped. Soon after five there was a rainbow in the east and behind the copper pot and the other shimmering on the lake—a sign that the weather clearing. Soon the sun was out again. Its slanting beams made the Alpine meadows look like yellow hemp in bloom.

Martin crossed out the 16th on the blackboard and wrote 18th and in fact some lashers turned up. Among them the von Brinckmanns, for the second time that day. The deafmute had been swimming on her own for two days past, and she did so with an impassioned zeal and great courage. Mats, from an obscure feeling of chivalry which had come to the surface in his manly eleventh-old soul, often swam beside her.

Martin leaned on a post under the diving platform. He was a little oppressed by so much food, and he was talking to a corpulent man in a striped bathing suit who interested him he did not know. Then something happened. A strange, throaty, animal cry sounded in the water about fifty meters from the children in which the deafmute had just been seen lighting her way on with little Mats at her side. Two heads were seen—then a confused commotion. Onto again the same cry—like a foghorn and quite inhuman. The two heads vanished. One of them in a red india-rubber cap emerged—then sank again.

"The devil!" said Martin,r with his cloak already thrown off. In a second he was over the fence and into the water. His hears pounded in his brain owing to the fullness of his stomach, but he overcame the sensation. At moment later he pulled Mats to the surface and put his left arm under him to keep him up. Mats swam, spitting out the water like a whale. "Her fault," he panted as soon as he got his breath.

Martin went back for Fraulein von Brinckmann as soon as he saw that Mats could look after himself. She was in a bad way and must have been quite full of water. She was breathless, and terrified by the fear of drowning. She rivetted her massive frame tightly to Martin, and her arms were wherever they were most in the way. She kept a stranglehold on him, uttering at the same time horrible cries. A brief but deadly struggle followed, and before Martin could get the girl onto his back he had to hold her arms fast. Then using his legs only he managed somehow to swim back with her to the steps.

People were crowded on the gangway, gesticulating excitedly. Martin got the girl to her feet and then laughed, although he was almost winded.

The girl gasped once or twice and finally recovered her breath. Then in full view of all the spectators, she threw herself on Martin once more and fell dripping wet into his arms. Unable to speak, it was her dramatic way of signifying that he had saved her life. The little scene was applauded now the fright was over.

Suddenly Frau Mayreder cried out. "He's bleeding!" she said.

Everbody looked at Martin. Certainly he was bleeding. He observed it himself now. Blood was trickling from a long jagged scratch which began below the elbow of his right arm and extended almost to the shoulder.

"How did you do that!" asked Herr Mayreder, putting on his eyeglasses, which he kept dangling by a string from his bathing suit.

"I don't know. Perhaps it was on one of the posts," said Martin. He went for the bathing cloak he had thrown down below the diving platform. Dr. Mayreder followed him and examined the post through his strong glasses.

"Nails, by Jove, and rusty ones, too—" he said unctuously. "It must disinfect the wound, Herr Hell, or you may heard You must give it a good painting with iodin."

"It's disinfected already," said Martin. "The water's done that all right." He wiped the blood again, and his bathing cloak was smeared with it. He handed the cloak over irritably to Mats, who stood by. He was dripping blood everywhere.

He went to the shower bath and gave the wound a good pouring.

He felt cold and tired after his exploit on top of so much food.

"Iodin on that arm of yours. Takes a doctor's advice. Else," said Dr. Mayreder—and soon the beach was utterly deserted. The dusk swept on over the lake and visited Mrs. Edward Kent near Stirling on Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Defoe spent Wednesday in Toronto.

The Frankford Boy Scouts held a meeting of their Hobby Club in the office of Scoutmaster Gene Lohnes. Plans were discussed in regard to the club, and it was decided for the time being, that the activities of the club would be limited to three subjects, namely: woodworking, moulding and drawing. Some members of the local Canadian Legion have volunteered assistance in supervision, and it is hoped that this club will prove not only educational to the Scouts, but profitable.

Little George Mayhee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Mayhee was struck by a car driven by Harold Hopkins, of Frankford, shortly after dusk on Tuesday night. The boy suffered a broken leg, and bruises to the face. It is reported that the boy ran in front of the car, making an accident unavoidable.

An American owned car had a close call in Frankford Thursday evening. The car was approaching the intersection of Mill and Front Streets from the north, in the snow storm. The pavement was glare, and very slippery, making even walking hazardous. The driver applied brakes before reaching the corner, but the tires didn't hold. The car skidded across Mill Street, over a curb and came to rest with the front end practically against the guard rail along Cold Creek. Another two feet, and the car would have been through the rail, and over the wall along the creek.

Lions Club

A meeting of the Sports Committee of the Frankford Lions Club was held in the Community Memorial Hall, with representatives of the Frankford Hockey Club present. It is expected that Frankford's entry into the Trent Valley League this year, will not be a professional team, but sponsored by the village alone as their name was discussed, the result of which will be published at a later date.

Young People Honored

A shower was held Friday evening in the Parish Hall, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Kirkey, recent newlyweds. Mrs. Cecil Frost made the presentation of a beautiful tri-light lamp and end-table. Mr. and Mrs. Kirkey thanked everyone for the lovely gifts.

An evening of cards and refreshments was enjoyed by all, following which delicious refreshments were served at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert McLeod.

Mr. and Mrs. James Whalen and baby, of Ottawa, spent last week with Mr. and Mrs. D. O. Leavitt.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold McLeod and son, Larry, were supper guests of Mrs. Grace Lawrence, on Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Wannamaker and family were Monday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harold McLeod.

4 Stores Destroyed 6 Others Damaged In Brockville Fire

100 Persons Forced to Leave Apartments Above Stores

Straight Fight For Mayor's Chair, 22 For Aldermen

The mayoralty contest settled away to a straight two-way fight today as Alderman H. J. Ailin, and J. A. Beasley qualified as candidates to contest the first magistrate's position in next Monday's municipal elections.

Ten men were nominated for the mayoralty contest at Friday's nomination meeting at the city Hall but it was indicated fairly early after the meeting the contest would settle away to a straight fight between the two above named candidates.

Twenty-two candidates will go to the wire in the race for the seven aldermanic seats, however. Of these only four are members of the present council. For the four seats on the Board of Education to be filled there will be two contestants, while Public Utilities Commissioner R. Chamberlain was re-elected by acclamation. The vacancy will be the only acclamation in the 1949 municipal elections.

Following are the aldermanic candidates for the municipal election one week hence: Ward 1, A. Argue; E. O. Butler, Clare C. Clarke, Jack Carter, Fred H. Deacon, E. J. Goodfellow, James H. Graham, Charles L. Hyde, McLean Reid, John P. Howe, W. J. Limmins, C. F. Leggat, Max Mathews, John McNab, Dr. R. T. Potter, Bryson C. Reid, Dennis L. Swan, Bruce H. Smith, Robert L. Smith, C. Tim Thompson, A. DeVuyst and Newton C. Wilbur.

Candidates for the Board of Education will be Arthur Burke, John Fisher, Dr. Lily B. Matthews, Robert B. McCulloch, Stuart Robb, Harold Selden, Fred Symons, Miss Josephine Tickell, John M. Wood and A. C. Wilkin.

Brockville, Nov. 28 — (CP)— Damage was estimated at $1,000,000 in the spectacular Saturday night blaze that, destroyed four stores and damaged six others in a downtown business block, but today shelter had been found for all the 100 persons forced to evacuate apartments above the burning stores.

The Brockville fire department was aided by men from five other fire detachments, one coming by ferry from Ogdensburg, N.Y. across the St. Lawrence River. It was the arrival of the big aerial ladder from Kingston that enabled firemen to pour water into the heart of the blaze after making little headway earlier.

Brockville Fire Chief John Harley suffered a heart seizure at the height of the fire and was taken to hospital, but later on Sunday he was released and went home where he was said to be resting comfortably. Deputy Chief Jack Shorrey was overcome by smoke.

None of the apartment dwellers was injured as they rushed to safety while flames tore through the big block.

Listed as destroyed by fire were Bowman's Furniture store where the blaze is believed to have originated; Reynolds Grocery Store, Sheridan's Furniture Store and the District Office of the National Employment Insurance Service.

Damaged were two plumbing firms, operated by N. J. Brown and by the John Somerville Company, whose premises suffered heavy loss by water. The block contained altogether 10 separate establishments, and the remaining four were damaged to less extent.

Boys Noticed Smoke

Four boys returning late from a movie noticed smoke coming from the door of the hardware shop and notified Constable John McLean who turned in the alarm at 11:30 p.m. The blaze was brought under control three hours later. It burned by less extent, pouring water on the smouldering block late Sunday.

Woman Taxi Driver Found With Sister

St. Mary's, Ont., Nov. 28 (CP) — Mrs. Lila Wilson, St. Marys' taxi driver missing since Thursday, was located today at the home of her sister in London.

The 31-year-old Negro was last seen when she dropped some passengers at a dance. Saturday end police launched a wide search. Yesterday her car, with tobacco relatives finally located her at Simcoe.

George Taylor, uncle of Mrs. Wilson and owner of the taxicab, said she called to check in at 7 p.m. Saturday as she never drove the car home. One of the police thought it possible her cab had been stolen by thieves who stole a similar looking $200 Saturday night from an auto supply store in Port Stanley, 20 miles northeast of here.

27 SURVIVORS REACH HOME IN CALIFORNIA

Riverside, Calif., Nov. 28 (AP) — Seventeen survivors of the recent crash of a United States B-29 off Bermuda landed at March air base Sunday. All walked off the plane in good condition, but will remain under hospital supervision for a few days.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Toronto, Nov. 28 (CP)—Synopsis—A storm that moved rapidly eastward from Alberta to Ontario is now centred over extreme northwestern Ontario and moving southward toward Lake Superior. It is causing gale winds over a wide area, and heavy snowfalls have been helped over Lake Superior. Lake Simcoe and Georgian Bay. Some rain has changed to rain-showers north of Lake Superior. A disturbance appears likely to develop over the central states and will probably move eastward bringing intermittent rain to southern Ontario tonight. Mild air from the Pacific has spread over the provinces and high or temperatures will be general over Ontario today and Tuesday.

Mansion Too Big, Can't Give it Away

Bury St. Edmunds, England, Nov. 28 — (AP)—In 1573, Sir Nicholas Bacon built there. It has 80 rooms. It has 365 windows. It's cold.

But 39-year-old Lord Rothschild can't even give Rushbrooke Hall away.

The hall is an ancient mansion, the ancestral home of the famous banking family. What with taxes and upkeep, the Rothschilds found it too big for it.

First he tried to give it to the county council for a farm institute. They said no thanks, bit too big.

Then he offered it to the Ministry of Agriculture for use as they pleased. Friday they said thanks, but no.

"Takes five tons of coal a day to heat it," explained Chairman Y. S. Beaufort.

London's Fogs Cost $372 Million Annually, Science Still Helpless

London, Nov. 28 — (CP) — London's fogs are not as terrifying as the pea-soupers of a generation ago, but scientists have made little progress in reducing the economic effects of the murky invasion that costs about £120,000,000 ($372,000,000) every year.

The fog-bound fall season lasts from October to February, and the average is about 60 foggy days a year. It used to be that the cost of a day's fog approximated £1,400,000, but inflation, like everything else, has increased the figure.

Nowadays a day's fog bill in London is close to £2,000,000. That is the cost of increased anticipus, damage to property, loss of business activity and the higher bills for light and heat.

Smoke abatement during the last few years has led to less of the pungent smell and sulphurous fumes that used to choke off the visitation of recent years has prevailed the worst of earlier days. Scientists say there is no way of preventing plain fogs, which are formed when vapours are white and perfectly clean. But every year an estimated 2,300,000 tons of smoke particles descend on the land. Only a revolutionary change in fuel usage could take all the dirt out of the atmosphere.

London, built on a low-lying marshy site, has been notorious for its fogs since Roman times. The Clean Air Act imposed a death penalty for burning smoky, forbidden coal.

NATIONAL TRADE MARK BILL GIVEN FINAL READING

Guarantee Standards For Products Stamped

Ottawa, Nov. 28. (CP)—Attendance reduced by the combination of the heaviest first Saturday sitting and a Dominion football final in Toronto, the Commons struggled through a mass of legislation Saturday in a drive for prorogation.

Voting down C.C.F. opposition, it gave final approval to a bill establishing a national trade mark and guaranteeing standards for products using the trade mark.

It got its first look at bills to eliminate two government departments and distribute their functions among three new departments.

They are:

1. Heard Prime Minister St. Laurent announce he would vote tonight on the government's rent-control policy.

2. Gave final approval to a relatively-minor bill extending the export-import act—providing controls on some strategic commodities—until July, 1951.

3. Gave first reading to bills providing increased tax returns to the provinces and to broaden-ing the activities of the federal industrial development bank.

The Commons also held over their radio—and the Grey Cup football game—to tackle the Board of Chamber for the afternoon sitting. A few minutes after the House reassembled, only 30 members out of a possible 262 had answered the first division later, many others turned up.

Fifteen Dead in Storm Lashing B.C. and U.S. Coasts, Heavy Damage

(By The Canadian Press)

Fifteen persons are dead and property damage is heavy in the wake of a weekend storm which lashed British Columbia and the United States Pacific northwest in a furious sweep more an one 1,000 miles wide.

Today the giant storm, spawned last Wednesday off southeast Japan, blew with greatly diminished force across Ontario and the midwestern United States. The prairies escaped its deadliness, except for an Alberta duststorm.

Gusts reached a peak velocity of 105 miles an hour at Cut Bank, Mont., in British Columbia, an 85-mile-an-hour blast at Sandspit in the Queen Charlotte Islands was the height of the gale. But most of the damage, mounting steadily into millions of dollars, was caused by floods, rockslides and washouts caused by the torrential rains accompanying the storm.

In British Columbia, where seven of the deaths occurred, the list of the plenty:

Transcontinental fall lines to and from Vancouver were blocked by rockslides in the Fraser canyon. Service will be restored tonight.

Cloudy, Milder Weather Coming Says Weatherman

(By The Canadian Press)

Cloudy and milder weather was the general forecast for Ontario today after Sunday's snowfalls that reached as much as eight inches in parts of Western Ontario.

All main highways were reported clear, but heavy and slippery in many sections. At Windsor police reported 26 accidents during the weekend, mostly caused by icy streets when higher temperatures followed the Saturday snowfall, with the other colder snap late Sunday.

About three inches of snow fell around Windsor, up to eight inches at London, six inches at Goderich and Stratford and one at Stratford where rural roads were blocked. Brantford had about seven inches.

The snowstorm late Saturday reached blizzard proportions at some points, notably Hamilton, where some cars were embedded in snowbanks after skidding off the streets and traffic up and slow Hamilton Mountain was slowed to a crawl.

Canadian and Northern Ontario had much colder weather than the near-zero readings of Sunday since. Today's temperature forecasts ranged from zero to 30 above at Trenton, with the north somewhat milder but looking for more snow or freezing rain.

Warm Pacific air is expected to bring mild weather to Southern Ontario by Saturday.

Rain, possibly changing to ice as it hits the ground, is forecast for tonight, with temperatures in the low 30s. But, after the rain, the warm air flow from the Pacific is due to raise the mercury to 40-50 degrees, more than 10 degrees above the seasonal average during the weekend.

Cloudy and milder weather was the general forecast for Ontario today. There was no sign of more snow in the Ontario weather map. The snowfall Sunday reached eight inches in parts of Western Ontario.

Trade Unionists Seek to Form World Federation

By ROBERT BROWN

London, Nov. 28 (Reuters) — Seventy-five trade unionists from 55 different countries and 19 colonies met today in secret to realise their oft-frustrated deal of an effective alliance of workers the throughout the world.

Their aim is formally to establish a new international organization, linking about 45,000,000 workers in every continent, which probably will be known as the Free World Labor Confederation.

The organization, if set up, will be a rival to the communist-dominated World Federation of Trade Unions, which claims an even greater following, including 27,000,000 workers in Russia.

A member of the National Trade Union Congress, which has played a leading part in forming the new body, said delegates once active in the W.F.T.U. out, led by the British Trades Union Congress, left the Paris Congress of Industrial Organizations and The Netherlands Confederation of Free Trades Union, they resigned last year because it had fallen under the sway of communists who were using it for political purposes.

Environs World Congress

Since then there have been a series of important meetings, in England, Switzerland and France leading to last month's conference in London.

Delegates to assemble here with a carefully devised draft constitution and a statement of aims before them.

Ironically they will meet in the same hall as the Communist headquarters of the London Trades Council at the inaugural congress of the W.F.T.U. in 1945.

The draft constitution envisages a World labor congress every two years, as the supreme authority of the new confederation.

Between the meeting of the World Labor Congress, a general council, including representatives from all affiliated organizations would meet annually. Below the general council there would be an executive board of 15 members meeting at least three times a year.

TRANS-CANADA HIGHWAY MAY BE COMPLETED IN '57

Winters Says Cost Will be $300 Million

Ottawa, Nov. 28 (CP) — Construction Minister Winters today set the early spring of 1950 as the starting point for a $300,000,000, two-lane Trans-Canada highway and said it should be completed by 1957.

He moved in the Commons for second reading—approval in principle—of a bill "to encourage and assist in the Construction" of a 5,000 mile highway that will extend from Victoria to St. John's Nfld., and take in Prince Edward Island.

Share 50 Per Cent of Cost

The minister stressed that Ottawa will share equally with the provinces the cost of new construction but will give the provinces 50 per-cent of the cost of existing roads which become part of the route.

He said, too, that a Dominion-Provincial conference to clear up "all matters of technical detail" will be held before the highway legislation is passed.

Mr. Winters said Federal absorption of half the cost of existing roads that become part of the highway "will be a great step in making the Federal Government's contribution to the highway remaining to be completed considerably more than 50 per cent."

He said, too, that the proposals put forward by Ottawa have been accepted by the provinces." These include provision for "a modern, first-class, hard-surfaced road following the present practical eastwest route considered with the needs of the provinces and Canada as a whole."

Provinces Select Route

The provinces would select the route and arrange for execution of the work, except in national parks. The highway would remain "under provincial responsibility" of the provinces. The Federal contribution would be 50 per cent of the cost of the work in the provinces.

The provinces would bear "all ordinary maintenance costs." Tenders and specifications for contracts in the building would be subject to review by the Federal government. The latter also would have the right to inspect the road and audit the costs.

2,000 Are Dead In Uranium Mine Fire in Soviet Zone

Explosives Dump Detonated Says U.K.-Licensed Telegraf

Berlin, Nov. 28 — (AP)—The British-licensed newspaper Telegraf says today 2,000 persons perished in a uranium mine fire in the Soviet zone last Thursday. The paper says it was one of the worst mine disasters in history and charged that it was due to negligence.

The early edition, Telegraf says 400 German miners died in the blaze, which occurred in a mine in the Erz Mountains, on the Saxony - Czechoslovak border, near Johanngeorgenstadt. In the evening edition, it says later reports had swelled the casualty list upward to 2,000. Some 950 miners were reported rescued. The fate of the miners, says Telegraf, were political prisoners.

The American-sponsored Berlin radio, Rias, said it has received a report from a reliable source that hundreds of miners had burned or suffocated in a uranium mine fire. American intelligence officers said they had not heard any reports of such a disaster.

Fire Spreads to Second Mine

Telegraf says the fire spread from one mine to two nearby workings and that an explosive dump detonated, wrecking a third. Rescuers said the fire's blaze started when worn insulation on an electric cable caused a short circuit. The deaths were said to have been caused by fire, smoke and gas.

The paper says rescue teams from all nearby cities in Saxony were at the scene and that up to Friday night, 968 bodies had been recovered.

The paper also reports that 300 miners were drowned several weeks ago when another uranium mine was flooded. Uranium is used in the production of atomic energy.

Britons' Meat Ration Increased

London, Nov. 28, (CP)—Britons got the happy news today their meat ration will be increased from 1s 4d (about 21 cents) a week to 1s 6d.

The present ration averages slightly more than one pound of meat a week a person.

Food Minister John Strachey told the House of Commons the increase, effective Dec. 4, will last well through the Christmas and New York period.

British have enough stocks now, he said and will be able to give Christmas bonus for one week but to raise the regular weekly ration for a period.

Strachey warned, however, that the increased ration may not be maintained indefinitely, as imports during the first nine months of year, when home killings will decrease, may not be large enough.

Strachey announced other increases in the regular bacon and butter ration as well as a bonus increase of cooking fats for Christmas.

TORRID DEBATE EXPECTED ON RENT CONTROLS

Govt. Will Seek Method of Seeking Supreme Court Ruling

Ottawa, Nov. 28—(CP) — The Commons tonight will debate federal rent legislation.

Prime Minister St. Laurent has set aside tonight for discussion of the government's method of seeking a reference to the Supreme Court on the validity of controls.

However, debate likely will range over the whole rental field, particularly increases of 18 and 22 per cent allowed landlords effective Dec. 15, on unheated and heated accommodation, respectively.

The ceiling boosts, based on construction costs and maintenance. A government spokesman said it will be up to the landlord to decide whether to boost rents and by how much.

They can be applied by the landlord on leases which come up for renewal, but not on those which still have some time to run.

The 18-per-cent increase allowed is for self-contained unheated flats, apartments and houses. The 22-per-cent is for heated accommodation. The landlord is allowed to increase rents on rooms by 30 per cent.

One reason advanced by Mr. St. Laurent for picking tonight as time for the debate is that the government's order — in — council asking the court to decide on the validity of the controls will come before a Supreme Court justice tomorrow.

Diocese Terms of Order

He told the Commons Saturday he would call the debate in order to give the house a chance to discuss the terms of the order "before it goes before a judge of the Supreme Court."

He tabled a copy of the order-in-council at noontime Friday. John Diefenbaker (PC—Lake Centre) and Fleming, Mr. Diefenbaker said then that he had seen a copy of the order and found its terms "hypothetical."

Students' Council Plans Athletic Field Project

Leo Marcus, students' council president of the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School, has announced that the students' council will attempt a school project to secure an athletic field for the Collegiate.

At the students' council meeting on Friday afternoon the executive of the council brought forward the following recommendation, which was accepted by a unanimous vote of the council: Whereas the campus of the Belleville Collegiate is not suitable or adequate for the outdoor needs of the school, be it recommended by the executive of the students' council that this council attempt as a school project to secure an athletic field.

This athletic field if acquired will be of benefit not only to the Collegiate, but to the entire city of Belleville. It will enable Belleville to have a city rugby team, and to hold track and field meets here in the city. It is hoped that the athletic field will consist of a regulation rugby field, surrounded by a track for running events.

Two years ago, the collegiate council secured as a school project a Hammond Electric organ for the school. This organ was a war memorial in the former students of C.I., who had fallen in World War II. It is hoped that the citizens of the city will give their full support to this year's worthy students' council project.

Venison Dinner By Fire Dept. Much Enjoyed

Mayor D. L. Storey, Augus Duffy, chairman, and members of the Fire Committee of Council including Aldermen Tice, Thomas and Liddle, Ald. Lloyd, chairman of city property, and a host of invited guest were the guests of the Belleville Fire Department at their annual venison dinner held at the new fire hall over the weekend. Reeve Harrison of Thurlow Township also was present as a guest of the city and department.

Lieutenant Joe Adams, who takes his holidays during the hunting season, was the marksman for the fine venison that was served, while Paul Haggis, did the honors in the kitchen and the repast was fit for a king. The members of the department supplied all the beverages and were highly complimented on their culinary art.

Fire Chief Gerald Vance was the chairman for the after dinner speaking that were made following the dinner. All the speakers made mention of the fine co-operation between city officials and the fire department and praised the department as one of the most efficient in the province and the fire hall as one of the finest in Canada. Reeve Harrison of Thurlow thanked the city and department for the fine work that had been done by the fire brigade in his township. Chief Vance for his educational program being conducted among the school children of the city and township.

Colder Weather Drives Transients To Seek Shelter

With the advent of colder weather increasing numbers of transients are finding their way to the warmth of the local police station as overnight shelter from the wintry blasts.

Starting late in October the number of transients seeking overnight shelter began to increase until at the present time the nightly average is anywhere from four to six travellers. On one night there was a total of 12 of 13 were given shelter at the police station.

Most of the men passing through the city range all the way from the late teens to as much as 66 and 70 years with middle aged men from 40 to 50 years being in the majority. The large majority give Canada as their birthplace but the occasional man claims the United Kingdom as his land of birth. Destination given by the transients are mostly Toronto or Montreal.

Eight Reeves In Hastings Are Acclaimed

Apparent complete satisfaction with the current reeveship in many of the Hastings county municipalities was evidenced last Friday with reeves in eight municipalities receiving acclamation.

At Deseronto R. K. Jackson received acclamation as mayor, while Arthur Sauer was returned as reeve without opposition.

In Marmora village Vincent Lynch received acclamation as reeve, while in the township Irwin McCoy will replace Reeve John A. Bell in Hunting don township Arthur Hagerman received acclamation.

Reeves in other townships further north also saw their current reeves receive acclamation for another term.

Vessels Delayed By Heavy Ice In Bay of Quinte

Four inches of ice is the bay off the Belleville General Hospital easterly, caused a delay to vessels in the bay on their way one another to "lay up" for the winter.

The Imperial Oil company's "Imperial Collingwood" scheduled to sail Saturday morning from Rebound until 9.30 on Sunday afternoon after the ice became too thick for it to break. The ship proceeded on her way Sunday afternoon after an overnight lay Kingston cleared a channel for her to open water.

The Canada Cement Company's "Cement Karrier" which arrived with a load of coal, and was scheduled to cargo a load of cement to Toronto, was forced to remain in harbor due to the heavy ice conditions in the bay. Later the company decided to "lay up" the ship for the winter.

Keepers state that two other vessels were in the bay over the weekend but made their way successfully after passage was broken by the tug.

Unless weather conditions permit, navigation in the bay will close, it was stated today. It is unlikely that the ice will diminish in thickness unless exceptionally mild weather sets in.

The date of closing of navigation is one of the earliest in years and it usually carries on a week or ten days later than that of this year.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 28 — (CP) — Prices dipped lower in opening firmness on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Mild selling pressure pushed down a number of issues.

Golds were higher in early dealings but began to give way at the half-way mark. Base metals sagged from a steady opening and early gains in Western oils were wiped out as the session progressed.

Volume for the first three hours was 380,000 shares.

Labrador Mining and Exploration featured an otherwise dull board. Activity was brisk in this issue with the price fluctuating sharply. It climbed 25 cents to $5.90 in early dealings but sagged to $5.30, a loss of 20 cents on the day. News of a group of United States and Canadian companies banding together to develop the iron ore deposits in Labrador spurred the brisk activity.

Golds sagged steadily on losses ranging up to 10 cents in junior producers. McIntyre dipped ¾ at 68 in seniors. Key base metals slumped from early gains. Noranda lost 1¼ at 66½.

William Henley Returned Mayor For Second Term

Picton—Acclamation for the top executive and contests for other members of council appear to be the rule in Prince Edward County, as a result of qualifications for municipal office which closed Saturday night.

William H. Henley was returned as Mayor of Picton for a second term, as was Lloyd J. C. Cooper. The deputy reeveship is contested by Robert Cockburn and Oscar Grimmon. The nine in the running for the six council seats are Lindley Calnan, Lewis Garrison, Ralph Gibson, Charles Lewis, Alfred King, Nesbitt McKibbon, Carman Scott, Louis Vanover, Donald Ward.

H. B. Tully was given an acclamation as Public Utilities commissioner and W. C. Hicks, Dr. C. B. Richmond, Vernon Lockwood, Gay Welsh as school trustees.

Athol, North Marysburgh and Wellington have yet to hold their nomination meetings.

South Marysburgh has a contest for the reeveship between former councillors Ben Gibson and Stewart York. Reeve Donald Thompson retired. He, along with Deputy Reeve Lyle Branscombe of Hallowell are the only two members of County Council not seeking re-election.

Reeve J. E. Welsh was returned as Sophiasburgh township reeve. Four councillors are to be elected from the following: Clarence Allison, Roy Covert, Bert Moran, Blake Richards, Harold Robinson.

Reeve Hugh MacDonald is again reeve of Bloomfield. Contesting councillor seats are James Gough, Thomas Jackson, Henry Leavens, Arthur Moore, Gerald Pike.

In Hallowell township, Reeve G. C. Reynolds was returned as Clarence Hicks is the new deputy reeve. Contesting the three councillor seats are Harry Slavin, Jr., Clifford Wilkes, Clifford Wilson, Ernest Mastronardo, Bruce Syrett, James Dick.

In Hillier township, Reeve Norman Foster was returned by acclamation. Contesting the four councillor seats are Nathan Bonter, Kenneth Conley, Rae Ferguson, Lewis Wight, Kenneth R. Wood.

Reeve Verna Whitney and deputy reeve Tom Walker were given acclamation in Ameliasburg township.

NAME SIMILARITY CAUSES CONFUSION

Similarity of names at some times can be embarrassing.

Saturday in the personal column of the Ontario Intelligencer there was an item stating that Mr. Jacob Allis, College Street, was a patient in Belleville General Hospital.

Alderman Jack Allis, North Front Street, says he is not the man referred to despite the impression gained by a number of enquirers who made telephone calls to his home over the week-end. Alderman Allis wishes his namesake a speedy recovery.

TRENTON

Mayor Couch Sees Continued Progress in Municipality

Trenton, Nov. 28. (Special) — "Three years ago the town of Trenton was like a ship without a rudder, floating aimlessly in the Bay of Quinte" declared Mayor Kenneth Couch at the annual nomination meeting in the town hall.

Mayor Couch and three of last years councillors were acclaimed on Friday along with new councillor Charles Allore. The retiring councillor Gerald Weaver has been a councillor for three years past.

"Today, however, I can happy to say that the same ship has repaired her rudder, hoisted her sails and is headed for the port of progress," the chief executive added, disclosing that the assets of the municipality had been increased by $500,000 while the debenture debt had been raised only $86,000 in the three years of operation since his council had been in power. Mr. Couch told the meeting that another $125,000 would be added to the town's present debenture debt of $469,000 in the coming year revealing that $100,000 was contributed toward the construction of the Trenton's hospital, which is awaiting completion.

Educational Problem

Mr. Couch said that the Trenton educational problem was being studied by a committee comprised of representatives of the three school boards and the council. One suggestion was to build a new million dollar high school, turn the present high school into a public school furnishing upper grades for the two present public schools crowded this year more than ever. It is understood that the high school building committee will be given the go-ahead signal on the construction of a new educational centre sometime within the next year.

Sewage disposal has been another headache that the Trenton council has had to contend with, Mr. Couch said using a word picture to describe the method new pipes were being laid as part of the plan to fit in with the proposed sewage disposal plant recommended by consulting engineers Gore and Storrie. Mr. Couch assured his listeners that the sewage disposal plant would get top priority when all the plans and recommendations had been approved.

Park Development

Mr. Couch foresaw a bright future for Trenton's park development with Senator W. A. Fraser as the leader behind this movement. Mr. Couch asked his audience to visit the new Fraser Memorial Park across from the old Governor Simcoe Park since this beautiful piece of land was just an indication of what the Park's Management Board had in mind for local landscape improvements. The chief administrator further disclosed that the Park's Management Board would put emphasis on the area along the river and bay fronts with the Riverside Park on Front Street between Guelph and Gotha Streets as their first effort. Parks will also appear in the Byron Street Housing Area and near the C.P.R. track on the east side of the river.

Mr. Couch referred to the improvements on the Dr. Farley hill, the numerous sidewalk repairs throughout town and the new sidwalk which widened Front Street a foot. "You will be interested to know that $20,000 was spent on improving and repairing the asphalt and mulch roads in town last term, he said. Old St. Richard was acquired.

Among the other improvements for Trenton next year will be a continuation of Dixon Drive along the brow from the intersection of Dundas Park and S.D. The town has acquired the old Canadian National Railway right-of-way for this purpose and there is every indication that this artery will become the busiest thoroughfare in Trenton when the multi-million dollar project east of the town has been completed.

Next year Dr. McQuade's hill on the east side of the river will be given special consideration and it is believed that an effort will be made to straighten this part of the highway and cut out the big jog at this point. The town hall, police station, market building, the fireball, and town engineer's residence are in the best state or repair in 35 years His Worship said, having been painted and renovated last summer.

Trenton and Industry

Mr. Couch disclosed that Trenton was now in a position to absorb an industry of any proportion and that a committee had been set up to lay all out in this direction with a comprehensive brochure already having been distributed through industrial commissioners of the railways and the province as well as the United Kingdom.

With the partial completion of the Byron Street and S. R.D. Housing developments Trenton is now able to locate additional industrial labor.

Tabernacle United Church Holds Service of Dedication, Remembrance

In a service of dedication and remembrance the congregation of Tabernacle United Church marked the 139th anniversary on Sunday morning with the presentation to the church of a new pulpit, organ, and lighting system.

The people of the church, and many outside it, have given these gifts to enhance the beauty of their spiritual home. But there is more than that, an intangible quality which might be described as the spirit of friendliness. On the back of each pew, instead of the owner's name, is a card that says "This church welcomes you" and that welcome is in the very atmosphere.

Baskets of 'mums were placed at the approach to the chancel. To the left and in front is the Wurlitzer electric organ played by Mrs. M. P. Duff. A picture of Jesus as a young man is hung at the front of the church against a background of panelled and spired grained oak centred with a cross. The lights are of an ecclesiastical design of wrought bronze and add greatly to the beauty of the church.

Day of Remembrance

Wing Commander, the Rev. R. M. Frayne, M.C., B.D., addressed the congregation from a text in Exodus 12: "And this day shall be unto you for a memorial."

"This is a day of remembrance," he told his hearers. "Parcies said the whole earth is the sepulchre of unrecognized men. Those who live on have woven into them the stuff of other men's lives. Those noble men who gave up everything have called us this day to the altar in grateful remembrance. Without the shedding of blood there is no civilization, no church, no Christianity. As they pay the supreme sacrifice, they unlock the door of this church. We are surrounded by a cloud of witnesses, who rejoice that this congregation has enough inspiration, and strength, and vision, to build and go on: that you and I may be so disciplined in spirit that even the most unheroic things given us to do may be done bravely and courageously.

God is Human Liberty

"The goal of Christian democracy is human liberty. Wherever gallant men have been faithful to true democracy, the truth of the peage must be sought and peace must have the tranquility of order. Man is a responsible moral being with a God-given gift, and we must pitch our tents and overtones to the Divine intent. When men and women have taken the piece of God they have set up societies that are cruel immoral and barbaric. Freedom is a principal, not a posession. As soon as we stop laying freedom, and serving it, we lose it. If you don't tend to freedom it is obliterated. World order and disorder is the product of order and disorder of blown character. We must put first things first or we will have chaos.

"We have great respect for the young men who left this church and went to war. We saw them live and die, and they did it with courage. There is a tremendous fellowship among Canadians and we can keep this up. Any country with that fellowship has a destiny in the sight of God."

Explains Gifts

Rev. Mr. F. R. Harbeck, minister of the church, spoke briefly in explanation of the gifts from the congregation. Each individual and every organization had contributed their efforts towards renovating the church. He spoke particularly of the younger people's contribution; of the pulpit which was a gift from the Young People's Union. The lectern which was given by the Keen Age Club; the communion table from the Good Companions the finis on the communion table which was a gift from the Trail Rangers, and the Bible on the pulpit given by Mrs. F. Nicholson.

The presentation of the memorial chancel and organ, in remembrance of those who gave their lives in the Second Great War was made by Mr. A. G. Archibald. Two years ago the official board of the church made plans for the complete renovation of the church auditorium. It was decided the plans would be carried out in successive projects through a number of years. The first one is now completed. Those who were in charge of the committees were Mr. H. Moorman and Cyril J. A. Buchanan, organ committee; building, Mr. Douglas Hews, and Mr. Arthur Firth; contractor, Mr. William Judge; finance, Mr. J. Walmsley; lighting, Mr. Hollins and Mr. Ross Irwin; Property, Mr. Arthur Naylor, and Mr. Robert Johnson.

In his speech of dedication Mr. Archibald said, "We are glad to present the new chancel, organ and lighting system to the church this day for dedication to the glory and service of God, in memory of those who died in World War II."

The choir contributed an anthem with fine effect, conducted by the choir master, Mr. Ted Robbins, and accompanied at the organ by Mrs. M. P. Duff. Mrs. J. B. Kilpatrick's fine soprano voice was heard in a solo "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say."

The scripture lesson was read by Lt.-Commander C. A. Jarvis, and prayer was offered by Brigadier Fraser Fulton. After the dedication, the "Last Post" was sounded by Trumpeter J. J. Kenn, after which one minute of silence was observed.

At the evening service the three United Churches of the city joined at the Tabernacle to complete the anniversary.

FATAL PLANE CRASH IN INDO-CHINA

Hanoi, Indo-China, Nov. 28—(CP)—Ten persons including four French army soldiers were killed Sunday when an Indo-Chinese airline plane crashed near here. French authorities are investigating the possibility the DC-3 might have been shot down by Vietminh Partisan troops who have been active in the area.

Parks Board Will Oppose Proposed Site For Park

Members of the Belleville Parks Board will oppose purchase of the proposed park site at the northeast corner of Victoria and McDonald Ave., it was decided by members of that organization at a meeting held Friday evening.

Some weeks ago members of city council voted to purchase the Bazaar property at this location to be used as a park site. Decision of council was not unanimous, however, with several members claiming the area in question was too low for a satisfactory park.

This feeling was also entertained by the parks board who following their meeting stated the particular site had been surveyed by the board and the decision it was not suitable for a park site. The board also felt the agreed price of $6,200 was too high.

The board, however, was in favor of the purchase of property in Fairwood Heights for development of a parks site and noted that this had been previously recommended.

STORIES OF HEROISM

Persons who are inclined to cynicism and see the world ever going wrong have had opportunity any of these days to correct their view of life. There are countless stories in the newspapers and on the radio of deeds of heroism by young and old, even by very young children at the imminent risk of their lives from drowning or from being caught in a holocaust of a burning home. On land and sea, men and women and children are proving that there is something greater than self. Where can there be found news which cheers more than the stories of rescues by plane and ship or on the streets or highways or in burning buildings? The airman has been performing endless feats at the risk of life and limb, the sailor does not fear to save others even if the cost might be loss of his own life. In the story of every rescue there is always something said of a hero or heroes, doing deeds of brotherly love and rescue because it is natural. The humble citizen who craves no place in the gallery of fame or records, may shun fame for doing his duty but he is a hero just the same.

A couple of days ago was told the story of a taximan whose car was struck at a crossing and who carried six small children who had been in his car to places of safety before he gave a thought to the fate of his car which had meantime caught fire.

SNOW CLEARANCE

Winter came in with much of the old time vigor and fury of the storms which many recall from the past. This season it has carried a little and intermittent snow but the clinging of winter's fury to the past week and then the winter did strike with severe cold and heavy snow, said to be unusual so early in the season.

In Belleville if it had not been for the final decision of the council for the city to carry on the clearing of the sidewards of citizens would have had to man themselves with shovels early Saturday morning after the night and the gale had left on their doorsteps and the walks before their homes and upon the roadways a thick covering of snow. Clearing this snow would have meant a heavy task for many and for those unaccustomed to labor of that kind. But thanks to the view the council took, the citizens who heard the storm beating on their windows and roofs during the night had little reason to dread the coming of the dark dawn and the light of day placed them not very early, in fact a night shift went to work and when dawn came a good portion of the city's walks and roadways had been cleared so that pedestrian and motor traffic would be unhampered.

There cannot have been anyone who was not satisfied that this work had been done so effectively.

If there are some things about which taxpayers make no fuss over expense, surely this is one of that type of civic operation that merits praise of all for all use the walks and the roads so that the snow could be cleared as a real public service.

Many readers recall the prominence given the storm which swept across the province several days ago. In The Canadian Press stories the danger was stressed which persons who are getting older and are unused to such a form of exercise as shovelling snow run the risk of doing so by trying to hinge through deep drifts. Doctors have warned persons of forty-five or over and those unaccustomed to this work of the real danger they run if they undertake it and overexert themselves.

Snow clearance by the city seems the natural method. one that is fair to all. Older people can remember days before snow removal by the city. Citizens were expected to clear walks before their properties and many persons diligently storm in and storm out cleared their walks but a good number of others did not clear their walks. The injustice of that situation was clear enough.

This first instance of a fairly heavy fall of snow doubtless has proven to everyone the benefit of clearance of snow by the city. Clearance as carried out on the walks and roads on Saturday must have been of importance and efficiency. The Public Works staff and those who labored to open up the roadways and clear the walks merit praise for their effective work.

An idea, like a ghost, according to the common notion of ghosts, must be spoken to a little before it will explain itself.

Laws cannot prevent extravagance; and this perhaps is not always an evil to the public. A shilling spent idly by a fool may be picked up by a wiser person, who knows better what to do with it; it is therefore, not lost.—Franklin.

The hazy fret of frost have pressed.
The stems which brought the flowers to birth
Lie stamped and broken on the earth.

Nowhere skies are cold and grey,
The doves and robins are away.
The trees that sheltered them are bare,
No more the soft lit warble

How bleak November days would be
If this were death that now we see!
If all should desolate remain
And never songbird sing again!

Had we no faith that with the spring
There will be tulips

Green grass and beauty everywhere,
We'd view November with despair.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE POWER OF PLAY

One reason why there are so many notices in the obituary columns of the daily papers is that leaving off on life at an early age, is that they took no time in which to play. Play is a essential to a long and happy life as is the air we breathe and the food we eat.

Man's span of life on the whole, however, has greatly increased during the past half century. I believe that outdoor life and outdoor games have had a great deal to do with this fact. I couldn't help but think of this as I looked about the great crowd at the Yankee Stadium during one of the World Series baseball games. What an inspiring spectacle it was!

More people are attending these games of baseball and football than ever before — into the millions. And more people are playing tennis and golf. Not only does the body profit but the mind and spirit. Problems of the day are forgotten, and there is a wholesomeness of atmosphere and companionship between human beings that is restful and stimulating.

There is a secret power to play that is not quickly evidenced, but it is there. Men return to their work in higher spirit and with a will to do and they do. Not anyone say they have no time to play. They have time to go to hospitals — and to die, though! Why not then take time in which to live! Play is the forever changing resting and renewing. Even the child animals take time off in which to play. Nature in her infinite wisdom is an example and a teacher. Her realm is one of outstanding lessons, easily learned if observed and studied. She is no authority, but long has proved our her program. There is a suggestion of play even in the gentle falling of the autumn leaves outside from where I write.

We look forward that any city can make is to give to its children many and beautiful playgrounds. Especially should there be plentifully located in congested areas. Parks who children's grounds there are the less needed the more will be the jails.

PITCHING HORSESHOES

THE SPACE BANDIT

A couple of 3 a.m.'s ago, I was sharing my table at Lindy's with several members of the "I-knew-him-when" set, and over the blind cup of Brazil-water, we got to talking about the great I.Q.'s among agents of the past.

"You can start and finish with Harry Reichenbach," said Big Ed Weiner, "in my book, he's the standing, sitting, running, jumping, all-time champ."

"My nominee is Ned Alvord," said Nat. "He publicized the Exposition I put on at Fort Worth, and if you want to know how good a job he did, ask anyone in Dallas." "Ned's a good man," said Charlie Washburn, "but Mark Luescher was a better one."

"Come again?" said Weiner.

"Mark Luescher," repeated Washburn. "He handled press for B. B. Dillingham at the old Hippodrome."

"Never heard of him," I said "What stunt did he ever pull that makes him rate?"

"I could give you a dozen for-instances," said Charlie, but perhaps I can best illustrate my point by telling you of the time when he fixed it for a page-one story to wind up on the front."

I signalled a waiter for refills. "It's all yours and welcome," I said.

"As you probably remember," Washburn began, "one of the big attractions at the old Hip was the herd of elephants on display in the basement menagerie before and after performances. There were fifty of them and, as far as kids were concerned, they were the biggest thing in showbusiness since Toto the Clown.

"Well, one day right after the matinee, a big bull elephant got a little jumpy and snapped his bonds of elephants on display in could say 'Sabu,' he and the rest of the herd were charging down the big ramp that emerged on 44th Street. On Fifth Avenue, they turned right and went sashaying down in the direction of 23rd Street.

"Now you can imagine what happened. It was going-home time, and when the crowd saw the fifty mountains of meat and muscle, they shinnied up lamposts and ducked into anything with a door. And by the time the hose elephant man caught up with the herd at Union Square, the whole traffic system was a shambles.

"While all this was going on, there was almost as much panic in Dillingham's office. The producer yelled for Mark Luescher and told him that if news of the stampede got into the papers it would ruin the show. Parents would figure it might happen again and be afraid to bring their kids.

"The press agent almost swallowed his cigar. 'You mean,' he said, 'I'm supposed to convince a couple of smart city editors that fifty elephants running wild on Fifth Avenue isn't news?'

"'I don't care if it has 50' said Dillingham.

"Mark did some fast headscratching, and then reached for the phone and called the city desk at Police Headquarters.

"'Hello, Mac,' he said. 'This is Mark Luescher at the Hippodrome. Remember the story I sent you last week about Annette Kellerman's bathing suit — the one made of spider web? Well, I've got a much better one for you today. Fifty o' our elephants got loose and are tripping over tricycles and pulling up fire hydrants. I've got a man shooting pictures of them, but if you want a little space on page one, I'll send them over as soon as they're rounded up.'

"Incidentally, will be glad to pay for the electrics.'

"At the press agent figured the receiver and asked to be connected with the city desk. Dillingham chuckled. A former newspaper man himself, he knew perfectly that no city editor would believe such a story if it came from an old grace bandit like Mark Luescher."

THE PACKSACK

OF GREGORY CLARK

A dentist informs me that policemen give him more trouble than any other classification of his adult patients. The sight of forceps petrifies them. The drill reduces them to jelly. And this is nothing to say.

Police are not accustomed to being afraid. They are big men. In addition to their size and strength, they wear the added authority of the law. And besides, they usually carry pistols or clubs. What is there for such a man to be afraid of?

Courage can be of two sorts. There is the kind which, when there is courage that comes of being unaware of danger. I was there, so was the dentist, a dithering idiot. But then, with a sly grin, he would recover possession of his faculties, become once more a lucid, coolest, clearest-headed man I ever knew. It always happened to him. I witnessed it thirty or more times. He was a timid man, but in the face of the demand He survived the war; and has run a little candy store now for thirty years.

LITTLE THINGS COUNT

A missionary in Persia was preaching in a village far up in the mountains. He told the simple gospel story and at the close was amazed to have a native Persian come forward, declaring that he was a Christian, and then produce a Bible which he said he had been reading and studying for many years.

"And who gave you this Bible?" asked the missionary. "You did," replied the man smiling. "More than twenty years ago you were speaking in Tabriz and I was among those who upon your invitation came forward and received a copy of the Bible. I have not seen you all these years, but I have studied the Book you gave me and in it found life."

Unconscious influence is one of the most mysterious and transforming powers in the world. We walk along life's pathways doing our humble duty, and very often without our knowing it God takes some apparently insignificant little event in our lives and stops it up to something of great importance. Nancy Hanks who distinguished herself as the mother of Abraham Lincoln, is one really the producer of some of the greatest prose in the English language. Hamlin, the biographer, says that it was a passing conversation he had with Lincoln which transformed his life and set his standards of literary taste. Jesus remarked about the importance of giving a cup of cold water in his name. We live in a vast universe in which little things really count.

MEDICINE'S UNSUNG MAN

A pathologist is a physician who devotes himself exclusively to the never-ending study of, and changes incident to, disease. He is the quiet man of medicine. I doubt that the public ever realizes how absolutely essential he is to the practice of scientific medicine. Other specialists "practice" medicine. The pathologist eternally studies medicine. He ceaselessly observes, compares and identifies the changes occurring in body tissues and fluids as the result of disease.

A pathologist is first trained to recognize normal tissues. In this, every organ and tissue of the body must become known to him at a glance. He is trained to observe and identify the abnormal fluids of the body. He must know what constitutes their normal components and the amount of each. Next, he is trained to recognize abnormal tissues. In identifying the nature of the disease process affecting them, both with the unaided eye and with the aid of the microscope. The pathologist is a master of the microscope.

His knowledge of chemistry must be exhaustive. He employs chemical tests endlessly, in analyzing various fluids from the body. He must be able to identify every tissue of the body under the microscope and quickly recognize the nature of the disease, if any, involved. His knowledge of anatomy and physiology is also something he learns to forget. He must keep this knowledge in the "razor-edge" constantly. A pathologist is a profound student first, last and always.

The pathologist often stands by in the operating room, while after the surgeon has just removed. The removal of tissue is known as a "biopsy." The pathologist immediately freezing this tissue and cuts microscopically thin sections of it for immediate examination under the microscope. In a matter of minutes he is able to inform the surgeon of the precise nature and identity of the disease process involved. With this quick knowledge the surgeon can then determine whether or not to proceed on a radical or limited basis. Such information to the surgeon is necessarily based upon many years of intensive training.

The pathologist conducts post-mortem examinations. This type of examination is both an art and a science. It requires a full surgical operation, followed by exhaustive exclamation of small pieces of tissue which are removed for chemical, microscopic and other examinations. The pathologist's study is absolutely indispensable in cases of death resulting from unknown causes. The post-mortem examination is carried with the same degree of care and dignity that is common to a surgical operation upon a live human. The body is not "mutilated" in this process.

The knowledge gained from a post-mortem examination is of inestimable value to the doctor, and to the relatives of the deceased. This knowledge is added to which serves to increase and similar conditions early, and to point out the most effective methods of management. No intelligent person should ever object to having a post-mortem examination made of a deceased relative. He should be the first to demand it.

The pathologist acts as a consultant to both the physician and the surgeon. Neither one can practice modern, scientific medicine without his counsel.

The pathologist is the head of the hospital laboratory. You may never be aware of his presence and it may be that you never heard of a great pathologist by name. But the names of all the great past and present, are well known, and revered by the doctor who knows. It seems appropriate the scope and value of the quiet man's part in medicine. I often think he should be given a "Pathologist's Week," to bring to public attention an element of medicine which too long has escaped rightful answers.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Girdles

Every girl in her senior class wears a girdle, I believe, every mother of the day, although some girls are against wearing them. For some they may not be necessary except to hold the stockings up. For others they seem necessary to hold the stomach in.—(L. M., Physical Instructor.)

Answer — A girdle worn solely for support is not harmful nor worthless. A girdle or other harness to support the "hold ptt" key part of the body is harmful to health and likely to spoil the figure. Such girdles should be a physical education teacher, that a good figure is the result only through daily exercise.

Question?

We question your article on the reference of hearing aids at home. In case of complications, such as Caesarian birth, need for blood transfusion, etc., would not the hospital be safer and more desirable than the home?

(Mr. L. C.)

Answer — Yes, in rare instances of that kind it would be safer and more desirable, but in 9 out of a hundred such childbirth is safer in the home. Send stamped self-addressed envelope and twenty-five cents for booklet Preparing for Maternity.

NATIONAL TRADE

of the mark—Canada Standard or "C.S."—to meet certain standards.

The bill provides for voluntary use of the trade mark and for accurate labelling of articles for sale.

The rentals question came up when Mr. St. Laurent tabled an order-in-council asking the Supreme Court to rule on the validity of federal rental controls. John Diefenbaker (PC-Lake Centre) has objected to the terms of the order Friday and asked for the debate.

Mr. St. Laurent said rent controls could be discussed when Prices Board estimates come before the House tonight.

With practically no opposition in sight, the House gave first reading to three separate bills to set up three new government departments— Citizenship and Immigration, Mines and Technical Surveys and Resources and Development. They will replace the present Reconstruction and Supply and Mines and Resources Department.

The Prime Minister said it won't necessarily involve an immediate addition to the cabinet number.

J. M. Macdonnell (PC-Toronto Greenwood), called the move an "unnecessary extravagance" and Gordon Graydon (PC-Peel), said the government could have found an easier way to give Alberta representation in the cabinet. Mr. Graydon said the shift would mean an extra member of the cabinet, already in danger of being overloaded.

Break Up Bulky Dept.

The measures will break up the bulky Resources Department and transfer Immigration and Indian affairs branches to the new Citizenship branch of the State's Secretary's department.

Introducing the bills, Mr. St. Laurent said the government intends to give Indians full citizenship status "as quickly as that can reasonably be accomplished."

George McIlraith (L.-Ottawa West), parliamentary assistant to Trade Minister Howe, piloted the trade mark bill through the House. He said the bill would replace inadequate existing legislation and "does not go as a real solution to both the domestic and export trade in the voluntary adoption by Canadian firms of the use of a national trade mark under conditions that will properly safeguard the quality of the goods to which the mark is applied."

Must Use Accurate Labels

Any firm may use the mark on its products if they conform with approved specifications.

The bill also requires that manufacturers must put accurate labels on their products to prevent public deception.

The amendment was moved during clause-by-clause study in committee by Stanley Knowles (C.C.F.-Winnipeg North Centre), and would have prescribed rates of pay, hours of work and other working conditions under which products using the National Trade Mark must be made.

It was defeated after Mr. Howe and Labor Minister Mitchell objected that it would interfere with provincial labor legislation.

H. W. Herridge (C.C.F.-Kootenay West), launched into the discussion on labels by citing examples of what the U.S. Federal Trade Commission called false and misleading advertising. The commission's investigation showed "organized quackery" and "tremendous rackets" in many well-known and nationally-advertised products.

"Most of these brands are in Canadian stores and should not be purchased by Canadian people without full knowledge of the facts," he said.

J. A. Charlebois (L-Brant), said that Canadian exports, especially farm products, should meet certain levels of quality and the use of the word "standard" in the trade mark implied that goods were average. Mr. Howe told him the agriculture department sets standards for exports of farm products.

TORRID DEBATE

The order, which reviews controls and rental legislation during and after the war, asks the court to decide whether the rentals controls—in whole or in part—are valid.

The case is not expected to come formally before the court until some time in February and a decision may not be given before the current legislation expires next March 31.

However, in the event that the court does not make a decision before then, it is expected that Mr. Abbott will seek extension of the controls.

That will permit him to continue the government's existing controls and the policy of "orderly decontrol."

4 STORES

In addition to the cross river detachment from New York, the local firemen were aided by firefighters from Prescott, Athens and Smiths Falls, while auxiliary from the Royal Canadian Regiment came from their camp north of here to give aid and even seamen from the H.M.C.S. Oriole, anchored in the harbor, turned up to assist.

The fire fighters' task was complicated by low temperatures and continuous explosions of small arms ammunition in the hardware store, mixed with explosions of paint and oil drums.

A large crowd that gathered, attracted by the flames shooting high in the air, fled for cover as the explosions occurred. Within an hour of the outbreak the hardware store's front window was blown out, and two hours after the start the front wall collapsed, sending a shower of debris into the street and causing re-routing of traffic on the main interprovincial highway, which runs past the block.

Mayor Fred Reynolds announced Sunday that the response for those evacuated had been "splendid" to his appeal for shelter for those evacuated from the apartments. All were accommodated in private homes.

Only Act of God

Brockville, Nov. 28 (CP) — Alex White said Saturday night that "only an act of God" saved his family from being burned to death in one of the worst fires in the history of this eastern Ontario city.

Mr. and Mrs. White and their daughter, Phyllis, were asleep in their third-storey apartment when Smart's hardware store, where the fire started in the downtown business block.

Mr. White said he awakened about 11:30 p.m. and got up for a drink of water. He smelled something burning the moment he stepped from the bedroom and immediately aroused his wife and daughter. Clad only in night attire, the three raced from the building just as flames burst through from the hardware store basement and spread rapidly through the block.

They reached the street to find close to 100 other persons living in apartments in the block had already vacated the building.

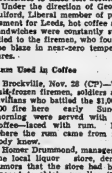
The White's were among the turned-out families taken care of by an emergency depot opened in the town hall. Members of the Red Cross Society, the Salvation Army and leading citizens handed out clothing and other necessities to those left destitute.

Under the direction of George Pulford, Liberal member of parliament for Leeds, hot coffee and sandwiches were constantly supplied to the firemen, who fought the blaze in near-zero temperatures.

Rum Used in Coffee

Brockville, Nov. 28 (CP)—The half-frozen firemen, soldiers and civilians who battled the $1,000,000 fire here early Sunday morning were served with hot coffee—laced with rum. But where the rum came from nobody knew.

Homer Drummond, manager of the local liquor store, denied rumors that the store had been opened to obtain supplies. "The store was not opened," he said. "There are a lot of rumors flying about."



MADOC JUNCTION

Madoc Junction—On Friday evening the community social evening for November was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Wannamaker with around 50 in attendance.

The program began with a song service, with the Reverend M. Clarke playing the accompaniment on his guitar.

Mrs. Maurice Clancy, and her Sunday School class of girls, were in charge of the worship period. A poem "Kind Words" was read by Donna Stapley. The Scripture lesson from Hebrews XI, was read by Grace Clarke, and Marlene Madill read the commentary on the lesson.

Mrs. Harlow led in prayer owing to the absence of Thelma Prest who was to have taken this part. A reading was given by Joanna Reide. A hymn "God Will Take Care of You," was sung by the girls with Mrs. Clancy playing their accompaniment on the organ. Myrtle Wannamaker read a story, Peggy and Her Pup, Penny. A poem was given by Marilyn Reid.

A splendid address was given by Mr. Clarke on the "crest" of the United Church followed by a short business period. The S.S. superintendent, Mrs. Clancy, low stated that there were some needs of the Sunday School. A bazaar will be held at the home of Mrs. Maurice Clancy on Dec. 3rd.—proceeds to go to the Sunday School.

Mrs. R. Clarke, W.A. president suggested that the Young People in the community get up a play this winter. This suggestion met with approval.

Refreshments were then served and a social time enjoyed.

WALLBRIDGE

Wallbridge—The bazaar which was recently held in the Orange Hall was well attended. A large array of candy, home cooking, aprons and dollies were on the tables and bought quite readily. A quilt was put on by the president, Mrs. Morley Phillips, and the winners were; the Rev. W. Neelands and Miss Mary Hamilton. Mrs. George Rikley showed three interesting film strips, which was enjoyed.

Miss Jana Ketcheson, who has been spending the past two weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Ketcheson returned to Toronto on Tuesday.

Thirty-one institute members, including a number of the members' husbands, went to the Royal Winter Fair on Monday by Wannamaker's bus. All report a good time.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Ketcheson and daughter of Belleville and Mr. and Mrs. Clem Ketcheson were tea hour guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Evans on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant Miller and children spent a few days last week with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Sine.

Some of the deer hunters have returned home bringing their quota while others were not as fortunate.

Glad to report Mr. Jack Smith has returned home from Montreal after three weeks of illness there.

Mr. J. Bushell spent Wednesday afternoon with his uncle, Mr. W. Sine.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Pope, of Trenton were Sunday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris.

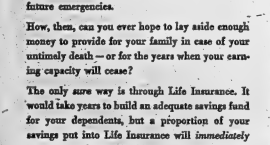
When Money Takes Wings



MONEY takes wings today faster than ever before. True . . . many people are earning more—but the cost of living uses up a much greater proportion. Few indeed can hope to accumulate large sums for future emergencies.

How, then, can you ever hope to lay aside enough money to provide for your family in case of your untimely death—or for the years when your earning capacity will cease?

The only sure way is through Life Insurance. It would take years to build an adequate savings fund for your dependents, but a proportion of your savings put into Life Insurance will immediately guarantee to them a monthly income in case of your death. At the same time it will provide for your declining years should you live to old age.

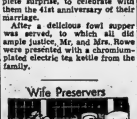
ALLAN'S MILLS

Mr., Mrs. John Rowe Honored on 41st Wedding Anniversary

Allan's Mills— Friday evening November 11th, the children and grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. John Rowe gathered for a complete surprise, to celebrate with them the 41st anniversary of their marriage.

After a delicious fowl supper was served, to which all did ample justice, Mr. and Mrs. Rowe were presented with a chromium-plated electric tea kettle from the family.



When you are buying a new electric refrigerator do not choose one that will prove too small. As a general guide, the minimum size for a family of two is a six cubic foot refrigerator with an extra cubic foot for each two additional persons. Better be generous in figuring, however, as families grow you know.

MARIO ... in his distinctive feature about Food ... What's Cooking?

By the author of "THE FACE IN THE ASPIC"

It's time to say, "Easy as lobster".

We don't hesitate to say easy as pie, easy as peeling a hard-boiled egg or easy as shelling peas. But the thought of boiling a live lobster throws a major scare into many cooks.

Actually you can boil a lobster as easily as you can boil an egg or a potato. The disconcerting factor is not the cooking but lobster's hypothetical attitude.

Just because a live lobster is capable of a certain stealthy motion is no reason to be afraid. He can't bite you nor claw you because his claws are plugged with wood or fastened with sturdy rubber bands. When you plunge the lobster into water, its transformation is quick and painless because the lobster has no nerve ends.

Splitting a lobster in two is just as easy. You chop off both claws with a heavy knife, and then cut the lobster down the back from head to tail. You should remove the small sack in back of the head and the lobster meat is ready to eat.

If live lobsters are unobtainable in your neighborhood, use 1 1-2 pounds frozen lobster tails or 2 cups canned lobster meat in the following recipe, a rich milk stew similar to oyster or clam stew.

Fanned Lobster. Serves 4.

Plunge 2 live lobsters, weighing 1 1-2 pounds each into a large kettle of boiling salted water. Boil rapidly for 5 minutes and then simmer 15 minutes.

Remove lobster from water. Cool slightly. Chop off claws. Crack claw shells with a heavy knife and remove meat. Split body of lobster by cutting from head to tail. Remove sack in back of head. Remove lobster meat and cut meat into 1-2 inch thick slices.

In a large heavy saucepan melt 2 tablespoons butter. Add lobster slices. Add 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-3 teaspoon celery salt, 1-2 teaspoon paprika, 1 teaspoon grated onion or finely chopped scallion and 1-4 cup chili sauce. Simmer 3 minutes.

In another saucepan scald 1 quart of milk or 2 cups of milk and 1 cup light cream. Remove both pans from heat. Combine hot milk and lobster.

Place 4 slices fresh toast in 4 soup plates. Pour lobster mixture over toast. Sprinkle with paprika and serve at once.

Shrimps, clams or oysters may be substituted for lobster in this recipe.

Do you want a particular recipe, or have you a cooking problem? Write Mario, care this paper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped, envelope for his reply.—Ed.

MARMORA

Concise Report On Conservation Given Chamber

Marmora—A concise and interesting report of the recent national Chamber of Commerce convention held in Montreal was relayed to the dinner gathering of the Marmora Chamber of Commerce held in the Royal Hotel on Thursday evening by James Fraser, secretary of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce. The speaker declared it was one of the best conferences it had ever been his privilege to attend. There was an overall feeling of confidence for the future in evidence there.

Great Current Thought

The building up of communities for the national good was the great current thought of this four-day conference. Here was democracy truly seen in action. The annual report revealed the growth of the movement until now there were 640 Chambers from coast to coast with a membership of well over one hundred thousand.

Referring to the conference and his personal impression, he stated that here was to be seen an exchange of ideas from all parts of the Dominion without jealousy. To the members of the Marmora Chamber he would say "One plus of the Chambers are made up of members like yourselves." He contended that the Chamber of Commerce was the top research organization in Canada today, continuing he gave reflections of speakers at the conference which had upheld free entrprise against Communism. He reminded his audience that the government does not provide anything it does not take from the people in the first place and that the Chamber of Commerce leads citizens to be enterprising:

The speaker was introduced by Rev. G. D. Young and thanked by C. R. Whittemore.

Extended Welcome

President Alex. Fraser, following The King, extended welcome to visitors and mentioned that last year at this time, the village was rejoicing in the possession of its new rink, a movement which the Chamber had been behind. Now the new fire hall was about completed and this had received the backing of their organization. It was being seen that such things had added to the community and made it more attractive. He financed other improvements which had been inspired by deliberations of the Chamber. He saw no losers of the Chamber folding up and was pleased to note the large attendance for the last meeting of the year.

Rev. G. D. Young then introduced the entertainers of the evening, Bob Sanderson of Marmora and Stan Hawthorne of Madoc. The latter furnished pianoforte accompaniment for the partner who gave three trumpet numbers which blended with the gathering.

The president read a letter from President Gemmell of the Peterborough Chamber drawing attention to an address to be given by W. J. Sheridan on "Red for Danger" at the quarterly luncheon of the Peterborough Chamber on December 1 and inviting a representation from Marmora. Next followed a sing song led by Rev. J. M. Brownlie.

Reported on Safety

Following the address of the guest speaker, William Shannon reported for the Safety Committee drawing attention to the enthusiasm of its members. C. T. Nicholson reported the success of the Hallowe'en party.

The president recommended Bernard Hughes for the Bulletin and mentioned that Vern Caverly was filling up a program for a big night. He proposed another boat regatta is held next summer.

Doug Burdette spoke briefly on Marmora. It was reported that flooding of the arena had started and that season skating ticket would be on sale next week. Attention was also drawn by Bernard Hughes to the advertising space available for the use of local merchants. Finally on behalf of the council Reeve V. M. Lynch conratulated the Chamber of Commerce on its accomplishments thus far.

Hidden Treasure In Diamonds Is Discovered

Chicago, Nov. 28 — (AP) — Investigators sifting through the musty rooms where an elderly woman recluse died have found a hidden fortune in diamonds. A lawyer for the administrator of the estate of Mrs. Linda Belle Titus Know said Saturday that diamonds weighing a total of more than 1,000 carats were found packed in medicine bottles, match boxes and old newspapers in the false bottom of a trunk.

MARMORA

11 Nominated For Four Seats On Twp. Council

Marmora—One of the most interesting nomination meetings in the annals of Marmora and Lake township was that held on Friday afternoon in the Council Chamber with Returning Officer Thos. J. Bateman presiding.

No less than eleven were nominated for the four seats on the council, last year's councillors, George Davidson, Charles Kelly, Irvin McCoy and John Wilkes being nominated with the additional names of George Fox, Albert Leonard, Everett Barons, Arthur Sheridan, Everett Derry, Gordon Jones and Ross Carman.

John A. Bell, reeve for the past 13 years with two years as a councillor preceding that term was renominated for the reeveship. He also nominated was Irwin McCoy.

For three Area School Trustees four names were submitted including the three retiring trustees, Wesley Carman, Raymond Bonter and Wilbert Jones with Gordon Moffatt as a new nominee.

Animated Discussion

There was a large attendance of voters and animated discussions on various subjects of interest to the municipality followed the presentation of reports and were candidly expressed by the nominees. Reeve John A. Bell left the impression that he would not be seeking re-election but it was anticipated that by the qualification hour on Saturday sufficient would have qualified as nominees for council to cause an election on December 5.

The nomination meeting for Marmora Village took place in the same chamber in the evening with Village Clerk E. C. Prentice presiding with the following results.

For reeve, V. M. Lynch; for council, J. R. Reynolds, R. Walker, F. S. Johnston, Ritchie Wells (members of the retiring council) P. Gray.

For Public School Trustees (3) D. P. Marett, W. D. Lavender, R. Wright.

For Hydro Commissioner, F. R. Wells.

The attendance of ratepayers at this meeting dropped a little below that of recent years. At the close of the nominations speeches were heard from the reeve, who received acclamation and returning thanks for the honor, spoke of the harmonious support of all village officials accorded him and also from the other nominees present.

U.S. DOLLARS FOR TRADERS

Canberra, Nov. 28.—(CP)—Government sources said today the Australian government will release dollars to approved traders and manufacturers to allow them to exhibit Australian goods at the next Canadian International Trade Fair in Toronto. These sources said this was part of a plan to boost dollar exports to North America.

ALLAN'S MILLS

Fire of Unknown Origin Destroys Allan's Mills Home

Allan's Mills — (Special) — Fire of undetermined origin Saturday afternoon completely destroyed the farm home of Mrs. Laura Bateman, just north of the village of Springbrook on No. 14 highway.

Mrs. Bateman with a guest, Mrs. Minnie Fox of Marmora, was sitting in the kitchen adjoining the main part of the house, when they heard what they thought was cracking of fire in the other part of the house. Mrs. Bateman went to the connecting door and opening it was met with a wall of flame.

As the flames leaped at her, Mrs. Bateman suffered burns to her arm and face and was later given medical treatment.

Nothing was saved from the burning home as all household furnishings and personal clothing were lost in the flames. The telephone line was also put out of commission.

Mrs. Bateman and her son are staying with an uncle, Mr. Robt. Scarlett on the 10th concession of Rawdon township.

Light-Fingered Customer Gets Extra Service

Canterbury, England, Nov. 28 — (AP) — James Dimmelow got the closest shave he ever had and a six-month jail sentence out of a visit to a local barber shop.

He was sentenced Friday after police said a box containing more than £15 ($46.50) in tips had disappeared while Dimmelow was waiting for his shave.

A barber quietly finished a haircutting job he was on, gave the shorn customer a note to police, and called Dimmelow.

The barber shaved Dimmelow once. No police. The barber gave him another shave, still no police. As the third shave was starting, the law arrived. The box and money were found in Dimmelow's pocket.

It's like the ALUMINUM business

PLANTS—all kinds of plants—need supplies to thrive on. This is true of plants in the garden, and true of plants which make articles of aluminum.

Vegetable plants draw their supplies from the soil and the air. The 1000 and more aluminum manufacturing plants across Canada draw theirs from us.

And just as different garden plants produce different leaves, flowers, roots and fruits, so these manufacturing plants shape our aluminum into a variety of useful forms—kitchen ware, garden tools, furniture, bodies for aeroplanes and trucks . . . all sorts of things which people want because they are light and economical.

We and these independent manufacturers make a team. They draw on us not only for aluminum but also for the technical services of our laboratories. And because we produce, here in Canada, a quarter of the world's aluminum, they are able to buy this metal at lower prices than anyone else anywhere.

Looking Ahead in Ottawa:

Several Specialty Positions Open in Civil Service

(By the Ottawa Staff of The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, Nov. 22 — (CP) — The federal government's payroll, sometimes criticized in parliament for being too big, will be getting a bit bigger in the months directly ahead.

Officials contend it won't get much bigger — some 150,000 persons are on it now — but some jobs are opening up, the best of them a deputy minister's post at around $15,000 a year.

They will number in the dozens rather than the hundreds.

The External Affairs Department has announced that it wants some for foreign service officers, college-educated men and women to go eventually to its embassies and missions abroad. There already are about a dozen women in the foreign service and women are just as eligible as men in the examinations that will be held in January to pick the new recruits.

The government's decision to add one to the total of its departments is going to open the way for some more appointments but officials contend that the number won't be as large as might be expected. They say there will be here one new deputy minister required but he may be chosen from within the civil service ranks.

Other requirements will include administrative and technical people. No big need for employees at the lower levels is foreseen. The reason largely is that the three new departments the government is creating to take the place of two will rule over subordinate branches already in existence.

Examinations for the external affairs jobs will be conducted by the Civil Service Commission, government hiring agency, in various parts of the country. They are for the first two grades of foreign service officers, the first with age limits of from 23 to 31 years, the second from 21 to 35 years.

Speed-Up

With only two weeks to go to the tentative Dec. 3 date for proroguing, the Commons is expected to start speeding up consideration of some 33 government measures still to be passed.

The course of each piece of legislation is uncertain, but the more controversial bills appear to have been finished.

Body of Canadian Seaman Taken From Icy Bay

Watertown, N.Y., Nov. 22 (AP) —The body of a Canadian seaman washed from an unidentified boat in Lake Ontario, Saturday was tentatively identified Sunday as that of Royden P. D'Aigle, 29, of Toronto, a radio operator on the Kingston, a Great Lakes excursion ship.

D'Aigle and a girl employee of the ship, Vivian Delaney, 19, also of Toronto were reported by the Canada Steamship Lines to have fallen overboard from the vessel early on the morning of Aug. 17 while the boat was outside Rochester harbor. Miss Delaney was rescued.

Sheriff Brayton E. Peck said Sunday night that tentative identification of the body was made through a uniform and its buttons. He added that Dr. L. P. Roberts of Toronto, a brother-in-law of D'Aigle, was due here Sunday night in an effort to make positive identification.

The body was found last Wednesday by two fishing guides, Harry and Melvin Stevens, on the shore of a cove on Stony Island, in Lake Ontario off Henderson Harbor, N.Y.

The Stevens brothers said they had been prevented by rough weather from reaching the mainland before Saturday.

Churchill's Aggressive Spirit Is Undampened at 75 Years

London, Nov. 28 — (AP) — Winston Churchill, a landmark of our time, will be 75 years old Nov. 30.

The occasion finds the old warrior, as usual, trumpeting a challenge. He and Labor wait to get the ruling Labor ministers — "these little men," he calls them — into the arena of a national election.

At five years past the Biblical three score and ten, the Conservative party leader is ready and anxious to keep another date with his political destiny.

The old Aristocrat may be headed for another stay at 10 Downing Street, or he may be sidelining for a fall, as he and his party did in 1945 only weeks after the end of the war in Europe.

Whatever may be in store, Churchill is charging into the battle with the energy and enthusiasm of a man half his age. The years are closing in on him, but his aggressive spirit is undampened.

The stoop in his shoulders is a little more pronounced. He seems somewhat heavier.

Eyes Still Bright

But his eyes are as bright and shrewd as ever. He wears glasses only for reading. He clinches the never-present big cigar in his mouth as a bulldog does a bone.

In parliamentary debate and public speeches he plays his magnificent voice like a theatre organ. His invective retains the cutting edge of a razor or, if he thinks the occasion demands it, an axe.

With his big square bowler hat and old-fashioned clothes, he is John Bull brought to life.

The scope of his activities in the last 12 months was incredible for a man who has been living on the dead run for a half century or more. During the year he:

Published the second volume of his war memoirs, "Their Finest Hour."

Worked up to four hours night putting the final polish on the third volume.

Helped bring to life a fledgling Parliament of Europe, as a step toward a United States of Europe.

Put down a smouldering Conservative party revolt against his leadership.

Shuttled back and forth between Britain and the Continent to further the cause of a United Europe.

Made a side trip to the United States.

Spearheaded a relentless Conservative party attack, in and out of parliament, against the ruling Labor party.

It was a hectic year. But Churchill weakened only once. For two days in August he was abed with a cold at Lord Beaverbrook's villa in the south of France.

In February Churchill campaigned personally for the Conservative candidate in an election to fill a House of Commons vacancy in the important Hammersmith district of London. The candidate lost.

Still Vote for Labor

"They cheer for Churchill, but they vote for Labor," one well-placed Conservative complained to a newspaper man.

Rumors leaked of an undercover move to ease Churchill out of his role as the party's main policy maker.

Juicy rolled around. The Conservatives held a big rally in Wolverhampton to touch off their election campaign. Still much in the saddle and cracking Churchillian phrases like a whip, the old leader made the big speech of the day.

By the time parliament began its new regular session in October, talk of easing Churchill out of the driver's seat in his party had died with a whisper.

The Daily Express, owned by his friend Lord Beaverbrook, chortled in a page-one editorial:

"Mr. Churchill is not only the leader of the Tory party, he is The Tory Party."

Drastic Steps Taken to Conserve Water Supply

Georgetown, Nov. 28 — (CP) — Drastic steps to conserve the water supply in this town 25 miles west of Toronto were ordered Sunday night by an emergency session of council. It was hoped that three local factories employing 800 workers would be able to continue operation.

The main reservoir was down to one foot of water due to dry autumn weather followed by a freezing spell.

While a loudspeaker toured the town warning housewives not to do their weekly washing Monday, Mayor John Armstrong announced that trains will cease obtaining water supplies here; all local garages will be prohibited from washing cars, and production of artificial ice for the arena will stop.

Fire Chief H. Sevings said that a secondary reservoir had only enough water to enable firemen to fight any blaze for two hours.

Facts Uncovered By U.S. Government Survey Inspire Great New Hearing Aid Series!

Using its vast resources, the U.S. Government, to bring the greatest possible help to the hard of hearing, made a great nation-wide survey to find out the hearing aid needs of all hard of hearing people.

The startling fact this the Government established is that a 'hearing loss' is not only loss of loudness but also loss of tone. The combination of these two losses blends into a variety of individual loss patterns. No one hearing aid can correct all of these different loss patterns.

This is the most fundamental truth about hearing aids that experts say. Only to the extent that instruments for aiding hearing do correct this many different hearing conditions.

These facts not only exploded the old fallacy that a hearing loss meant loss in loudness alone—it also became, in effect, a direct challenge to the hearing aid industry to develop a series of different instruments, one to correct each loss pattern. Here at last is the answer! Acoustic Laboratories Acousticon is proud to present its answer to that challenge. It is a group of many individually designed instruments which make up the great new International Series.

NOW! After years of research—we present our greatest achievement

the Smallest, Lightest, Most Beautiful Series of

- SO LIGHT—lightest in Acousticon history: 2¾ ounces without batteries; 4¼ ounces with batteries.

- NEW DeLUXE "BOTH RECEIVER" IN ADDITION TO AIR AND BONE RECEIVERS—This amazing new receiver is worn in no actually new and different way. NOTHING in or on the ear. Instead, it fits on the temple, behind the hair-line—because they are individually designed to correct the many different types of hearing loss.

You wear a certain size shoe, hat, shirt, and glove. Manufacturers had to first determine the requirements of the entire population before they could offer you such products to fit your individual need.

That is exactly what Acousticon has done for your hearing. As a result of the U. S. Government findings, Acousticon analyzed the need of tens of thousands of hard-of-hearing people. The findings were truly amazing! Today in order to fulfill our obligation we manufacture many models: one model is needed by only one person in a thousand; another model meets the need of only 9 in every thousand; and so on. And yet, without this variety of models at hand, you could never hear as well as you should.

Instruments Honestly Designed For Your Hearing Loss

Today, when you buy an Acousticon International, you receive a hearing aid that you can honestly and truly call your own. You will never know how clearly you can hear, until you compare your present hearing, or your present aid, with an Acousticon International.

SHANNONVILLE

Old, New Methods Of Three R's Compared At H. & S. Meeting

Shannonville — The regular monthly meeting of the Shannonville Home and School Association was held in the Senior room of the local school on Monday evening, November 21st.

The meeting opened with the singing of "O Canada." The president, Mrs. A. Kilburn was in the chair.

A report of the last executive meeting was given by the secretary, Mrs. Helen Louis. This meeting was held Monday evening, November 14th in the hotel dining room. Plans were completed for the bazaar, supper and dance to be held in the Orange Hall the afternoon and evening of Friday, December 2nd.

It was decided to have a sale of home cooking, sewing and fancy work and a "White Elephant" table. The supper to be served cafeteria style from 4.30 until 8.30 p.m. Mr. Peter Marion to have charge of the meat carving and Mr. Carmen Brant to have charge of the booth in the evening. The Home and School orchestra to supply the music for the dance. Mrs. Boyce Cook, Mrs. Jerry Dafoe, Mrs. Fred Lewis and Mrs. Walter Brant, to canvass the community for donations for the supper and home cooking table. Mrs. Peter Marion was given authority to hire a dish-washer for the evening. At the end of this executive meeting, Mrs. Kilburn served dainty refreshments.

Business Dealt With

The treasurer, Mr. Walter Brant reported he had paid $5 on the Film Projector Fund, and had also received $12.10 from Mrs. Pickell to be added to the Sewing Club's funds, which were the receipts of her recent euchre party. A discussion followed as to the advisability of taking a silver collection at the film showings and serving lunch. It was generally thought that members should not have to pay for the privilege of viewing the films and that serving refreshments to a large gathering would be awkward with the present facilities.

A letter was read by the secretary from Mrs. Gladys Maracle, who tendered her resignation on the executive due to home duties, but would continue on as a member of the association. This resignation was accepted with regret.

In a letter from the secretary-treasurer of the school board, Mr. William McMechan, thanks were extended to the Home and School Association for their gift of the swings to the Shannonville School playground.

The card convener, Mrs. M. Louis, reported she had sent two cards of sympathy during the month to Mrs. Edwin Louis, and Mr. and Mrs. Norman Marsele.

A letter was read from the local school children thanking the Home and School Association for the lovely Hallowe'en party and the treats provided.

Volunteers Needed

The president Mrs. Kilburn, asked for volunteers to come to the hall the evening of December 1st to help in the decorating of tables for the bazaar and supper the following day.

It was decided that the next meeting be held on Monday evening December 13th.

A discussion transpired regarding the possibility of having the film showing on a meeting night. The program convener, Mrs. Kenneth Luby was interested in having the films for some of her programs.

It was decided that the business meeting be adjourned.

The guest speaker of the evening was Mrs. Phillips, principal of the local school, who gave a very interesting talk on the subject "Education."

Old and Modern Education

Mrs. Phillips compared the old type of education with the modern trend. The old style was the 3 R's, reading, writing and arithmetic. The new style was still the 3 R's with a few frills making studying more enjoyable and interesting.

Today, social studies take the place of the names geography and history. These two now are being correlated. Mathematics today consists of arithmetic, Algebra and geometry. All now use the protractor and compass much earlier in their studies, and also study the practical side of arithmetic. Thus these subjects are more wonderful now than of old, continued the speaker.

Art, in the former days consisted purely of water-color in the higher grades, said Mrs. Phillips. She demonstrated with exhibits how much more attractive is the present day trend of art with its chalk and spatter painting and forgetting the water colors also.

Cooking, Manual Training

In the schools of the present there is also home economics, and manual training stated Mrs. Phillips. She explained what the girls had studied in the basic cooking and showed samples of the boy's manual training with very fine structures of windmills and bird houses.

The teacher of today tries to study each child, and take a personal interest in him or her. She tries to teach the child to become good, loyal, upright Christian citizens and to bring character into play as well as the 3 R's, continued the speaker.

Some children do hate school the same as the parents detest certain forms of work. Not all children are clever. Co-operation from the home means so much to a teacher, Mrs. Phillips thanked the local parents for their co-operation by continuing the solution of entrance examinations set by the Department of Education to take effect this coming June; the other being the probability of dividing the school also to junior, intermediate and senior grades, which is still in the future.

The president thanked Mrs. Phillips for her enlightening talk.

During the refreshment intermission, Mrs. Kilburn gave two enjoyable humorous readings, "Shepherdess," and "On the Banks of Sweet Dundee." Mrs. Percy Cook, and her assistants served refreshments bringing the meeting to a close.

Als Take Grey Cup to Montreal For First Time in 18 Years By Dethroning Calgary Stamps

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 28. (CP) —The Grey Cup, a mush-trundled hit of tarnished silver resting on a slightly-nicked wooden base that has by-passed Montreal the last 18 years, returned to the Quebec metropolis today, its journey was speeded by the masterful football "money" of Frankie Filchock.

The guy's starting place for at least a year was assured Saturday when Montreal Alouettes, with the $10,000-a-year Filchock calling the tune, defeated Calgary Stampeders, defending Dominion, 28-15. It was Filchock's big day before a sell-out Varsity Stadium crowd of 20,147 chilled fans.

He powered the eastern champions with deadly-aimed forward passes, sent them scooting around the ends and through the middle with well-screened hand-offs and smuffled many Calgary defensives. He was in the right places at the right times. He didn't score a point, but his field generalship was superb.

But it wasn't all Filchock, the Grindstone, Pa., quarterback, in the Alouettes' 27th march on a field patterned by stretches of heavy going in the mud and treacherous spots in the hard-packed snow. Led by fleet Bobby Cunningham, the entire Alouette team turned in its top performance on the big day.

The game had a "rhubarb" in its wake—blasts by Calgary coach Les Lear and president Tom Brook over playing-field conditions. They contended game officials could have protected the playing field with a tarpaulin from the seven-inch late week snowfall.

City Provided Fleva

"The city of Toronto provided the players a clear, dry field before the game," Brook said. "It certainly wasn't the city's responsibility if it came through when Varsity Stadium and Canadian Rugby Union officials failed to do anything about it."

Warren Stevens, University of Toronto athletic director, replied that a tarpaulin-big enough to cover the playing field would cost around $18,000. He said the expenditure wouldn't be justified because cold weather would still freeze the field under the tarpaulin "and no one has yet discovered how to defrost a frozen field."

The Stampeders, on the short end of the 7 to 5 betting odds, played heads-up ball featured by mighty defensive play of veterans Riley (Rattler) McKinnon and Johnny Aguilera, who inspired their front-wall mates to outplay the Montreal forwards.

Sugarfoot Anderson, big Negro end with the tomahawk-capped hands cut in for good defensive play and loped across for the Stampeders' second touchdown — a 30 yard gallop after picking up a Montreal fumble. Kay Hood crossed Als line for Calgary's other major count.

Just Missed Hood

Calgary trailed 11-0 going into the second quarter, but it was only hard luck they didn't score on a first quarter march that put the ball on Montreal's one yard line. An interference penalty moved the Stamps back 15 yards and their big chance ended there when Keith Spaith's forward just missed Hood in the clear.

"If we had kicked there, it might have been a different ball game," Lear said.

The hard-hitting westerners picked up spark with a seven-point second quarter drive manufactured on a long kick for a safety touch by quarterback Keith Spaith and Hood's touchdown converted by Vern Graham.

The turning point of the game came before the half when fullback Herb Trawick, 240-pound middie from Pittsburg bulled his way past Aguirre, rocked Spaith as he was set to toss a forward. The ball slithered to the ground and Trawick wasn't touched as he ran 32 yards into pay dirt with the fumbled ball.

Raised Interference

That was it, although Calgary came close to getting back in the ball game in the third quarter when a Filchock-to-Wagner pass touchdown shortly afterwards to put the game on ice.

Virgil Wagner, import from Bellefonte, Pa., went over for two of Montreal's four touchdowns. Cunningham got one. Big Chet McCance came up with three converts, a placement and a rouge, and Fred Klick punted a rouge.

The smiling gent surrounded by the bevy of laughing western beauties is none other than Toronto's popular mayor "Buck" McCallum. Hizzoner took part in the gay welcoming celebrations attended the Calgary Stampeders and Montreal Alouettes prior to Saturday's Grey Cup final won by the Red Wave from Montreal.

Both Marlboro Teams Retain Top Rating

(By The Canadian Press)

Ontario Hockey Association Junior and Senior 'A' standings came in for a minor reshuffling over the weekend games, but Toronto Marlboros, top teams in both loops, retained their leading ratings.

The junior edition of the Marlboro Club kept their lead at seven points with a 4-0 victory over the fifth-place Buzzis Flyers. The Senators were inactive.

In other contests, Toronto St. Michael's College Majors were disposed from second place by Windsor Spitfires, who belted the Collegians 6-3. Galt held St. Catharines to a 5-5 tie, the single point lifting St. Catharines to a third-place tie with St. Michael's. The doormat Stratford Kroehlers faced Oshawa Generals 7-3 to draw into an eighth place stalemate with the same Gens.

In the Senior circuit's only Saturday encounter, Kitchener-Waterloo Flying Dutchmen passed Owen Sound to take over second place via a 5-0 blanking of Tamworth Tigers.

At Toronto, in the first game of a Junior doubleheader, Marlies clicked for the only goals of the first period, rollable Jack McKendry hurling the trick. Larry Regan pulled the trigger on two goals, one in the middle session and one in the final canto. Dan Whitley drilled for the other Marlie counted in the final frame.

Better passing and checking than St. Michael's could disstay built the collegians in the second contest.

Bob Rawlyk tallied twice for the Spitfires in the opening session and Glen Skov clicked for a single. That beat the Irish could do was a marker by Rob Sabourin. Bill Dineen opened the second period scoring and his goal cut the margin to one. Bob Rawlyk then scored his second and Earl Riebel potted another to make it 5-2. Ed Sadkiewicz added a singleton in the final frame.

Falls to Hold Lead

In the game at Galt, St. Catharines failed to hold a 4-1 lead after the first period. Galt outscored Teepees 2-1 in the second and then drove in two counters in the third for the tie. Bill Aloft was top man for St. Catharines with a pair of markers, while singles were racked up by Bob Knowles, Corky Corcoran and Frank Martin.

Pete Conacher and Bronco Horvath counted with two each in the Galt cause and Ken Green sank the other.

Stratford pulled a minor surprise by thumping Oshawa Generals 7-2. Both teams notched a pair in the opening session and Stratford clicked for three more in the middle period and another two in the final stanza. Doug French, Jack Ashley, Bibber O'Learn, Dinny Flanagan, Jim Parnhan, Dunottie and Doug Williams spread scoring honors around the Kroehlers while Gord Warner and Marcel Clements were the Oshawa marksmen.

15 Penalties Given

Kitchener - Waterloo counted twice in the first frame of their conquest of Hamilton Tigers. Don Bauer and Norm Jacklin were the scorers. Don Bauer added a his second marker in the middle stanza and Mike Drolen and Art Hurst followed with singles in the final frame.

Fifteen penalities were handed out in the hard-hitting game including minors to Art Hurst and Hal Hursley in a third period rhubarb. Art Hurst of the Dutchmen got the heaviest cuts in the wild final period.

No games are on tap tonight in either circuit but four games are scheduled Tuesday.

Visitors meet St. Michael's. Windsor travels to Galt, and Guelph meets St. Catharines in the Junior loop. In the only Senior encounter, Kitchener-Waterloo play at Owen Sound.

Montreal Canadiens Win Two, Detroit Wings Beaten Twice As N.H.L. Standings Tighten

By HARRY ECCLES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The pace-setting Detroit Red Wings got two points over the weekend, and as a result their lead in the National Hockey League has been whittled down to nine less-imposing five points. The double defeat for the league leaders may be set alongside the fact that the third-place Toronto Maple Leafs still haven't won in six starts.

Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks each came up with two victories and as a result Detroit today has 27 points, Montreal 22, and Toronto and Chicago are tied for third spot with 18. Boston is fifth with 15, one more than New York Rangers in the cellar.

Saturday the Hawks walloped Detroit 7-2, Montreal beat Rangers 5-1 and Boston tied Toronto 3-3. On Sunday the Red Wings were beaten 6-2 by the Canadiens, Chicago beat Toronto 4-1 and Rangers held Boston to a 1-1 tie.

The Canadiens were more than a match for the Wings at Detroit. Elmer Lach, Edgar Laprade and Maurice Richard scored in the first period, Roger Leger and Billy Reay in the second, and Norm Dussault and Leo Gravelle in the third.

Prez-For-All in First

Big Bill Durnan in the Canadien goal was beaten only by Sid Abel in the first period, and Jim McFadden in the last The Canadiens matched the Wings in the fighting that marked the game, with a free-for-all in the first period and continuous outbursts.

A scrap between Grant Warwick of Montreal and Lee Fogolin of the Wings was a preliminary to the general fight. Warwick and Fogolin drew majors for fighting, and each drew two penalties for high-sticking. Eleven of the game's 16 penalties were handed out in the first.

Detroit's loss Saturday was their first in 11 games, when the Hawks turned in fall spat before the aroused Hawks in the Chicago Stadium. Hawks tied 2-2 at the end of the second, Metro Prystai and Adam Brown netting for Chicago while Sid Abel and Marty Pavelich scored for Detroit.

Score Five in Third

The blistering Chicago attack in the third period produced five goals. After Bill Gadsby made the count 3-2, Roy Conacher and Gaye Stewart scored within a minute and a half, with Metro Prystai and Doug Bentley adding to the total.

Canadiens didn't have much trouble beating the Rangers Saturday, and only Gene Fisher's score spoiled a shut-out for Durnan. The Montreal goals were shared by Richard, who had two assists, Billy Reay, Ziggy Broda, and Norm Dussault and L.eh.

The Boston-Toronto Saturday tie was a disappointment for the big Toronto crowd, who saw the Leafs leading 3-0 at the end of the second. Young Paul Henry scored two for Boston and veteran Milt Schmidt got the tying goal midway through the last frame. It was his second goal of the present campaign. Gus Mortson, Ted Kennedy and Sid Smith were the Toronto goal-getters.

Rough Goeng

The Hawks were still travelling at top speed when they walloped the Leafs at Chicago Sunday night. Referee Butch Keeling called 17 penalties in the rough going.

The Hawks rang up a 3-1 first period lead on goals by Olmstead, Red Hamill and Roy Conacher, while Fleming Mackell scored for Toronto. After Max Bentley scored for Leafs in the second, Olmstead and Metro Prystai both beat goalie Turk Broda, making it 5-2. Max Bentley got Toronto's last goal and Prystai another for Chicago in the third frame.

At Boston Sunday Alex Kaleta scored for Rangers in the fifth minute of play and the Bruins did not get the tying goal until Johnny Peirson scored on a screened shot in the final period.

None Promise Game Resembling National Title

New York, Nov. 28 — (AP)— The four richest bowls were chock full of football teams today but none promised a game resembling a national championship.

Two of the four leading touchdown machines in the United States, California and Oklahoma, are represented in the post-season line-up but on different fronts. The other two, top-ranked Notre Dame and Army, are not interested.

California and Oklahoma were among those finishing with unspoiloned records. The others were Notre Dame, Army and College of the Pacific.

The remaining six teams in the major bowls carry an embarrassing total of 11 defeats and three ties among them, hardly up to the usual bowl standard.

The line-up for the Jan. 2 games: (won-and-lost record in brackets)

Rose Bowl — California (10-0) vs Ohio State (7-1-2).

Sugar Bowl—Oklahoma (10-0) vs. Louisiana State (8-2).

Cotton Bowl — Rice (8-1) vs. North Carolina (7-3).

Orange Bowl — Santa Clara (7-2-1) vs. Kentucky (9-2).

Capot Named Horse of Year

Chicago, Nov. 28 — (AP) — In a photo finish, Greentree Stable's star three-year-old colt, Capot, has been named horse of the year by the Daily Racing Form over Calumet's Coaltown and Ponder.

Capot won the Preakness, Belmont, Chesapeake, Spraoby Mile and Jerome Handicap. He beat out four-year-old Coaltown in the Spraoby and again in the Pimlico Special. Coaltown was named best in the handicap division and Capot in the three-year-old division.

9 just can't save money!

That's what I used to say, and it was true. Sometimes I'd dream of the day when I'd have time and leisure to do all the things I wanted to do, but I had to admit I wasn't doing anything about it except dream. I never seemed to be able to put anything aside.

Now, I know those dreams will come true. They're guaranteed.

Through a simple saving plan which, strangely enough, I've found involves no hardship, I am now saving money for the first time in my life.

On page eight in my book is a chapter of Y-A-P rules. They are the odd rules to cover all exceptions. Only a few are needed. As in each Horse Sense rule, enough can be said in one sentence.

One of these odd rules is: Never open your yap to tell your partner something he already knows or expects. Another is: Do not lie to your partner; with no honest bid available, make the response that may do the least harm to your side.

If you must not lie and have no honest bid, why make any bid whether least harmful or otherwise? Answer is that one of your pals may have a card or a forcing signal. Being forced you must not pass.

When in a conventional agreement not to pass you may be caught short in the honest bid department. Then is when you select the bid that may do your side the least amount of harm.

Drop into this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠ A K 8 4 3
♥ None
♦ A Q 3
♣ A K 9 8 4

♠ 8 7 6
♥ A J 9 8
♦ K 5 4 2

Let the bidding start off like this:

South	North
2 S	3 H
4 C	?

What should north do next? The opening two bid is forcing to at least a game. Four clubs is not game, North is forced to come in with another bid. Which bid will it be?

No rebiddable heart suit or any other biddable suit; for takeout. Not adequate support for either spades or clubs. Four no-trump shows two aces and a king, for which he is shy an ace.

Thus he has no honest bid available. What response may do his side the least harm? Changing four clubs to four spades. It would be the least of the several evils from which he must choose. I means of canals.

NORTH ONTARIO HAS ITS PAUL BUNYAN

Toronto, Nov. 28 — (CP) — Northern Ontario, too, apparently has its Paul Bunyon—James Parker Smith Ballantyne. Commissioner for northern development in Northern Ontario, now in his 70s, he visited Toronto recently and was drawn into a discussion about his experiences for 40 years ago. One incident he described related how, on a bet with an Indian, he crossed a 1,200 foot portage packing two 200-pound barrels of salted pork on his back and 100-pound sack of sugar across his neck.

Mackenzie Column: Controversy Nub Really is Control Of Manchuria

By DEMITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press News Analyst

When you've sifted those 17,000 words of charges hurled at Russia in the United Nations by Nationalist China you will, I believe, find that the nub of the controversy really is control of Manchuria.

The Chinese allegations are these. One, the Soviet Union is accused of violating the Chino-Russian treaty of 1945 which the Chinese Nationalists maintain committed the Soviet Union to support only the Nationalist regime as the central government of China. The indictment further maintains that Moscow agreed Manchuria was a part of China.

With this as a premise the Chinese delegation at Lake Success accuses Russia of giving economic and military aid to the Chinese Communists, and of obstructing the Chinese Nationalist government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek in its efforts to re-establish its authority in Manchuria.

No Parallel

What is it that the Chinese really want. Are they seeking the expulsion of Russia from the peace organization.

No, Nationalist China apparently isn't after sanctions against Moscow. What she seeks is a moral judgment. She wants the U.N. to confirm her charge that the Soviet is guilty of violating Chino-Russian treaty. She wants the U.N. members to refrain from establishing diplomatic relations with the Chinese Communist regime at Peiping and under General Mao Tze-Tung.

Chiang is well aware that it's one thing to over-run the country with troops. And another to establish a government which can govern close to 1,500,000,000 impoverished peasants and rehabilitate the vast country. That's a task which calls for mountainous help from the outside world—mainly from the Western Powers.

One Chance

So, if a majority of the U.N. membership should condemn Russia and agree not to recognize the Chinese Communist regime, the Chinese Nationalists might have a chance to make a comeback. That is, they might have a chance if their rights in Manchuria were restored so that they could take advantage of the great resources of that country.

This impels one to ask what

AT THE BELLE — Betty Field has the romantic lead opposite Alan Ladd in Paramount's drama "The Great Gatsby", which ends its engagement at the Belle Theatre this evening. The story was written by Macdonald Carey, Ruth Hussey, Barry Sullivan and Howard da Silva.

AT THE CAPITOL — Fred MacMurray doesn't look harassed here but in "Father Was a Fullback" the new comedy at the Capitol Theatre, he certainly has his troubles, co-starring with Maureen O'Hara and Natalie Wood, his seven daughters, add to his problems as a coach and family man. Matinee daily at 2.00 p.m. Tonight is Collegiate Night.

AT THE CAPITOL — Maureen O'Hara who co-stars with Fred MacMurray in the new 20th. Century-Fox comedy, "Father Was a Fullback", opening today and Tuesday at the Capitol Theatre. Matinee daily at 2.00 p.m.

AT THE McCARTHY — Sally Forrest in a dramatic scene from "No Wanted," starting today at Odeon's McCarthy Theatre.

Peter White, 77, Dies in Toronto

Toronto, Nov. 28 (CP)—Peter White, 77, whose keen mind and gift for debate helped make him one of the best-known lawyers in Ontario, died Saturday after a long illness.

Noted for his part in murder trials, as Crown counsel or defence lawyer, he also acted as special counsel in many important cases and investigations.

He was counsel for the Royal Commission investigating the loss of the Grayana Queen, the First World War reparations case. He acted as counsel for the select committee of the Commons investigating the Beauharnois St. Lawrence River power project in 1931.

Mr. White was also counsel for the commission inquiring into the affairs of the Toronto Transportation Commission in 1929.

Born in Pembroke in 1872, Mr. White was educated at Pembroke High School, University of Toronto, and Osgoode Hall law school. He was called to the bar in 1896 and created a King's Counsel in 1908.

He was Mayor of Pembroke in 1902, reeve of Pembroke township for many years, and a warden of Renfrew County. A Conservative, he was an unsuccessful candidate for North Renfrew in the provincial election of 1903.

He is survived by one son, and two daughters, all of Toronto.

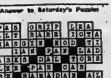
Answer to Saturday's Puzzle



Little Benny's Note Book

I was standing in frunt of Glasses Magee's house talking and arguing with him, and Glasses said, Look who's standing down in the corner wondering whether to come up.

Meening Reddy Merfy, and I said, I hope he says down there, that's all I hope.

Me, too, darn guy, Glasses said. He thinks he can do whatever he wants to anybody, just because he thinks he's a great fighter. When I get a little bigger I'll surprize him some time, he said, and I said, Well hay if he comes up here, I just thawt of a good one to play on him. I'll say to him, "Hay, Reddy, there's something on your nose."

Aw, you mean he'll put his hand on his nose to feel and say, never fall for that old one, he "What?" and you'll say, "Your hand." Glasses said. Aw he'll said, and I said, I know he wont, but there's a 2nd part to it that I just made up. When Reddy says, "Aw, who do you think you're kidding?" then you say, "There really is something on your nose now, Reddy — my hand." And you quick push him in the nose with your hand to prove it, I said.

Ahy, he'll get mad as heck, Glasses said, and I said, Maybe, but that's where the 3rd part comes in. As soon as he starts to get mad I'll laff like anything and say, "That's a matter, Reddy, haven't you got any sense of humor?" and then he'll be ashamed to death he's mad, I said

Okay, you do the pushing part and I'll do the laffing part, Glasses said, and I said, No sir, I'm the one made it up so I get the laffing part by rites.

Being the start of a fierce argument, and all of a sudden we were standing there, and we stopped the argument and didn't even give him the satisfaction of telling him what it was about.

N.S. to Institute New Vehicle Liability Law

Halifax, Nov. 28—(CP)—Nova Scotia's new motor vehicle liability law will come into force Dec. 15, Highways Minister Merrill D. Rawding said in a statement. The province's 1949 highway accident toll now is at an all-time high.

Its aim, said the minister, is to help prevent accidents and insure compensation for accident victims.

"We believe it is the duty of the government," Mr. Rawding said, "to do its utmost to protect our people against, and to curb, the rising toll of accidents. Highway deaths this year in Nova Scotia have been higher than ever before — 105 up to last week.

After Dec. 15, Mr. Rawding said, any driver or owner of a motor vehicle involved in an accident may lose the right to use the highway unless he can prove financial responsibility by producing a "motor vehicle liability insurance card, or a "financial responsibility card."

The liability insurance card is issued by insurance companies and indicates that the vehicle in question is insured against public liability to the sum of $5,000 for injury to one person and to $10,000 for injury to two or more persons, and against property damage up to $1,000.

The financial responsibility card is issued by the registrar of motor vehicles in cases where, instead of carrying insurance, a motorist posts a bond or deposits cash or securities totalling $11,000 with the provincial treasurer to cover possible damage claims.

IN THE ENEMY CAMP

Kingston, Ont. — (CP) — University of Toronto alumni apparently cared not a whit for the long-standing football feud between their university and Queen's University. Varsity alumni held a banquet recently in this Queen's stronghold the night before the visiting Varsity footballers were defeated by Queen's.

Ambassador Aids French Embassy Woman Escape

Warsaw, Nov. 28 — (AP) — French Ambassador Jean Baelen early today held Polish Security police at bay while the French woman Embassy employee they sought to arrest escaped through the back door of her apartment.

Baelen took the woman, Miss Helen Loisel, to the embassy. She is a secretary and acting vice-consul there.

Two Polish-born wives of embassy employees, living in the same building with Miss Loisel, refused to open their door when the police ordered them out of their apartment.

Later the police stationed themselves outside the apartment building.

French embassy officials believed Miss Loisel was wanted because she had been an assistant to Aymar de Brossin de Mere, embassy secretary and archivist who was expelled from Poland Wednesday on espionage charges.

The attempt to arrest her was the latest in a series of incidents that have produced a severe diplomatic crisis between France and Poland.

Belleville, Petes Open Senior Hockey Tonight

Senior "B" hockey in Group No. 1 gets under way in Memorial Arena tonight when the Belleville Diesel Electrics clash with the Peterborough Hockey Club in the initial tilt of the season. The Diesel Electrics defended the Peter Pan exhibition series but the going won't be so easy tonight. The Petes are a fast, hard checking squad and there's nothing they would like better than to open the season with a victory over the ancient rivals from Belleville.

Diesel Electrics will be at full strength for this important joust and they too, will be out there gunning for a victory. The game gets under way at 8:30 and it is expected that a large crowd will be on hand to see the squads pry the lid off the season's hockey pot.

In Peterborough, the Legion team of that city tangle with Gananoque in their first game of the OHA season.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Nov. 28 (AP) — Cincinnati Reds probably have more bonus players in their organization than any major league baseball club except the Philadelphia Phillies. Yet General Manager Warren Giles is expected to uphold the bonus rule when action to repeal it comes up at the major league meetings next month. When the Reds signed Bill Bailey, sophomore pitcher from the University of Tennessee, the other day, he became their 12th bonus player. The way Giles figures it, the rule is a good one for baseball and there's nothing that says he has to pay the bonuses. Likewise Gile plans a tangle with Branch Rickey and company on the matter of not giving a player part of the price when he is sold. Warren thinks it's fair enough to let the player profit if he's good enough to move up. But our dough will go on Rickey in any such argument. He's got better wind and more endurance. Cleaning the Cuff

Ballots are out for the annual turf and sport digest "Horse of the year" poll. And the two-year-old division looks harder to pick than the winner of the second at Charlestown. Mike Lee, Long Island press sports editor, will be honored by the sports mob tomorrow for 25 years of service and then go to hire a 2,000-seat theatre to take care of the coverd. Jackie Robinson, Barney Ross, Phil Rizzuto and Frank Boucher are just a few of the celebs who will turn out.

Needs 23 Stitches To Close Wound Suffered in Cell

Toronto, Nov. 28, (CP)—Marcel Muzy, 56, was taken to the hospital from his jail cell Friday night with serious head injuries when he fell, or was pushed, against a radiator in the cell.

A total of 23 stitches was required to close a gaping wound in his head. A cell mate, Michael O'Handley, 27, was charged with assault causing actual bodily harm.

The two men, arrested on drunk charges, were said to have fought over a match. Police said O'Handley pushed Muzy but O'Handley said he just gave Muzy a push away from him.

Martin's Summer

By Vicki Baum

Martin after this told her in a few clumsy sentences how he had spent the day, and while he did so, the Bojan squandered all the resources of her art upon him. Her hands performed miracles of expressiveness as they moved to and fro through the air. When Martin took his eyes from her and looked around, he found that Dobbersberg had left the terrace. Martin got up hurriedly and said that it was high time he rowed home.

"I'll take you to the boathouse," said the Bojan, turning her shoulders toward him so that the sunlight put over them her wrap of Chantilly lace, as his role enjoined. Then in her high-heeled shoes she went close to him. Martin took a deep breath and looked up into the sky. The glittering web of the Milky Way was straight overhead. The strong, sweet smell of a bed of lilies took away his breath.

"How overpowering they are, those flowers..." said the Bojan, switching on the top register of her voice voluptuously. At every step her hand touched his with its smoothness of hot glass.

"How lovely it is here," he said, when the view over the lake opened out, with the dark mountains beyond and Praxmeyer's chain of lights.

The Bojan took up the word as if it were her cue.

"Beautiful!—oh, all this beauty is nothing to me. It is beautiful where one is happy. But I am not happy. No, I suffer, I suffer, letting both fall again.

What, thought Martin, who had never heard anything like this. This is dreadful. What does she mean? A woman like this to suffer!

"You don't know how lonely I am," the Bojan continued. "There is not a soul in the world who means anything to me. Yes, it's true—for all my celibrity. No, I am incredibly lonely. Nobody knows what one succeeds in. We give our heart's blood, and what do we get in return."

The Bojan was now under way. She was throwing herself into her role at the finish, and she felt a blissful relief in playing the part. Her voice had a hundred nuances as she presented for Martin's benefit a little improvisation in whatever words best served her turn. In any case, the Bojan did not know that she was acting, for she had real genius and the tears came unbidden into her voice.

Martin, too, was affected. He held his breath. He felt awkward and clumsy and did not care to open his mouth. The Bojan indulged and condensed her emotion as if she were being filmed and she felt that her heart had at last come into her eyes. She smiled with moist smiles and tremulous lips. She caught her wrap more tightly round her shoulders until she looked quite consumptive and thin.

"Yes, you may laugh at me. What more do I want of life? It is soon over. I know that I shall die young, yes I know it," she said impatient, for she did not wish to be turned from her theme. "After all, I am not an old woman. And now I will tell you my secret—I have never known love I have never experienced real passion."

Martin groped his way along the gravel path past the pain in a state of painful emotion. The Bojan uttered her last word in a hoarse whisper, and he could catch them only by listening intently. It seemed very odd that a poor devil like himself should be walking beside the famous Bojan hearing the secret of her unhappiness. She told him her secrets. She came to him to hypnotize him, and she had kissed him that day as she left in her gondola.

Heavens above! He thought, and his heart beat violently. Since May had abandoned him he had been left defenceless and as if stripped of his talisman. And here was the hot hand again—he took it and held it fast.

"Do you think of me sometimes?" the Bojan whispered. "I think often of you. Ever since I first saw you I have thought you. I dream of you often at night—and when I am awake, too Oh, Martin, what are you doing?"

Martin was doing nothing. He had merely murmured a hoarse "Rather!" and pressed her hand. He felt unconfortable. Scene had always frightened him. But the way the Bojan spoke went through and through him. It was as if his naked heart were being rubbed with a grater. He did nothing. But even though he did nothing, he suddenly had the Bojan in his arms.

With the Bojan, what she acted and what she dimly felt ran into each other, and she began to sob and to laugh and rose rapidly to a pitch of hysteria.

Martin was greatly frightened. He let her go and came to his sense. He found himself leaning dazed against the trunk of a tree with the baron in front of him. Dobbersberg was quietly holding a small lantern in his hand and smiling a dry, tortured smile. Martin grasped for breath. The Bojan gave a little scream, hesitated a moment as to whether she should faint or run away and then, with speedy decision picked up her dress of the eighties and took to her heels.

"We brought you the boathouse key," the baron said affably in his high-pitched, pleasant voice.

Martin had vaguely anticipated something dreadful—a shot, a box on the ear, an outburst of vituperation. The baron's careless amiability made him feel as if he were falling into an abyss, down and down deeper and deeper. He stumbled along dizzily beside the baron toward the boathouse.

Good heavens, what am I to say now? he thought as the perspiration ran down his back. He could feel it distinctly. I am at your disposal, came in his mind. He was still in the eighties, and the phrase suggested itself of its own accord as the appropriate formality. I am at your disposal....

He opened his mouth twice before a sound came, and then he was surprised to hear himself say: "I don't know how it is—but I seem to get into most absurd situations here at your place....

"Situations that are more flattering to you than me, but one must not take such matters more seriously than they deserve," the baron put in amiably. "You too, my dear doctor, must not overestimate this—these.... My wife is extremely irritable when she is out at work, and she indulges herself in what little alleviation she can find. It is really my fault if I do not appear at the right moment to give her cue. In any case, as you are well aware, philosophers are always comic figures on the stage. They forget their umbrellas, stuff their table-napkins in their pockets instead of their handkerchiefs, and break the china...."

Martin listened with embarrassment to the easy flow of talk, but when the baron opened the boathouse and lighted the small lantern, Martin observed that he was very yellow all the same, with a shrunken look as if a fresh attack of ague was coming on. Map-pin began to feel bitterly ashamed of himself as he stood on the landing stage where Puck had laid him the day he rescued Hildtrom the lake.

"You see, jealously is now a necessity of the human soul. It is not a primitive emotion. It is a matter of convention, something superinduced and superimposed," said Baron Dobbersberg, as Martin put the oars in the rowlocks. "Wait a moment, doctor, till I loose the chain, Pull with your right, doctor, or you'll be into the sailing boat. Are you all right?"

"Yes quite. Thank you very much," said Martin, as he plunged the oars into the water.

The baron still held the chain in his hand. He went on: I have no wish to act inhospitably toward you. Therefore perhaps it would be as well if you came over no more to us from the other side. Good night, Dr. Heil. He threw in the chain—in a way that marked the limit of his self-control—and shoved the boat off from the landing stage with a vigorous kick.

Well, there I got my box on the ears, thought Martin as the boat put out into the lake, and he felt again a tiny cold trickle of sweat on his burning back. Inside the boathouse the baron put out the lantern and stood for some time in the darkness with his face pressed against the bars, alone with those suppressed secrets which are in every human heart and cannot be exercised by any philosophy.....

NAPANEE MAN CHARGED WITH MURDER OF WIFE TWO PLANE CRASHES TAKE TOLL OF 34 LIVES

28 of 46 Aboard U.S. Plane Killed In Dallas Accident

Air France Craft Crash At Lyons Causes 6 Deaths

Dallas, Tex., Nov. 29. (AP)—An American Airlines plane crashed into buildings on the border of Love Field early today and burned, Twenty-eight of the 46 aboard were killed.

Fourteen persons were in hospitals and one was missing. Three others left hospitals.

The big DC-6 was en route to Mexico City from New York and Washington.

Strikes Hangar

It struck a hangar and plowed broadside into a chemical plant after swooping over the field in an attempt to land. A crew member, who escaped, dazed and bleeding to a nearby house, said one of the engines was afire and he had stopped the other three.

Three of the crew members and 14 passengers survived.

Lt.-Col. A. P. S. Feraz, a British Foreign Office courier, was among those presumed dead.

A justice of the peace, Pierce McBride, said he had viewed 28 bodies—those of 17 men and 11 women.

Colored flames from burning chemicals lit up the scene eerily. Nearby two hours after the crash officers described the situation as "organized chaos."

Firemen were still pulling charred and rigid bodies from the twisted wreckage.

Three of Crew Survive

Three of the five crew members were among the survivors, American Airlines said. There were 40 passengers aboard.

In New York, American Airlines said there were 41 passengers aboard. The 41st was believed to be a baby.

(The Home Office said 43 persons had been accounted for. The Line said 27 bodies had been recovered, one died in a hospital, four were in a hospital, 10 had been released from hospitals after treatment and there were three other survivors.)

A blue - uniformed representative of the Line stood by the plane, weeping unashamedly as he kept count of the bodies brought out.

Flames licked the one - storey building into which the larger part of the plane crashed.

Crashes in Early Morning

It was about 5:45 A. M. (CST) when the big plane, outward bound magnaflux plant on the northwest edge of the field. The plant inspects plane engines by chemical means.

Both the plane and plant apparently burst into flames. Small explosions followed.

A seriously injured crew member staggered to a nearby house.

While blood oozed from his mouth, he said:

"I want to make a statement."

Frances Hudson, a grocery store employee, said she took this statement from the man, who described himself as the co-pilot.

"No. 4 engine afire an appeared. Air exploded. Ship hit hangar. The plane was on fire and I cut all four engines. The engines were off when we hit."

He didn't get his name except "George," and said, "I was all over bleeding and his back was burned."

Co-pilot Collapses

The man who said he was the co-pilot collapsed on the porch of the home of J. M. Kirby about 100 yards from the field. He was taken to a hospital.

Mrs. E. C. Dallett said other survivors straggled into her front yard.

"A couple came up with a baby. The man was carrying the baby. The baby was dead and was crying . . . In a few minutes an ambulance took them people

Lyons, France, Nov. 29 (CP)—An Air France plane with 37 persons aboard crashed just before it was due to land here this day. There were conflicting reports as to casualties, but at least six persons were reported dead.

An airport official here said the crew of five and one passenger had been killed in the crash. But at Orly Airport in Paris, from where the plane had taken off a short time earlier, an Air France official told Reuters News Agency all aboard the ship had perished.

The crash occurred near St. Just-Chaleyrain, a town of about 500 population, at 4:45 p.m. (10:45 a.m., EST).

En Route From Paris

The plane was arriving from Paris. There was not on the regular passenger service of the airline.

The crash occurred at St. Just-Chaleyrain, a town of some 300 persons near this ancient city at the junction of the Saone and Loire Rivers. Lyons is an intermediary landing point for aircraft flying between Paris and Marseille or French Mediterranean points.

Th. Bron airport at Lyons announced that all five crew and one or more passengers were killed.

The airport here said the plane was due to land at 2:40 p.m. (7:40 a.m. EST). It was flying in busy weather officials said, and headed to run into a particularly foggy spot that confused the pilot.

The fore part of the plane caught fire and was destroyed completely, they added.

away."

A wing was the nearest intact part of the plane. One part of the wing still had two motors on it.

The rest of the plane was a scrambled mess of wreckage.

The plane left New York Monday night, Air France officials said. It left Washington—its last stop—later that night.

The huge plane was coming in for a landing when it crashed on the northwest side of the field. It immediately burst into flames. Dave Finch, owner of the airport, is about seven miles northwest from the center of the city.

One propeller was feathered, American Airlines said, indicating that the plane had motor trouble in one of the four engines. But the plane was apparently coming in for a routine manner before the crash the Airlines said.

ELDERLY COUPLE FOUND SLAIN IN OSHAWA HOUSE

Battered Bodies Found By Neighbors of Victims

Oshawa, Nov. 29—(CP)—The battered bodies of an elderly couple were found today in a pool of blood in their ransacked home on Park Avenue in southeastern Oshawa. They were identified as those of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Katernyk, formerly of Canora, Sask.

The slayings were discovered by neighbors who broke into the residence after getting alarmed because the couple had not been seen since Saturday.

Chief of Police Owen Friend said the first person to enter the house was Mike Shedy, who lives around the corner from the couple's home. Shedy reported finding the house in a state of confusion, with the couple's clothing and personal belongings scattered around the rooms.

It could not be established immediately whether anything of value was stolen.

Lived in Comfortable Home

Police said Katernyk, more than 60 years old, came to Oshawa several years ago after retiring from farming in Saskatchewan. He was of Ukrainian descent. His wife was believed more than 70 years of age.

The couple, apparently fairly well-to-do, lived in a comfortable home at 250 Park Avenue. Katernyk recently had an oil-burning furnace installed in the house so that he would not have to shovel coal.

The Katernyks were said to have many friends in the neighborhood, settled mainly by citizens of Ukrainian origin.

Driver Rescued Unconscious From His Cab

Aurora, Ont., Nov. 29. (CP)—Frank Ball, Ottawa transport driver, today was pulled unconscious from the fume-filled cab of his truck by three men.

Ball parked his truck on the scales of a leather firm and turned off the motor on his way home. Apparently there for hours with the cab window open an inch, he was found slumped over the wheel by three men reporting for work.

Dr. J. Crawford Rose worked for half an hour to revive him.

"If I had been a few minutes later with the equipment," the doctor said, "the man would have been dead."

Toll of More Than 200 Lives Exacted in Air Crashes in Month

(By The Canadian Press)

The month's death toll in major civilian and military air crashes rose to more than 200 today with new crashes at Dallas, Texas and near Lyons, France.

November thus became one of aviation's worst months in peacetime history.

At least 28 died in the Dallas disaster and at least six in the crash of a Tunis-Paris airliner near Lyons. The French plane was reported carrying 37 persons, including a crew of five, and some reports said all aboard had perished.

Today's crashes came only three days after a Lanza (Colombia Air Line) DC-6 plunged into a mountain top near Bucaramanga, Colombia. Last word was that the fifty passengers and three crew members were believed dead.

Just about a month ago, Nov. 1, an Eastern Air Lines plane and a Pacific Southwest DC-3 collided in Washington, D.C., killing all 51 passengers and a crew of four on the DC-4.

Three days before a Paris-New York fire-gutted airliner crashed in a flaming heap against a mountain peak in the Azores. The 48 dead included Marcel Cordan, former world middleweight boxing champion, Guy Jasmin, Editor of the Montreal French-language daily Le Canada, and asmin's mother.

Then, Nov. 20, a Dutch mercy plane carrying 28 Jewish refugee children from North Africa to Scandinavia came down in a mass of twisted wreckage near Oslo, Norway. A 12-year-old boy survived, but 34 others died.

The United States Air Force's November pack of woes was highlighted by the loss of 19 persons when two B-29 Superfortresses collided in a mock bombing run near Stockton, Calif., Nov. 15.

It also was marked by one of the most extensive peacetime searches for a downed military plane which resulted in the Nov. 19 rescue by the Canadian destroyer Haida of 18 of 20 air force men aboard a plane near Bermuda. Their B-29 was ditched three days before.

During rescue operations, Nov. 18, another Superfort, off to hunt for the missing plane, crashed en route to Tampa Bay, killing five of the nine aboard.

On Nov. 3, a B-29 weather observation plane, crippled by engine trouble, crashed into the side of Kindley Field, Hamilton, Bermuda, killing 11.

RENT CONTROLS WILL CONTINUE IF RULED VALID

Position Outlined By Govt. Ministers

Ottawa, Nov. 29—(CP) — The federal government believes it should be out of the rent-control field completely.

But it won't withdraw before April, 1952 unless the Supreme Court rules that it hasn't the authority to continue the controls.

The government's position was outlined in the Commons Monday night by Finance Minister Abbott and Justice Minister Garson.

The House was discussing an order-in-council which will be placed before the Supreme Court Thursday asking a ruling on whether federal rent controls are valid. The case is expected to come before the court in February. But there is no indication of when the hearing may be made.

In a 2½-hour debate arranged to discuss the matter, the government received suggestions from the Progressive Conservatives and C.C.F. on how it should proceed. Social Credit members did not participate.

Suggested Postponement

Leading Grew, Progressive Conservative leader, suggested that the government postpone recently announced provision to hold rents 18 and 22 per cent until the whole matter of controls is clarified.

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, urged that the allowed increases be withheld until April 1 next to give his party a chance to call sessions of legislatures to discuss the question.

Mr. Coldwell said that such increases be postponed to that date in Saskatchewan to give that province time to organize effective machinery.

John Diefenbakre (PC — Lake Centre) said the order-in-council should be revised.

Instead of a new question about whether wartime rent controls still are valid, it should contain evidence that an emergency still exists. The validity of rent controls depends on whether or not the Supreme Court believes there is an emergency. Mr. Diefenbaker suggested the wording indicated the government was inviting the court "to sit down and pass resolutions vires—outside the jurisdiction of parliament.

Man Moves Away From Stove Shortly Before Tank Blows Up

Wingham, Nov. 29. —(CP) — Shortly after midnight today a man killed Monday if he had stood in one place seconds longer. Just as Mrs. Lloyd Wright left the stove, its water tank exploded, blowing the metal sides into the pantry. A one-and-a-half storey frame house was ripped in the kitchen wall, the roof was raised and the stove demolished. An upset kettle of water stopped flames from spreading.

Wants Job in Next Few Days Or He Will Ask to Go to Jail

Toronto, Nov. 29. (CP)—Eric Willan, 25-year-old former merchant navy cook, said today he will ask to be put in jail if Welland if he cannot get a job in the next few days.

In the meantime he's still looking for the girl he said he promised to marry when he met her on a ship.

Immigration officials permitted him to stay while they made arrangements for him to stay legally.

After ten weeks of waiting he came to Toronto where he met a girl he knew only as Yvonne, an orphan. A short courtship followed and they planned to marry Nov. 12.

On Oct. 27 they joined another couple on a visit to Niagara Falls, Ont. They decided to visit Buffalo. The others were granted to the United States but Eric was turned back because he lacked a passport. On his return to the Canadian border he was arrested.

In the meantime the other man in the party, a newly-discharged soldier, married the girl in a hotel and departed with Eric's last $75 and his clothing. His attorney said later, Eric found his fiance had disappeared. Now he's broke and out of work.

Young Married Woman Dies After Fatal Stabbing

James Fosbraey to Appear In Court Later in the Day

Napanee, Nov. 29 — (CP) — James Fosbrey, 28-year-old R.A.F. veteran, today was charged with murder in the fatal stabbing of his wife Monday night.

He was scheduled to appear in court on the charge later in the day.

Police said they were investigating events immediately preceding the stabbing. They said these included a reported violent quarrel, a broken appointment with a Napanee lawyer and an attempt by a Salvation Army officer to effect a reconciliation between the couple.

Pretty 25-year-old Mrs. June Marie Fosbrey was found lying in the blood-stained snow Monday night about 100 yards from her parents' home where she was staying with her four-year-old daughter.

A coroner, who had been sep- arated from her husband for several months, had been stabbed through the heart. Police said Fosbrey walked into the county building here soon after the stabbing and surrendered.

They said Fosbrey led them a block-and-a-half from the stabbing scene to a garden where a saw, leather-handled hunting knife was found. It had been tossed into the melting snow and was stuck into a furrow.

There were no witnesses to the stabbing but neighbors in the vicinity on the outskirts of Napanee said they heard screams and a loud outcry.

Woman Heard Screams

Mrs. Mabel Harden, one of the neighbors, said she heard two piercing screams. She and another resident, L. T. Spencer, ran outdoors and saw the figure lying in the snow.

"My God, it's June," Mrs. Harden claimed.

"She moaned a couple of times and then was still," Spencer said. "We and some others carried her into a home a short distance away and called doctors and police."

The surface of the snow was disturbed and police, seemingly indicating a struggle or some kind.

Mrs. Fosbrey, red-haired and pretty, was returning home from work at a Napanee department store at the time of the stabbing.

A preliminary medical examination disclosed she was stabbed close to the heart.

The couple had been married about six years. Mrs. Fosbrey met her husband when he was stationed at No. 31 Service Flying Training School at Kingston, about 24 miles east of here.

WOULD RAISE LICENSE FEE

Toronto, Nov. 29. (CP)— City Council Monday night approved a recommendation of the civic legislation committee that Toronto's fee for a hunting licence be raised from $1 to $2 to help government for permission to increase the license fee paid by coal dealers. The proposed fee is from the $5 now paid by dealers to as high as $150.

FARMER TO STAND TRIAL IN MERCY KILLING OF WIFE

Stories of Devotion to His Mentally Ill Wife Told at Hearing

Cobourg, Nov. 29 — (CP) — Ralph Kilbon, 56-year-old farmer who lived near here, will appear, will stand trial on a charge of murdering his wife — an act he has alleged to have been called a mercy-killing.

The calm-faced accused is charged with slaying his 51-year-old wife, Irene, in their rambling 28-room house at Baltiboro, 13 miles northwest of this Northumberland County town. He was committed for trial Monday, with hearing set for the Spring Assizes, in the Nov. 1 slaying.

Stories of his devotion to his mentally-ill wife were told in court at the preliminary hearing.

"He said that his wife shot herself in the stomach, while he was out for some water and that when he came in she was in such agony that he finished her off with the .22 rifle," testified Charles Barnard, a neighbor. "He asked me to get the doctor and the police."

Mr. Kilbon was very kind to his wife," testified Mrs. Barnard "Everyone could have done more for her."

Questioned by defence counsel John Robinette, she said Mrs. Kilbon appeared to be mentally deficient. She told of heard rumors of suicidal tendencies on the part of the woman.

Half Million Pay Tribute To Bill Robinson

New York, Nov. 29. (AP)—Bigname actors of show business and thousands upon thousands of ordinary New Yorkers Monday paid final respects to dancer Bill Robinson.

"Bojangles", who made and spent millions of dollars and won millions of hearts with his tapdancing and his smile, died Friday of heart disease at the age of 71.

All day Sunday while his body lay at the 369th Regiment Armory, nearly 40,000 people filed by the coffin.

Monday more than 5,000 more took their last look as two policemen—one white and one Negro—guarded the flower-banked coffin.

Later an estimated 500,000 mourners watched from sidewalks or tenement windows as the funeral cortege passed through the streets of Harlem to the Abyssinian Baptist Church.

Police were silent except for an occasional "Keep moving, fellas. Bill", Many of them wept openly.

While there was a special detail of 250 policemen held back a surging crowd outside the church, Mayor William O'Dwyer and a minister preceded the flag-draped coffin into the church.

There they were joined by other honorary pallbearers: Baseball Star Jackie Robinson, Ethel Merman, Eddy (Rochester) Anderson, James Barton, Arthur Treacher, Bert Lytell, and other theatrical figures.

Rev. Adam Clayton Powell, pastor of the church and a United States congressman, conducted the funeral. He estimated that Robinson had raised $100,000,000 for charity and had earned $4,-000,000 for himself during his 50-year career, but had "not a cent when he died".

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Toronto, Nov. 29 (CP)—Synopsis—Mild air from the Pacific Ocean continues flowing southeastward over the prairies and into the northern states, and now covers Ontario with the exception of James Bay and eastern Hudson regions. In this air very mild weather conditions will prevail from Lake Ontario westward to the Rockies. There were general snowfalls over eastern Ontario and James Bay regions during the weekend but generally rain in Georgian Bay and Hudson Bay regions. Sunny weather with mild temperatures is expected in all regions from southern Wre White River southward by this afternoon.

May be Cut-offs Unless Power Voluntarily Saved

Toronto, Nov. 29 (CP)—Robert Saunders, Chairman of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission said today that unless voluntary savings of power, requested of Southern Ontario municipalities last week, are affected "we may have to ask for cut-offs" similar to last fall's blackouts.

He said the critical period of the day was between 4.30 and 6 p.m., and cut-offs if they came would be during those hours.

Mr. Saunders said the illegal use of space heaters in thousands of Ontario homes is seriously complicating the present available power supply.

Mr. Saunders said that all municipalities in the southern Ontario system are being formally warned that the next three weeks constituted a "crucial period" for the system and that municipalities may be ordered to "pull switches."

"We have to be prepared for any eventuality that might occur" the chairman said.

Woodstock—(CP)—The Public Utilities Commission was advised today by the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission that power may be cut off any day from 4:15 to 5:15 minutes between 4:15 and 6 p.m. It was explained that overloading of the system has been caused by Toronto and Hamilton reverting to standard time.

Institutes Urged For Neurotic Dogs, Delinquent Horses

London, Nov. 29 (Reuters) —A veterinary surgeon has made an appeal to the veterinary profession for the establishment of institutes where "neurotic" dogs and "delinquent" horses and other animals can be treated psychologically treated.

Eric Oliver Langley, who made the appeal, is on the staff SH the appeal is on the research staff of the Royal Veterinary College Institute, Bristol.

He believes that dogs which worry sheep and kill chickens might be cured of their "vices" by psychological treatment. The shock therapy used in human mental cases.

Longley believes that some horses which shake their heads when they walk have an "obsessional neurosis."

Newest 'Wonder' Drug Neomycin Brings Cures to Two in Six Days

Philadelphia, Nov. 29—(AP)—Doctors at Pennsylvania Hospital today reported that one of science's newest "wonder" drugs has successfully cured two human diseases for the first time.

They said patients suffering from urinary-tract infections were administered the drug, the hospital said, with complete relief of symptoms after six days.

Neomycin is a drug-brother of streptomycin. Both are made from the same material—a soil fungus.

Treatment of the two patients was supervised by Dr. Garfield G. Duncan, director of the Institute of Medicine at Pennsylvania Hospital.

The patients, both near death, showed no ripe aftereffects on the chance the drug might work.

The drug was developed by Dr. Selman Waksman, Ukrainian-born scientist. He and his associates first discovered streptomycin in experiments at Rutgers University.

Dr. Waksman was assisted in the neomycin experiments by Hubert Lechevalier.

Combined with streptomycin," Dr. Duncan said, "neomycin may help in the treatment of tuberculosis.

If it does aid in even partially eliminating TB, neomycin will be one of the greatest discoveries of medicine.

Dr. Duncan decided to try neomycin on the patients after investment using penicillin, aureomycin, streptomycin and chloromycetin.

Drugs given orally usually cleared up the infection but couldn't kill the tuberculosis germs causing the illness," Dr. Duncan said, adding:

"Neomycin will be used in a very wide range of disorders but I wouldn't be able to tell in advance what it might cure or not."

Eight pharmaceutical firms are manufacturing neomycin, but only small quantities because the final effect on humans is still not known.

City and District News

SPLASHERS ACTIVE

With milder weather turning streets into slush and puddles, complaints of "splashers" driving in their dirty work were received today at the police station.

One man complained that he had been drenched from "head to feet" by a motorist who was plotting his apology but apparently a bit reluctant to go so far as to pay for a dry cleaning job for the unhappy pedestrian.

PART SPANIEL IN CITY POUND

A black and white male dog, part spaniel, was found wandering at large on Grier Street yesterday minus collar and tag. It was taken into "custody" by City Poundkeeper Thomas Thurrott who will dispose of it in the usual manner if not claimed within the next 48 hours.

CANDIDATES OPEN CAMPAIGN OFFICES

Mr. J. J. Trudeau and Alderman R. Jack Allin, candidates for the city mayoralty, have opened campaign headquarters.

Alderman Allin's offices are located at 40 Bridge Street East while Mr. Trudeau will conduct his campaign in the former recess office at the corner of Bridge Street East and Pinnacle Street.

Supporters of both candidates are invited to visit the respective headquarte

LOCAL PLAYERS IN SELECTIONS FOR ALL-STAR HONORS

All three received handsome gifts through the courtesy of the Goodman Store For Men.

COUNTY COUNCIL MEETS DECEMBER 6TH.

The Hastings County Council will open it. four-day December session in Shire Hall on Tuesday, December 6th. Chief on the agenda is the presentation of yearly reports from the various committees.

Last year saw nine new faces on the council but it is expected changes in county municipal councils will be few and far between in 1950.

ALDERMANIC CANDIDATE FORGOT TO QUALIFY

If you can believe "street talk" there was one aspirant for aldermanic honors in Tuesday's election on Monday morning with a very scarlet countenance.

He fully intended, the story goes, to let his name stand for election. But on Sunday, came the terrible realization that assistants for council honors were supposed to go through the formality of qualification on Saturday. You guessed it. He forgot.

Tentative Approval Given Government Annuity Plan For Past Service in Pension

Tentative approval of a Dominion Government annuity which would give consideration for past service of city employees was given by members of city council at their meeting Monday evening.

Previously council had passed a by-law offering a pension plan to members of the police and fire departments and to the administration staff, but the plan was turned down by employees who said it did not allow for past service.

Under the proposed amendment $25 per year for each year of past service would be given to the employee on retirement. The city would budget each year in its estimates according to the number of employees going on pension each year.

Alderman Ashley in speaking to the recommendation stated the pensions committee considered this scheme to be the best advantage of the city than certain other schemes which would allow the municipality to make an advance provision for past service. This, he pointed out, was just the city considerable money.

No Considerable Outlay

He added that under the scheme proposed, rather than the big outlay of considerable outlay at once, pension payments for past service would be distributed each year. He said that under this scheme the past service pension would be in about eight years after which they would decline. In about eight years time the yearly cost for past service pension payments would be about $12,000.

Harold Carruthers, agent for North American Life, which is interested in setting up a pension plan for the city told council that in large percentage of city employees were not interested in pension plans because they could not allow them to get their money back. Under the plan of his company offered, employees could get their money back. He admitted however, that his plan may be a trifle more costly, but reminded it was a participating plan in which payments would be reduced by reason of profits.

Only Requests By-law

Again taking the floor Alderman Dudley argued the only reason for a pension plan was to provide a retiring pension, for city employees. The city was not obliged to establish a fund for an employee, who at a later date might wish to set up in business.

The alderman stated his recommendation merely asked the city solicitor to prepare the by-law for presentation to council.

Mayor D. L. Storey pointed out that in offering employees a pension plan, the city had gone as far as was necessary to qualify for provincial grants to the police and fire department.

"We are obliged to provide a pension plan," said Alderman Hyde.

"It's there," returned the Mayor.

66% Will Be Interested

Alderman Thomas wanted to know if it was true that city employees were not interested in a pension plan unless past service was considered. In reply Alderman Duffy said it was only natural for an employee to be interested in back service, but he felt that about 60 per cent of the employees would accept the plan offered.

Alderman Lummiss wanted to know the administration costs of the Dominion Government annuity. In reply Alderman Duffy said it was difficult to pin down such costs but he felt that 20 minutes per day at the city hall would look after administration.

Alderman Armstrong spoke in support of Alderman Duffy's statements, pointing out the pension scheme was a matter of dollars and cents insofar as the city was concerned. He said the committee felt the Dominion Government annuity with payments of $25 per year for each year of back service, was in the best interests of the city.

In Different Category

Alderman Allin wanted to know if there was any provision being made for including employees of the public works department in the pension scheme.

He was told by Alderman Duffy that the public works employees were in an entirely different category from the police and fire departments in that the ages of the men were considerably greater and any pension plan for this department would require an entirely different approach.

Alderman Lummiss wanted to know what assurance there was that the municipal board would approve of the proposed pension scheme.

"My idea has always been that you get just what you pay for," he said. "I feel that an employee should be able at any time to get out of a pension scheme what he has paid into the way of contributions. I am strongly in favor of a plan where the employee can get his money back at any time."

Alderman Tice was dubious of the city being protected insofar as grants were concerned merely through offering employees a pension plan. He wanted to know if the city had this understanding in writing. He was assured by Mayor Storey and also by Alderman Clarke that this was correct.

Wants Rink on Harbor

Arthur Keegan appeared before council asking that an outdoor skating rink be established on Belleville harbor. He said that certain hills in the city be roped off to provide tobogging slides for the small children. The matter was turned over to Alderman Lloyd, who already has the establishment of outdoor rinks underway.

Tenders will be called to a storm sewer on Sidney Street, and also for a sewer grader.

A communication from the Canadian Chamber of Commerce asked that council give close consideration to any project concerning the development of Canada's Inland and asked that consideration be given to a land term development of the area as a recreational centre.

A recommendation from Alderman Lloyd was passed authorizing the signing of the deed and the necessary action against Mr. Sam Wannamaker in the matter of his property on Lingham Street.

The alderman said Mr. Wannamaker was trying to establish a laughing stock of the city and of his particular alderman through his building activities. He said Mr. Wannamaker was constructing a building partly on city property for which he had no building permit.

Inquires of Plans

Alderman Allin asked that school guides be on duty hall an hour earlier at the corner of Church and Station Streets, while Alderman Thomas enquired regarding plans for the proposed incinerator on which he said the mayor had promised action this year. The mayor replied the matter was in the hands of the sites committee.

Alderman Tice voiced a complaint from the Bell Telephone Construction Company that it had been refused certain information from city hall records regarding work done for the public works commission. Mayor Storey replied the information requested would have taken considerable time on the part of city hall staff and for this reason it had been refused.

Under motions, Alderman Lidle asked for a written report from city council to the board of health regarding the progress of plans for the incinerator.

Council Members, City Hall Staff Alderman's Guests

Members of city council and administration staff at the city hall were guests of Alderman Orliff "Bobbie" Lloyd at the local Shrine Club on Monday evening at a pre-council dinner meeting.

All members of council turned out to enjoy the hospitality of their fellow councillor who this year will retire from municipal life after two years in "harness", and to enjoy a social get-together.

Mayor D. L. Storey, who will also retire from municipal life this year, took advantage of the occasion to express his appreciation for the co-operation he had received from Alderman and from the city hall staff during his two-year term of office.

The mayor observed that his two years in council had been an "education" and that he had thoroughly enjoyed the work. He added that council had been criticized for spending a lot of money but he said they had got results and the city was booming. In closing he expressed his appreciation to Alderman Lloyd for the invitation to the dinner.

Replying to the Mayor, Alderman Lloyd assured it had been a pleasure for him to work with other members of council and he also assured his experience in municipal affairs had been an education.

All members of council as well as members of the city hall administration staff expressed their regret at learning that Alderman Lloyd were leaving council.

Public Meeting Sponsored By C. of C. for Candidates

Aspirants for the various municipal offices to be filled in municipal elections will be given the opportunity Thursday evening at the Belleville Collegiate to express their views on just how a city the size of Belleville should be governed.

In other words the various candidates will have the opportunity of representing their views at a public meeting being arranged by the Belleville Chamber of Commerce and which will be broadcast over radio station CJBQ this morning is scheduled to commence at 8:15, with C. Arthur Bateman, president of the Chamber of Commerce, as chairman.

The two mayoralty candidates will be given five minutes each to tell the public just what they hope to achieve by way of administration if they are elected on Monday, while candidates for aldermanic seats and for Board of Education will be given just three minutes.

The candidates for mayor will speak first with aspirants aldermanic seats and members of the Board of Education to draw for speaking position.

Through the courtesy of the Chamber of Commerce each member of the audience will be given a program listing the names of all candidates and the position for which they are running.

Can Ask Questions

On the end of the programs will be a "tear off" section on which questions may be written. These slips will be collected while the last speaker is on his feet, following which there will be an opportunity for answering as many of the questions as possible.

In order to prevent interruption of the radio broadcast which is to commence at 8:30, members of the audience are requested to be in their seats not later than 8:15.

This is the taxpayers' opportunity to get out and bear for himself just what office holders for next year hope to accomplish for Belleville in 1950.

Remember, Thursday evening is the night; 8:15 is the time. A really bang-up turnout is expected.

Council Requested To Support Planning Board

Co-operation of city council to-ward the support of the Belleville and District Planning Board was asked Monday evening by Harry Brown, secretary of the Board, in a personal appearance before council on behalf of J. J. Trudeau, chairman of the Planning Board.

Mr. Brown said that council this year had not paid anything toward the maintenance of the Planning Board, while the two municipalities of Sidney and Thurlow, somehow had paid one half of the grants which had been promised. With the city failing to pay its share the two municipalities now were holding up the payment of the latter half of their grants.

The speaker went on to say that the board so far this year had held 16 meetings with the members receiving no remuneration. He admitted members had been paid $5 per meeting through 1948 but that year payment had been held up pending legal interpretation as to whether they were legally entitled paid.

Mr. Brown said the planning board had been working toward a program of land uses taking in the whole of the surrounding district, but the work this year had been hampered through lack of support and of funds.

"When will the master plan be ready?" asked Mayor D. L. Storey.

Mr. Brown replied that J. T. Ransom, Ontario Land Surveyor, had been given the job to prepare the master plan but to date this had not been received. It was stated the plan originally was to have cost $10,000 but Mayor Mr. Ransom stated there was much more work entailed than at first anticipated, the fee had been raised to $300.

Request Made Same Mistake Not Be Made Again

A request that the same mistake not be made in the Bayview Heights district as was claimed to have been made in the Parkwood Heights district with respect to the reduction of commercial retail oulets, was made before members of council last evening.

Dennis L. Swan, head of the Parkwood Heights Homeowners' Association urged council to have any commercial area in the housing area now under development to be clearly defined and the necessary by-law passed, and thus prevent any misunderstanding or recurrence of what had taken place in the Parkwood Heights district.

Mr. Swan briefly referred to the decision of the Ontario Municipal Board in disapproving of the city by – law which would have restricted the commercial area in Parkwood Heights to the one block.

Council did all it could under the circumstances," he said, "but I ask that it be allowed to be a lesson to prevent any misunderstanding in the Bayview Heights area."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 29. (CP) —Prices gave way to slightly increased selling pressure on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. An opening attempt at a recovery of recent losses failed to hold and the market continued its decline.

Metals showed the sharpest losses with market leaders sliding as much as a full point. Junior gold producers were comparatively steady following losses in the previous sessions. Base metals were lower and western oils sagged on scattered penny declines.

Volume for the first three hours was 437,000 shares.

International Paper held against a weaker paper list, gaining $1 at $71. Refining oils, utilities, constructions and liquors were lower.

A few smaller issues featured a steady gold list. Hoyear Uranium and Gold Mines was a brisk mover for a slight gain. The company owns various uranium properties and gold prospects in northwestern Quebec.

Market leaders were down fractions in base metals. Noranda recovered part of an early decline and Labrador continued dipping losing 20 cents at $4.75.

Seek Information For Distribution Of Yule Baskets

Make sure that every little boy and every little girl living within the boundaries of Belleville have a happy and joyful Christmas. Make sure there isn't a family who has to want this December 25th. Make sure that the abundance of good cheer and happiness that prevails at this season is distributed evenly amongst all of them.

Mr. Mark Vanner and the Rev. Grant Sparling, the two members appointed by the Inter-Service Club Council have directed a letter to the many local organizations who help needy families at Christmas with a view to listing all of those in unfortunate circumstances so that the Christmas baskets can be distributed without duplication. "It is our purpose to see that everybody eligible receives enough," Mr. Vanner said pointing out that the index system being compiled by them serves as a directory for both the organizations through which families appeal for aid and the organizations giving the Christmas packages." Should some one family's name be listed on more than one list the sender will be notified with the idea of avoiding repetition, the spokesman added.

The Inter-Service Club Council comprises the presidents of the six service clubs in the city.

Cheese Factories Are Pouring in For Dairy Show

Cheese entries are already pouring in for the British Empire Dairy Show to be held at the Church Street Orange Hall on December 6th and 7th, it was stated today by James L. Irwin, honorary president of the cheese show.

All of the 300 entries will be in by Thursday and Friday of this week with judging of the cheese to begin on Saturday. Cash prizes of approximately $1,700 are being offered, as well as numerous silver and other awards.

Considered one of the largest cheese shows in the British Empire, the British Empire Dairy Show draws entries from the three provinces of Ontario, Quebec and Manitoba with more than 100 entries expected this year from Quebec alone.

Judges for the cheese show this year are W. E. Brennan, of Kemptville; George Barbeau and Emmanuel Quesnel of Montreal, and Robt. Gilfillan, local dairy grader. Judging is expected to be completed by Saturday evening.

The big cheese show held annually in this city is being held in conjunction with the 22nd annual convention of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association convention. Ranking dairy officials and others are expected to speak at the convention sessions to be held at the Hotel Quinte.

The cheese show and convention will be concluded with a cheese makers' banquet to be held on Wednesday evening, Dec. 7th, at Tobe's county district. Miss Margaret Lynn Munn, "Miss Canada" for 1949 will appear in person as a vocal artist on the banquet program.

Car Crashes Into Tree, Driver Hurt

Suffering severe concussion and possible internal injuries when his car crashed into a tree after going out of control on the four-lane highway in the east end of the city, Aaron T. Lorimer, 24, 132 Chatham Street, was admitted to Belleville General Hospital early today.

Police stated that Lorimer was proceeding east on the four-lane highway when just inside the city limits his left wheel caught the snow on the boulevard and the car crashed into a tree on the boulevard.

The car, a 1936 model, owned by Clayton Burley, 372 Bleecker, was completely demolished.

Police Constable Frank Sunderland came on the accident just after it occurred when he happened to be patrolling in the area.

Four Dollar Bill Rare But Still Negotiable

Never be accused of being as phoney as a four dollar bill!

In fact, take offence, because a four dollar bill is not phoney and Mr. H. N. Becker, manager of the Bank of Montreal, can prove it.

A collector of old and different money Mr. Becker can show a four dollar bill that was issued by the Dominion Bank of Canada at Ottawa on July 3, 1900, and bears the serial number C20139. Currency of this denomination is rare, however, although is good at its face value at any authorized Canadian bank.

Another piece of money prized by Mr. Becker is a five dollar bill put out by the Molson's Bank which later was absorbed by the Bank of Montreal. This old note was issued at Montreal on July 2nd 1918 and countersigned by manager "Cuddle", Tenus of Trenton, Ontario, a procedure designated local branch manager in those early days.

Collector Becker produced the last silver dollar issued by the Mint at Ottawa. He said that demand seemed to be greater than supply for this new 1949 piece, but has been available at all teller's cages in the country since late summer.

Pair Sentenced For Theft

Tweed, Nov. 29 — (Special)— Appearing before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd at police court here Elmer Lambert of St. Ann's, Quebec, was sentenced to 6 months definite and two months indefinite in Cuelph Reformatory when he was found guilty of breaking, entering and theft from Homes Service Station recently. His partner in crime Vernon Derochie, 17, of no fixed address was given three years suspended sentence for being an accomplice.

The pair were arrested earlier in Whitby where they were traced by provincial police after they had hitchhiked a ride on a westbound transport following the theft of about $10 in cash, about $15 in garage tools and cigarettes from the service station.

POLICE COURT

William Casselman, 149 St. Paul Street, was fined $25, or one month in jail, when he was convicted on a second offence charge of driving while his operator's licence was suspended Casselman appeared before Magistrate T. Y. Wills last week and he came up today for sentence.

A local motorist was convicted on a drunk driving charge and sentenced to seven days in jail. The charge was laid on October 9th when the accused was returning from Madoc Fair. The case was heard several weeks ago with judgment being reserved until today by the magistrate.

A Front Street merchant was convicted on a charge of operating a punch board at his place of business and was assessed $24.50 fine and costs.

POLICE BLOTTER

No parking signs placed at different locations about the city took a beating over the weekend as motorists were unable to control their autos and crashed into the posts causing varied degrees of damage.

One sign on Canniffon Road was reported to have been broken off, while two others, one of them on Dundas Street, were badly bent. Slippery snow covered streets were stated to have been the cause of the mishaps.

ONE-DAY POSTPONEMENT

Toronto, Nov. 29. (CP)—Milo Perofsky, of suburban New Toronto, gets a one-day postponement of his trial because of his answer to a question. He was asked how he pleaded and answered "Just fine your honor, just fine". The charge was being intoxicated.

Credit of Town Is 'Tops' Declares Finance Chairman

Trenton, Nov. 29 (Special) —Trenton's credit is tops", declared Finance Chairman Clarence Saylor, presenting figures of the town's 1949 expenditures and income to fifty of the biggest property owners attending the annual nomination meeting. Mr. Saylor is one of the councillors who has sat beside Mayor Kenneth Couch since he took power three years ago and along with all but one member of the old Couch council was returned to office by acclamation.

In retracing the progress made by the Couch-led administration the finance chairman, in plain words, told his listeners that the town's business reputation stunk for years before the new executives took over in 1947. "By the end of the first year holding the reins, Mr. Saylor revealed the annual statement showed a small deficit, a small surplus at the end of the next term and this year the budget to be brought down has the earmarks of being favourable.

Mr. Saylor showed the ratepayers where the most recent assessment boost increased the town's assets by some $3,689,731 from a total assessment of $7,740,895 complained the chairman of $4,071,165 the result of the re-assessment in 1941 when the mill rate was struck at 59.5.

Lowered Mill Rate

"Last term we gave the council an additional $53,000 operating revenue, paid off $160,000 in debenture loans besides lowering the rate to 29 mills," the finance chairman stated in disclosing the bright spots of his report. The speaker, however, made it clear that the future would not be as bright as it is when he announced that plans were being studied for the building of a new high school at an estimated cost of $1,000,000 along with facts and figures for the necessary installation of a plant to handle Trenton's ever - increasing sewage problem. Mr. Saylor consoled the ratepayers with news of a similar nature from a number of Ontario towns, indicating Trenton wasn't the only municipality undergoing the headaches of serious growing pains.

Mr. Saylor announced that the municipality would float a debenture loan in the amount of $120,000 sometime during 1950. He felt that the net increase in the town's debt to $150,000 in four years of operation was encouraging especially when the sharp increase in values was considered.

The finance chairman compared Trenton's financial standing with seven Ontario towns including Barrie, Brockville, Orillia, Mimico, New Toronto, Lindsay and Smiths Falls and his figures showed that Trenton rated as follows: Total assessment, third highest; tax revenue, second lowest; total expenditure, lowest; tax levy per capita, lowest; debenture debt, fourth from lowest.

Belleville's Future Belongs to YOU!

YOU can push the City Forward, or YOU can push it back!

Right Now We Must Hold the Economy — or — Face Higher Taxes — Higher Rents. We Must Stop Excess Spending. Like You — I want to Hold the Tax Rate Near the Present Level. Only a Program of Planned Savings Can Do This. Indebtedness Already Incurred by the City Must be Met.

Belleville's greatest need in 1950 is Experienced Municipal Leadership!

We need men who have not only BUSINESS EXPERIENCE, but experience in MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS — with practical knowledge of the city's business which comes only through years of working in the City Council, that knowledge and understanding of the city's present and FUTURE requirements which come only from close and active participation in civic affairs.

There is no effective substitute at this time for Municipal experience. The risk of loss by the city is too great.

I, Alderman Jack Allin, Offer Myself as Candidate for Mayor

I believe that my ten continuous years in the City Council are of value to the citizens of Belleville, particularly at this time. Our city is on the way to becoming one of the great inland ports and will serve a vast and growing industrial area.

New Industries

For two years now I have served as Chairman of the Industrial Commission, and in that time 15 new industries have been brought to, and developed in Belleville and district.

This is the Type of Service Belleville Needs Most. This Type of Service Means Progress, Development.

What Do the New Industries, Already Brought In, Mean to You?

1.—Today, they are finding employment for more than 1,200 people.

2.—New payrolls of more than $2,852,000 annually.

3.—A total new investment of $11,167,500 in Belleville and district by these companies.

These Great Benefits Came to Belleville During the Two Years That I Have Been Chairman Of the Industrial Commission

AT PRESENT negotiations with three large industries which are coming to Canada. One of them will spend $3,000,000 in the city in which it locates. WE WANT THOSE INDUSTRIES IN BELLEVILLE, and IF elected I WILL DO ALL IN MY POWER TO BRING THEM HERE.

The Greater St. Lawrence Development now is in the foreseeable future. We must prepare now, through wise planning by men experienced in municipal affairs, to take full advantage of that great development.

In the foregoing I have talked more about the future of Belleville than about Jack Allin. That's how it should be. YOU WANT A MAN FOR MAYOR WHO WILL PUT THE CITY FIRST, NOT USE THE OFFICE FOR HIS OWN ADVANTAGE. I have put the city first for many years past, and will always do so.

VOTE JACK ALLIN

for Mayor

and a Greater Belleville!

SORRY MR. CANDIDATE

THE PARKWOOD HEIGHTS HOME OWNERS' ASSOCIATION has had numerous requests from Candidates in the coming Civic Election for the opportunity to address a meeting of the Association. As it was formed as a strictly non-political organization and intends to remain that way, we regret we cannot accept these, or any similar requests. We will, however, take the opportunity of hearing ALL the candidates at the Collegiate on Thursday night and hope all Belleville voters will do the same.

THE EXECUTIVE,
Parkwood Heights Home Owners' Ass'n.

MEMORIAL FOR AIRMEN

Some twenty thousand names of members of the air forces of the Commonwealth, who fell in the United Kingdom and Northwest Europe and have no known grave, will be inscribed on a memorial to be erected in Britain.

The site will overlook the River Thames at Runnymede, a name forever associated with the signing of Magna Carta by King John more than seven centuries ago.

Land for the memorial has been offered by Sir Eugene and Lady Eiffe Millington Drake. The site combines beauty of surroundings with historic interest and ease of access. The view from the hilltop on which the memorial will stand extends over the Thames across seven countries. The memorial will be designed by Edward Mauge, R.A.

WINTER DRIVING AND BRAKING FACTS

National Safety Council brings to the attention of motorists and pedestrians information on winter driving facts which should find way into the consciousness of everyone who uses the roads, streets and, highways and that includes everybody.

The latest research by the National Safety Council brings this warning — skidding and reduced visibility substantially increase the traffic death rate during the winter months of ice and snow.

On the other hand equalized brakes, tire chains, good windshield wipers, defrosters, good lights and reduced speed all can prevent the driver from sliding to a junk pile or to a hospital with injuries that may claim his life.

Here are some of the facts which the Council presents for the study of everyone. They are cold weather hints to save the car or the lives of the driver and his passengers or the pedestrians on the road.

A chart has been prepared to show the braking distances on various road surfaces with speed at 20 miles per hour. These are the facts which should assist drivers to stop in time.

On a dry concrete pavement braking distances at this rate of speed are as follows:

A car will travel 21 feet on dry concrete, 26 feet on wet concrete, 40 feet on packed snow with chains on rear wheels, 75 feet on packed snow without chains, 88 feet on glare ice with chains on rear wheels, and 183 feet without chains on glare ice.

These are startling figures and should drive home to motorists and everyone else the facts of travel rates and the responsibility owing to themselves and others since the braking distance of cars rises so precipitously at the greater speeds. Even the distances covered on dry concrete is proof enough to the driver how near he may be to an accident.

These figures impress the need for every care in driving at this cold season of the year when road conditions differ so greatly even over the shortest distances.

NEW NATION RISES

A little more than two years hence, if the timetable worked out at Lake Success is followed, another sovereign state will join the family of nations. This is Libya, once the largest colony of Mussolini's new Roman Empire, and later snatched from him by a triumphant British Eighth Army.

The plan to raise Libya to independence not later than January 1, 1952, is acceptable to Britain and the United States, and apparently to Russia as well, though perhaps not for the same reasons.

It is known that in Libya some of the groundwork for a Communist coup has been laid. Possibly Russia feels this advantage can be held during the next two years, even though British troops still will garrison the area. At any rate, there is uneasiness about Libya in the Western democratic camp, and doubtless Britain and the United States, in the time that remains, will do their best to set the colony on a course toward untrammeled independence.

The stakes in this game are high, for both parties to the cold war, Libya as a Communist-dominated state would mean a Soviet puppet on the Mediterranean. The Western powers, their security in a large measure dependent on unchallenged access to Middle East oil, would not regard that development indifferently.—Windsor Star.

RESEMBLANCE

If a boy is like his mother he will tender be and kind;
And if he's like his father may have wisdom in his mind.
But, if he's like them both a bit — a mixture, as we say —
He'll surely be successful here before his hair turns gray.

If a girl is like her mother, does as always she would do,
She'll grow to be a maiden any some man will rush to woo.

And if she's like her father, or of both of them a blending,
She'll be happy with her children and the garments they are rending.

It is fortunate for children who have fathers that are wise
And mothers kind and tender, with the lovelight in their eyes.
To be like the one or other, or in every pleasing trait
To resemble both a little, is indeed a happy fate.

IS ALCOHOLISM SIN OR DISEASE?

The greatest stumbling block to the rehabilitation of an alcoholic is the concept that alcoholism is a "disease." The alcoholic should be disabused of the idea that he (or she) has a "disease", other than that caused by the poison, alcohol. He should be informed that he has merely failed to mature emotionally and that he can be rehabilitated only by self examination, once the error of his infantile pattern of conduct is thoroughly explained to him. (Quoted from his column as released by Canadian Press Thursday, Sept. 1, '49).

This is the view as expressed by a real doctor who has had experience whereby he speaks. It impressed me most when the doctor stated it that I printed it here. Previously I had been inclined to favor the idea that alcoholism is a "disease," although the nature of the disease is only vaguely recognized.

From the head of a sanitarium comes the following pertinent comment:

Dear Doctor:

As a long time reader and admirer of your articles touching on alcoholism as an alcoholic, recovered—or arrested (resisting) for many years, principally through the miracle of Alcoholics Anonymous; as one who has always breathed, talked, written and dressed temperance, as well as having been a graduate of the Yale School of Alcohol Studies; and as a director (under competent medical and psychiatric direction) in hospitals exclusively dedicated to alcoholics, I respectfully beg to take issue with your opinion that the concept of the problem as a disease is the last word in the matter.

Many the specific influences which contribute, mentally, emotional and spiritual—have combined to m; own recovery, but the most effective, without most dramatic and, I am utterly by conviction, the most indispensable was my own recognition of the fact that I had ultimately confused my "disease" (if you wish) to mean alcohol and not a moral issue and that effect was instaneous in removing my need for that alcohol as an anaesthetic for the psychic pain caused by unhealthy feelings of guilt and inferiority.

I agree with every other word in your article. Emotional immaturity, narcissism, egocentricity, rationalizations were the totality of my personality—as that is every alcoholic and most recognized as symptoms of a disordered condition. I was safe to view them objectively and start to work on them without alcohol and I have known hundreds of others commence effective recovery on their beers.

Admitted: some alcoholics use the excuse as an excuse, but in such cases it is merely one addition to the thousands of rationalizations they are already using, and recovery never starts until the system of rationalizations has been tested so often and so severely that it breaks down and no longer holds validity for the patient.

In short, I believe that the concept of alcoholism as a disease of the emotions is the most every one to whom it may prove a hindrance and, in any case, it is one of those things which the alcoholic must face to recover—merely, a fact.

Signed (——)

I print these comments because the correspondent seems to contribute something of value. Call it "disease" or emotional immaturity or unbearable feelings of guilt and inferiority, alcoholism is a dreadful affliction and I wish we had a better answer for it.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Pile Treatment

You may send me a sample of your pile treatment provided there is no obligation. (J. A.)

Answer—Positively no obligation. Ask for it in writing and inclose self-stamped envelope bearing your address, and I'll send you the pamphlet it is Stupid to Suffer from Piles.

Cod Liver Oil

I'm afraid to take my three-year-old to the doctor's office because many children there are coughing all the time—and infantile paralysis in the community. Won't you please tell me the dose of cod liver oil for a three-year-old girl. (Mrs. D. E.)

Answer—I agree. Sitting in a doctor's crowded and, too often, stuffy and poorly ventilated waiting room, is a dangerous adventure for any child. Daily average dose of cod liver oil for a young child is about a teaspoonful.

Seed Warts

Please tell me how to get rid of seed warts. I have several on my hand. (C. A.)

Answer—Send stamped self-addressed envelope and twenty-five cents for pamphlet Cosmetic Blemishes.

THE PACKSACK

OF GREGORY CLARK

Old Herbert Hoover's remark about democracy deserves the widest possible circulation. If the people are going to rule, he said, the people have got to think.

In the past, thinking has not had much to do with ruling. If it had, we would still be under the thumb of the Medes and Persians; or at least of the Roman Empire. But ruling the human race has been a slippery business ever since the beginning of time. A certain amount of thinking may have gone into shaping the clubs and battle axes by which tribal kings ruled their compatriots and neighboring tribes. Some of the finest thinkers of all time flourished in ancient Greece: but the end of Greece was the same as the end of the tribal rulers who swung axes.

And the end of Rome was the same as that of Greece, though nobody can deny a great deal of thought was expended on the Roman Empire, one after another, mighty rulers, mighty systems of rule, have come and gone. And the funny thing about it is, the people have always known it. They have died without thinking at all. They just acted, thoughtlessly.

We people have more people thinking in the world today than ever before. We have politicians, leaders, industrialists, financiers, labor leaders, teachers, philosophers—millions of them—thinking in the North Pole to the South, and from the East to the edge of China right around to the same edge again. But at the same time, we have more people in the world, than the ratio between those who don't think between those who can think and those who can't think, is probably about the same as it was in the time of King Nebuchadnezzar.

Ruling is a chore for those with the taste for it. The vast majority of mankind don't want to rule. They are content to be ruled. And when the rule becomes too bad, they just pick up on their hind legs; and down goes another McGinty who thought he was a king.

Asked to Cut Power Needs By Five Per Cent

Toronto, Nov. 29 — (CP) — Three Ontario municipalities Monday asked their citizens to cut power consumption by five per cent. In a fourth, the Northern Ontario town of Kirkland Lake, a 10-percent reduction was urged.

Brantford, Owen Sound and St. Thomas announced campaigns to reduce peak consumption immediately. Unless a considerable saving was effected, compulsory cuts were threatened.

Since the Kirkland Lake campaign began last week consumers exceeded their quota every day Harry Dunfield, local Hydro manager, said restrictions might have to be submitted.

E. M. Learn, regional manager of the Ontario Hydro Commission, said at St. Thomas that 15-minute cut-offs would be made unless the five-percent saving was made.

Lithographers Reject Bid to Insert Clauses

Toronto, Nov. 28 (CP) — A membership meeting of the Toronto Local of the Amalgamated Lithographers of America Monday night rejected an employer bid to insert two new clauses in a proposed contract.

The rejection meant the continuance of a dispute that has lasted 26 weeks and closed down the printing in several Toronto cities. Lithographers at London announced earlier that picketing of commercial plants in the dispute had been resumed.

Elmer W. Brown, Canadian Vice-President of the union, said the clauses would have jeopardized the security of union members. He said one demanded the right to refuse to keep employed or give preference to any worker after his return to work on Dec. 2. The other proposed for ending the strike.

Last week the strike seemed settled when some 850 workers here and hundreds of Ontario voted to accept an offer made by the Canadian Lithographers' Association, representing the employers in 26 plants.

The union at that time abandoned its demand for a reduction from 40 to 37½ hours in the 5½-day week and for a company-financed pension plan.

ease is helpful to hundreds for other who has been deprived of a higher education. On the other hand, I would say that what this author has done and what he is doing, establishes him as a valuable asset to the great machinery of higher education. Just think of the influence of all those books which he has presented from the fruits of his daily toil. Who can measure their value and inspiration to others?

I think I can rightfully term Joe Kotcka as a Book Evangelist, sending out his book missionaries in contact thousands of minds, stimulating each for greater knowledge of the fellowship of man and the world. This is what democracy has done for this individual and may his tribe increase!

The college publication, noting the number of books carrying the name of Joe Kotcka as the giver, referred to him as "typical of that intangible element called the Spirit of Notre Dame. No wonder its football team is so famous — so invincible! Size out ignorance and pre blot out war. More power to you, Joe, and God bless you!

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

BOOK EVANGELIST

My attention has been called to the hobby of a mill-worker in the Carnegie Illinois Irvin works, at Clairton, Pa. His name is Joe Kotcka. He had to quit school in his youth to help support his hard-working Slavish family, but he got to reading about Notre Dame University, its football team, and especially of its generosity in giving scholarships to boys from large families of foreign descent who, like himself, might never get a college education.

Joe thought that such a school should get wide encouragement, and he saw a chance for himself. Each week he saved a certain amount of money from his salary and bought books of current interest, read them and then sent them to the library of Notre Dame. He has, to date, sent 1,500 copies and is said to be the largest individual giver of books to that institution. And Joe has received no end of joy because of his thoughtfulness. These books first helped to educate himself.

CONSCIENCE CAUSES CONFLICT

Did you ever stop to think how miserable man is because of the very qualities that make him a man?

Take, for instance, the matter of conscience. Animals have no conscience. Their life is an instinctive response to their environment. The thing that distinguishes man from the lower creatures is that he can reflect on his experience and choose between good and bad. It is so much as that starts, he begins to have within him tremendous conflict.

There are some people much like animals in that they have very little conscience. They can indulge in every form of evil and never feel the least rebuke of conscience, unless they get caught. People who have an sensitive conscience sometimes wish that their consciences were not quite so sensitive. They would be much happier—or at least they think they would. But of course they wouldn't; for strange as it may seem, happiness is something that comes of perplexity, pain, frustration and conflict.

Let us not wish that we could be happier with a less sensitive conscience; that life is playing us a mean trick because we must endure so much inner conflict, especially conflict in matters of conscience. In that very conflict lies the possibility of treasured-est happiness and triumph.

All in Readiness For Bun Feed At Debating Club

As election time rolls around, thoughts turn to the Bun Feed at the Wharf. Street Debating Club. This event will be held on Wednesday night and at that time all the aldermen seeking re-election give an account of their stewardship and those seeking election for the first time are requested to state their platform. Most of the time is given to those seeking the Mayor's chair, after which the Board of Education candidates are heard. The Foster Ward bun feed is one of the highlights of the election campaign and if one is timid it is a trying experience because the ratepayers and voters of the ward are keen observers and want to know all the answers.

40th Anniversary

The Bun Feed has been an annual institution since the late Ben Sandford organized the club and on Wednesday night the Wharf Street Debating Club will be celebrating their 40th Anniversary. Many residents of the Ward have passed through the president's chair and this year the club is presided over by Jack Cornell with R. Dunlop as secretary treasurer. Not much is heard of this club during the summer months but daily the residents gather on the sunny side of the building and the main discussion is that of municipal government and what each member of the council is doing to provide better service for that particular area of the city.

The usual proper consists of luscious hot dogs prepared by boys of the club and the trimmings consist of pickles, cheese and soft drinks. As usual Eddie George will be chairman of the meeting.

Three Women Drawn Against Fast Train, Killed

Gary, Ind., Nov. 29—(AP)—Three women were killed Sunday when they were driven against the side of a fast passenger train as they were standing on a station platform. Two men were-butt.

Mrs. Julia Blubenstein, 42, of Detroit, died Monday morning of a skull fracture. Mrs. Rove Nagy 36, and Mrs. Stella Nagy, 38, both of Gary, died almost instantly.

Mrs. Nagy's husband, Joseph, 45, was taken to a hospital with back injuries and shock. Otto Hurley, 32, of Gary, suffered a mangled right hand.

The victims were waiting for another train. A fireman on a train standing nearby told police he tried to warn them they were standing too close to the track.

English Woman, Incurably Ill, Takes Plane Home

Montreal, Nov. 29 (CP)—Three children from Hamilton giggled and sang Sunday night when they boarded a Trans-Atlantic plane with their mother, bound for East Grinstead, Sussex, England.

They don't know that their 34-year-old mother—a cancer victim—is going to die after undergoing 13 unsuccessful operations. She came to Canada as a war bride in 1943.

Mrs. Jean Irving has only a few months to live—perhaps six, possibly a year. But she wanted to return home where her children, Jimmy, 6, Johnny, 4, and Jeannie 2, could be cared for by their grandparents. Her husband is a disabled war veteran.

"I only learned Thursday afternoon that I was going," she said in an interview, "and the last few days have been a whirl."

Lack of finances almost cancelled her hoped for journey. However, citizens of Hamilton and Toronto rallied to a public appeal for funds to pay their passage to England.

With a faint smile on her lips, Mrs. Irving said of her children:

"When their father left us at the station, I told them he was going back to our house in Hamilton to pack up their toys, then bring them over to England later."

Before boarding the plane, which was fitted with a special cot for Mrs. Irving, she took a long look behind and murmured:

"It's been a happy six years."

Long Beach, Calif., Nov. 29 — (AP) — Before a crowd of 18,000 the C-124 Globemaster II, a four-engined transport designed to carry a 50,000-pound payload, took to the air Sunday for the first time. It stayed aloft 53 minutes. The transport was built to carry 150 to 200 troops or 23 tons of land and mobile guns.

Bishop Would Sterilize Unfit, Make Birth Control National Policy, Prevent Overcrowding

Birmingham, England, Nov. 29 —(AP)—A Church of England Bishop urged Britain Monday to sterilize the unfit and make birth control a national policy.

Dr. E. W. Barnes, Bishop of Birmingham, said unless this is done Britain will become perilously overcrowded. He called the British Isles "the paupers of the English-speaking world."

The Bishop told the Birmingham Rotary Club the Labor government's welfare state has made the problem more pressing than ever.

"We must get rid of the slovenly, vicious, idle wasters of the community," Dr. Barnes said. "Unfortunately, the welfare state only likely to encourage their increase."

Dr. Barnes said the population of England and Wales alone has risen from about 4,000,000 in Elizabethan times to 11 times that today.

"We must limit immigration, whether from India, South Africa, the West Indies or Eastern Europe. We must educate our citizens to have smaller families, we must have medically controlled sterilization of the grosser forms of unfitness."

Dr. Barnes said many Britons are coming around to the view that there should be medically-controlled euthanasia—mercy death—for defective babies. He added:

"At least 90 per cent of feeble-mindedness is inherited. A time is quickly coming when sterilization of the unfit will have to be essential in our social organization. Such sterilization may well be in fact the complement of the welfare state. . ."

Middle of Vast Red Stony Desert Most Hush-Hush Spot in Australia

By BARBARA GROMLEY

Sydney, Australia, Nov. 29 — (AP)— The most hush-hush spot in Australia is in the middle of a big red stony desert.

The British Commonwealth's long range weapons establishment at Woomera, 250 miles northwest of Adelaide, is known generally as the "rocket range."

It's shrouded in secrecy. The Australian public knows they test rockets out there, but that is all.

Recently Australian newspaper men were taken on a tour, only the second since construction began three years. They talked with range scientists and engineers. They were not much wiser when they left.

One writer from the Melbourne Argus said that when he returned to Melbourne he was treated as the man from the rocket range, with as much awe as if he had been the man from the moon.

That's a good example of how Australians view this project.

Actually the range is still in its infancy. The present length has not been announced, but eventually it will stretch 1,300 miles across the desert centre of Australia to the northwest coast. From there it will be extended, if required, another 1,500 miles across the Indian Ocean towards Christmas Island.

Weapons now being tested are small. Biggest rocket the newspaper men saw was a three-inch one. The British army was using a similar type six years ago.

Range engineers say other test missiles have been fired but are still on the secret list."

The range is divided into two parts. One is the prohibited area at Woomera where workers, service personnel, and their families live. Outsiders are not allowed in and security measures are strict.

But most secluded is the actual place from where the rockets are fired. This is a few miles from Woomera. Only scientists and a few handpicked service personnel are allowed out there.

Most of the research and development of long-range missiles is being done in Britain. These are tested on the Woomera range.

The money was added to the school's prize fund.

RESIGNS POST

Peterborough, Nov. 29 (CP)—John Londerville, 35, a member of the Peterborough Collegiate staff since 1946, today resigned his post to accept an appointment to the teaching staff of the Hamilton Normal School. His duties will commence Jan. 1.

Mr. Londerville, a specialist in history, took part in the Eastern Ontario Drama Festival in Kingston early this year and was runner-up for the trophy given the best male actor.

Lay Plans to Use Almost Billion In Pact Defence

Paris, Nov. 29 — (AP) — The west's top military men today start work on plans to use nearly $1,000,000,000 provided by the United States for defence of the Atlantic Pact countries against any Russian aggression.

Chief of staff of Britain, the United States and France — the major signers of the North Atlantic Pact — will meet here for two days to draw a unified plan to defend Western Europe. Not until the integrated plan is finished can the U.S. supply the money and arms that Congress voted to help strengthen the 11 other countries that signed the treaty.

Thursday the defence ministers of the 12 countries meet with the three military chiefs.

The U. S. Chief of Staff, Gen. Omar Bradley, and Defence Secretary Louis Johnson, already have disposed of one burning politico-defence question —possible arming of Germany.

On his arrival here Bradley told reporters: "Our government does not think of rearming Germany at this time." He added, though, that the problem would come up again some day.

Earlier Sunday, in Frankfurt, Johnson said just as emphatically: "The United States has no intention of rearming Germany."

REDUCTION REQUESTED

Brantford, Nov. 29 (CP)—A five per cent reduction in the amount of hydro-electric power consumed in Brantford has been requested by the Ontario Hydro-electric Power Commission.

Reduced use of power here is expected to be only a short-term measure as H. E. P. C. officials have intimated that a considerable amount of power will become available about mid-December. Power users are being asked to voluntarily conserve to achieve the reduction and avoid any possible compulsory measures.

No Election In Marmora

Marmora—The electorate of Marmora Village will not be called upon to go to the polls this year to choose its reeve and councillors, three trustees and a Hydro Commissioner, since acclamation was accorded last year's representatives of these bodies as follows:

Reeve, V. M. Lynch; council, R. Wells, F. S. Johnston, J. R. Reynolds, A. Walker; public school trustees (2 years) D. F. Marett, W. D. Lavender, Wright; Hydro commissioner, F. R. Wells.

A former councillor, Percy Gray was the fifth nominee for councillor but withdrew to prevent an election.

Eight Candidates

Developments were different in Marmora and Lake Township nominations.

Reeve John A. Bell who has held the office for 13 years retired in favor of the other nominee for the reeveship Irwin McCoy. The reeve-elect has served as councillor for many years with an information of a few years, between his two periods of office. He has been active in the interests of agriculture and in other matters affecting the welfare of the Marmora district. Included in the offices he holds is that of vice president of Marmora district chamber of commerce, director of Marmora Agricultural Society, member of the newly formed Crow Valley Lakes Association and of Marmora's Recreation Centre Commission.

With ten others, he was nominated at Friday's afternoon meeting for councillor. Of those ten, eight have decided to run for seats on the council, namely Charles Kelly, George Davidson, and John Wilkes of the retiring council and new aspirants in the persons of George Fox, Everett Barrons, Ross Carman, Gordon Jones and Arthur Sheridan Ev. Harris Derry and Albert Leonard declined to qualify.

Polling will take place on Monday December 5 for the selection of the council, With Gordon Mofatt declining to stand. The three school area trustees to be given acclamation were Percy Carman, Raymond Bonter and Wilbert Jones.

WEDDINGS

ROTH—LEAKEY

Picton United Church was the scene of a lovely wedding at 2.30 on Saturday afternoon, when Sylvia Eugenie Leakey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Guernsey, Belleville Road, became the bride of Ranno Ernst Roth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernst Roth. The Rev. E. McCutcheon performed the ceremony before a background of yellow and white chrysanthemums, potted flowering plants, and ferns.

Mr. A. A. Benvie rendered the wedding music.

Given in marriage by Mr. Guernsey, the bride wore a gown of ivory Swiss brocaded taffeta featuring a long train, fitted bodice, long sleeves ending in lily points at the wrists, and flowing peplum. Her full-length veil of silk embroidered net, fell from a halo of mother of pearl orange blossoms. She carried a cascade bouquet of white bronze mums and white rosebuds.

Mrs. Adah McNaughton, Toronto, was matron of honor for her sister, and wore a gown of American Beauty rose crepe, styled on lines similar to that of the bride, with matching gloves in three-quarter length. She carried a Colonial bouquet of bronze mums, and wore a halo of white baby 'mums.

Miss Betty Cox, of Picton, was bridesmaid, gowned in moonglow blue brocaded satin, also made like that of the bride, with three-quarter length gloves in matching shade, with a halo of white baby 'mums, and carried a Colonial bouquet of yellow 'mums.

Mr. Sven Roth, brother of the bridegroom, was groomsman, and the ushers were Arnold MacNaughton, of Toronto, and Leslie Pickering, of Napanee.

The reception was held at the Hotel Globe. The dining room was tastefully decorated with pink and white streamers, white bells, and large vases of roses with pink and white chrysanthemums. The beautifully decorated three-tiered wedding cake held a loving cup filled with rosebuds.

The forty-five guests were received by the bride's mother, who wore a tailored suit of navy blue with matching accessories, and corsage of American Beauty roses. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who wore a cinnamon tailored suit, with dark brown accessories, and corsage of yellow roses.

For travelling through the United States to the Carolinas, the bride donned a wine-colored bengaline suit with matching accessories, and corsage of yellow roses. Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Roth will reside at Cressy

The bride's gift to her attendants were rhinestone earrings, the bridegroom's gift to his bride, was a set of travelling cases, and to his attendant and ushers, hand-tooled billfolds.

Out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Arnold MacNaughton, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Pickering, of Napanee; Mrs. Sylvia Lazier, of Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Schurman, of Willow Dale Farms, Oshawa, and Mr John MacNaughton, of Toronto.

The Rev. Frank Gilbert, of Foxboro, was the officiating clergyman.

The wedding music was rendered by Miss Eleanor Bush, of Rivey Valley.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a becoming frock of dusty pink sheer wool, with navy accessories, and corsage of white roses.

Sandor Displays Virtuoso Talents at Piano Recital

(By EUGENE LANG)

As in the case of all Community Concerts held in the last few years, the Collegiate Auditorium was practically filled with regular concert goers of this city and district who gathered there to hear the internationally renowned Hungarian pianist, Gyorgy Sandor in his first appearance in this city.

Gyorgy Sandor began his pianistic career at the age of eighteen, after studying composition and piano with two of Hungary's greatest living musicians, Zoltan Kodaly and Bela Bartok, respectively. After touring Europe for seven years he made his American debut in Carnegie Hall, New York, in February, 1939. Since then, he has toured the United States, Canada and South America extensively, performing not only in solo recitals, but with some of the great orchestras on this side of the Atlantic as well. In recent season alone, he appeared twelve times with leading orchestras, a definite tribute to his well deserved acclaim as one of the great virtuosi of the keyboard now living. His many recordings have also brought his name to the fore as a definitive interpreter of his immortal predecessor from his native land, Franz Liszt, recognized as the greatest pianist of all time.

Varied Program

Mr. Sandor chose a program, although diversified in content, was nevertheless one that appealed more to the scholar and musician than to the ordinary layman, as a number of the pieces played are not too familiar to concert-goer. Far from being unconventional, as some might expect, this was a decided reprise from the selections chosen by most pianists, as the works performed last evening were on the majority, not of the over-played and hackneyed type so often encountered in the concert hall today. The first group consisted of compositions of two of the masters of 18th century classic fame, J. S. Bach, and W. A. Mozart. Busoni's reverently styled arrangement of a Choral Prelude (in F Minor) by Bach was played in a stately and majestic manner, as is befitting this kind of extemporization that the Cantor of Leipzig was wont to elaborate on the simple chorales of his own creation. Following this, a Rondo in D Major (K. 385) by Mozart was immediately done with finesse coupled with clarity of detail throughout.

The second group consisted of a selection of five works for piano by Frederic Chopin, the first of the recital under way Mr. Sandor chose first the dramatic "Fantasie in F Minor, Op. 49," truly the largest canvas that the poetic Pole ever painted on the keyboard, and one that runs the gauntlet in emotional outpourings from its sombre opening through triumph and tranquility to its grandiose ending.

Mr. Sandor performed this monstrous number in a grand and glorious style, rendering Chopin at his best. Four other shorter pieces, the Waltz in C Sharp Minor Op. 69, No. 2 and three Etudes Op. 10, No. 12 in C Minor ("The Revolutionary"), Op. 25 No. 1 in A Flat Major ("The Aeolian Harp"), and Op. 10, No. 3 in F Major were all given brilliant yet understanding interpretations by Mr. Sandor, especially the first named Etude, a veritable cyclonic rush of notes for the left hand. The little Waltz preceding this was entrancingly given, being well known to all present, this being the first number of familiarity facilitated by Mr. Sandor.

Variations Extremely Difficult

Johannes Brahms was represented by first, the Rhapsody in G Minor, Op. 79, a dynamic opus full of Brahms' typical Teutonic nature, and secondly a selection of Variations on a Theme by Paganini. This latter named work is without doubt the "cn plus ultra" of Brahms' piano writings and is considered one of the most difficult and technically complex numbers ever written for the piano.

Only a pianist of prodigiously acquired technique would dare attempt this terrific back backing series of variations, and here Mr. Sandor gave forth with his finest in technical accomplishments combined with deeply sincere interpretative qualities.

This was definitely the high spot of the entire concert, being breath-taking in its magnitude. One might even say that the hand is quicker than the eye in this magician-like feat that was hypnotically watched by the hundreds of eyes of the onlookers.

Following intermission Mr. Sandor splendidly performed two of Franz Lizt's finest piano pieces, "Funerailles," another work of virtuoso proportions was marvelously manoeuvred in all its intricacies, this being followed by one of the delightful and meditative "Consolations," endearingly phrased.

Four modern composers were represented in the final group, each selection by each author given an individualistic yet brilliant reading by Mr. Sandor. Albeniz and DeFalla the Spaniards ("Navarra" and "Dance of Terror") were balanced by Bartok the Hungarian (Rondo) and Scriabin the Russian (Etude in D Sharp Minor) in this national set of four entirely different pieces.

Could Guess Names

Mr. Sandor played three encores. Here he deviated from accepted custom, and did not give the names of his proposed offerings, leaving the audience to guess for themselves, and no doubt some were clueless to at least two of the numbers performed. The encores consisted of two idyllic morceaus, the Albumblatt in A Minor ("Fuer Elise") of Beethoven and the "Berceuse" Op. 57 of Chopin, beautifully given.

The other one was the ever popular "Polonaise" Op. 53 of Chopin, and here Mr. Sandor let his listeners down, by racing through this work at breakneck speed, for what reason this critic cannot figure out. He swatted this piece so fiercely in parts that it is a wonder the piano did not swat back, figuratively speaking. However, he made the end without any mishaps, such as broken bones or sprained fingers, Outside of this rendition, the rest of the program was excellently done by a first rate pianist whom we hope to have back in Belleville again.

about Food ... What's Cooking?

By the author of "THE FACE IN THE ASPIC"

Hell and tomatoes have one thing in common: neither of them to this date has been frozen successfully.

Numerous efforts to quick freeze tomatoes, in the same manner that string beans or peas are processed, have all failed.

Recently, however, frozen tomato juice was successfully made at the Geneva, New York Experiment Station. Whether frozen tomato juice will become popular soon is debatable. Like other quick frozen foods it has a fresh flavor. People are so accustomed to the cooked taste of canned tomato juice, the experimenters believe, that it would take a major promotional campaign to persuade them to adopt the "frozen" juice.

Until 1923 tomato juice as a drink was unknown; today it's the major domo among table juices.

For cooking purposes tomato juice is excellent because you can usually count on the unchanging quality of well known brands. Canned tomatoes are dark-red, light red and sometimes white or green; they may be heavy or light, solid-packed or watery. Canned tomato juice, on the other hand, is as constant as sugar or baking powder. Use it to make a rich tomato creole soup. If you're entertaining, you can dress up the soup with a dab of whipped heavy cream, unsweetened.

Tomato Creole Soup

Melt 2 tablespoons fat, bacon preferred, in a soup pot. Add 1 clove of garlic minced, 1-2 cup chopped onion, 1-2 cup chopped green pepper, 1-2 cup chopped celery and 1-2 teaspoon chopped dry basil leaves. Place lid on pot and simmer until onions are soft but not brown.

Add 3 tablespoons flour, mixing well.

Add 2 cups tomato juice and 4 cups of chicken or beef stock or water flavored with 4 bouillon cubes. Bring to a boil. Reduce flame so that liquid simmers. Skim soup. Remove excess fat as it appears. Simmer until vegetables are tender.

In a separate saucepan boil 2 tablespoons of rice in a cup of water for 15-20 minutes or until tender. Drain, wash and add to soup.

Heat 1 cup of milk or light cream until bubbles appear around edges of pan. Remove soup from fire and add hot milk or cream. If soup is not served at once, keep warm in a double boiler. Don't boil soup after milk has been added or it will curdle.

Do you want a particular recipe or have you a cooking problem? Write Mario, care this paper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope for his reply.—Ed.

More Advertising of Canada in U.S. Will Do Much to Lure Tourists Across Line Dolan Tells Rotary Club

Better and more advertising of Canadian merchandise and products will result in more American tourists and subsequently dollars coming to Canada, Mr. Leo Dolan, director of Travel and Publicity for the Dominion Government, said in an address here on Monday.

Speaking to the Rotary Club and a large number of guests, Mr. Dolan was of the opinion that Canadians generally did not bring certain lines of national production sufficiently to the notice of the tourist visiting from across the line. "We in Canada, are prone to forget that these Americans come here to see and get something different."

"We have things here that are not sold with the same insistence and persistence as are the things of other lands," he said.

Urging that this be done, he pointed out that the United States Congress bill that will permits tourists to take back goods to the value of $200 instead of $100 will see a big increase in tourist revenue here next year.

Great 'Export Industry'

He defined the tourist business as a "great export" industry because Canada imports nationals of other countries who consume and take back huge quantities of Canadian production.

"The current year will see 300 millions of American dollars left in Canada. This is not as large an amount per capita as last year but the 10 per cent increase in people coming here more than took up the slack."

He predicted that tourist development next year will result in a substantial increase in American dollars in Canada. The big bread bulk of American spenders, he said, are those who stay for 48 hours or less. The increase of spending money in Canada from $100 to $200 should result in a substantial financial contribution to the country from which wholesalers as well as retailers and others will benefit.

Travel Stimulates Trade

Stimulation of travel, the speaker said, meant more for Canadian unity in a concrete manner. More travel makes for a better conception for Canadians of the things God gave this country in abundance.

"Thirteen million people," he went on, "live on the finest piece of real estate in the world. But while we are blessed with more better things of life and less bad things of government than any other nation, we still should know each other better. And the one thing to stimulate this is travel."

People do not read about places and things while on vacation, Mr. Dolan said. "They experience them and these experiences are kept and cherished."

Travel, he went on, is a lesson in geography, weather conditions and of fellow man generally. Canada, a country steeped in tradition and historical lore is taken by most Canadians as a God-given right.

Advertise Historical Features

He urged communities to advertise historical backgrounds. Nova Scotia, British Columbia are doing this while in Virginia they are selling history in a manner that should make Canadians ashamed.

Travel, Mr. Dolan said, pays off in new friendships, broader vision and a better idea of the country's needs and problems.

The tourist industry in Canada has made remarkable strides during the past 15 years. During that period of time there has been a remarkable example of co-operation between communities, provinces and the government at Ottawa, which has brought about better transportation and other phases necessary to the tourist industry.

Next year, the speaker predicted, will see the greatest competitive action in travel ever experienced on the North American continent. It is Holy Year in Europe and airlines and steamship companies are even now readying accommodation expansion for the expected exodus overseas.

More Come by Car

The United States will maintain its own traffic lines within the union. On the other side of the picture Canadians will welcome the people who travel on rubber wheels. Last year there were more American cars in Canada than ever before. Eighty-five per cent of Americans who came to Canada travelled by car. It is obvious then, Mr. Dolan said, that if Canada is to be a potential market for American dollars it is important that her provincial and federal highways are in good shape. No one wants to see country through a cloud of dust.

During the last five years the Department of Highways deserved the highest praise for its new road construction developments. In a country like Canada the tourist industry cannot be prosperous unless there is a continued investment in the development of highways from one end of the country to the other.

Ontario's success with its tourist industry is largely due to its fine network of highways, Mr. Dolan said. He added that the good news regarding the start of a Trans-Canada highway will be issued shortly.

Americans Not to Blame

Speaking of the tourist industry and its association with fish and game conservation, Mr. Dolan said that all tourist organizations are deeply concerned over the fish and game resources of the country.

"It has been said," he added, "that we are selling our game and fish too cheap; that Americans are killing these resources off wilfully-nilly. While I think some Americans are over-zealous and use bad judgment at times, they are not spoiling the fish and game resources of Canada."

"The indictment for illegal hunting and fishing in Canada rest squarely on the shoulders of the Canadian people. Americans are breaking hunting and fishing laws in small minority."

"The same thing can be said about the forests of Canada, once the green forests disappear it sounds the deathknell of a tourist industry in any part of the world."

Need U.S. Friendship

The Canadian Prime Minister has said that travel and the tourist industry, if properly developed, will go a long way toward the peace of the world. The Canadian people need the good will, amity and fellowship of the United States. The finest thing the tourist industry here can do is to maintain the great respect and in some cases awe, Americans hold for Canada and her achievements. "By bringing in American tourists, Canada can continue to build that concord, amity and good neighborliness that may be object lessons to those living in countries less fortunate than ours."

Three Convicted On Arson Charges

Nelson, B.C., Nov. 29 — (CP) — Three Doukhobors, members of the Radical Sons of Freedom Wing, Monday were convicted of arson in the 1943 burning of a jam factory.

The jury deliberated four minutes before convicting Pete Sverlishkoff, William G. Konkin and Anton Kolesnikoff. They will be sentenced later in the assizes.

The men said they burned the $300,000 factory at Brilliant, B.C., in the belief they were following the wish of their leader, Michael (The Archangel) Verigin. They said they were told by Verigin that he would not come to them until there is "a fire pole from earth to heaven."

That called for burning the factory, owned by the Land Settlement Board of British Columbia, the trio said.

Airplane Will Join Search For Two Fishing Tugs

Owen Sound, Nov. 29 (CP)— An airplane took off early today to scour the Georgian Bay district as the search for two fishing tugs, still unreported, continues. Seven men are reported aboard the boats, missing since Sunday morning.

The vessels, the Garry M and the Shepherd, left Thornbury, 20 miles west of here, on a 70-mile trip to Pointe Au Baril. The trip normally should have taken about seven hours.

A search by water was halted because the ice was too thin to travel on but too thick for most vessels to break through.

Freeman Oldfield, son of W. H. Oldfield, skipper of the Garry M, said Monday night he is not greatly worried about the tugs, which may be lying in shelter beside Double Island, near Point Au Baril. Double Island is 40 miles north of Parry Sound.

He said these men were aboard the vessels: On the Garry M — W. H. Oldfield, Franklin Oldfield, 46, the skipper's son, Freemand Oldfield, 20 and William Oldfield, 22, nephews of the skipper, and a 20-year-old youth named Blatch. All live in Thornbury.

On the Shepherd: Ivan Wheatley, skipper and Ivan Harmer.

PARTRIDGE THREATENED

Toronto — (CP) — The stock of Hungarian partridges in Ontario is threatened with a setback unless there is control over release of imported birds, said Lands and Forests Minister Scott. Present Hungarian partridges have become acclimatized during the last 18 years and imported birds would upset this balance.

I.O.O.F. Lodges Urged to Greater Work in Their Own Districts

Tweed.—(Special.)—The official visit of Reg. Thrush, of Chapleau, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, of Ontario, and banquet were held last Thursday in C. E. Way's new garage on Front Street.

There were 250 officers and members from the six different lodges of Madoc district No. 45 present. The brothers met in the lodge hall where they were addressed by the Grand Master for a few minutes, then they marched to the banquet hall, where the sisters of Tweed Rebekah Lodge had prepared a turkey dinner.

The hall was nicely decorated with flags and bunting. A large streamer across the front of the hall with the words "Tweed Welcomes You" on it. Seated at the head table with the Grand Master was Wm. J. Woods, District Deputy Grand Master, who also acted as "Master of Ceremonies"; S. A. McCarey, reeve of the village, and warden of the County of Hastings, Rev. A. L. Sisco, Rev. P. F. Downing, Brother Brown of Desoronto, D.D.G.M. of District 46, and the Noble Grands of each lodge in the district.

A minute's silence was observed for the deceased brothers, who had died during the year, and especially for Bro. John Smith, recording secretary of Thomasburg Lodge, who died suddenly on Monday morning.

Extends Welcome

Reeve S. A. McCarey extended a hearty welcome and said it afforded him a great deal of pleasure to extend to the Grand Master and Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, "greetings" from the village council and the people of Tweed, to carry back home with him.

D.D.G.M. Brown of District 46 said, it was his fourth visit with the Grand Master and said he found a fine bunch of young members in Tweed Lodge.

C. E. Way, Tweed, proposed a toast to Grand Lodge, and said that the Grand Lodge always picked good men for their Grand Masters. He also said that the older members of the Order should encourage their sons to join the Lodge.

The Grand Master in replying to the toast said that, the motto that he had chosen for the term was:

"Fear not to touch the best
The truth shall be thy warrant".

He said that he always tried to have something new for the different places he visited and never told anything but the truth. He spoke of his profound love and affection for Oddfellowship, for 36 years that he has been a member of the Order. He said that he hadn't a speech prepared but had arranged a 22-point program for the year and copies of this have been sent to every lodge and that he would check on a few of them.

We command you to "visit the sick". We command you to "relieve the distressed". We command you to "bury the dead". We command you to "educate the orphan" and we aim to improve and elevate the character of man.

Visiting Committee

He urged the Noble Grand of the Lodge to select worthy and sympathetic brothers to act on the visiting committee "and go oft to the house of a friend, lest weeds grow up and choke the path".

Make the annual "Decoration Day" an outstanding event, honor the memory of the dead after they are gone, invite every clergyman in town to take part in this service. Lodges are urged to concentrate on work among the young people. In these days of alarming juvenile delinquency, the I.O.O.F. must not fail. Lodges can sponsor juvenile sports, summer camps, orchestras, bands and many other educational objects. Carry the principles of Oddfellowship into daily community life. They will help in the struggles incident to human life.

Worthy Causes

The speaker said, "anything a service club can do, we can do, so let us put into effect everything we can do, and let us help the clergy to do whatever they ask us to do.

"Let worthy citizens know about our order and invite them to join, so that they may come in and share with us the privileges of our Lodge."

He urged the brothers to sponsor the C. P. and T. Fund, for the care, prevention and treatment of the victims of those three dread enemies of mankind, cancer, polio and tuberculosis and the relief of distress wherever found. Support the hospital bed program, either direct or through the local C. P. and T. committee.

Publish the good work that the Lodge is doing, and if the Lodges are doing something worthwhile the newspapers will give a good write up.

Bro. Thrush in his closing remarks, said be honest, tell nothing but the truth. Open Lodge on time, Be decorous, be progressive.

Bro. Woods thanked the Grand Master and said it was the best address he had ever heard. He then called on Bro. Earl Fox of Stirling Lodge to extend greetings from all the Lodges in the district. He addressed the Grand Master and told him how much he had enjoyed his address and extended to him the greetings from every brother in the district. Bro. J. Baker of Springbrook Lodge, delighted his listeners with a solo "That Old Irish Mother of Mine".

Bro. Norman Thompson, Tweed, rendered a female impersonation solo which was well received.

Dr. Beatty's shield was presented to Madoc Lodge for initiating the most members into their Lodge during the year.

Bro. John Bristol of Madoc Lodge proposed a toast to the ladies of Tweed Rebekah Lodge and said that "we owed them a great debt of gratitude for the wonderful banquet which they had prepared."

Sister Dorothy Fisher, Noble Grand of the Rebekah Lodge, replied to the toast saying she and all the officers and members were very proud and happy to have served at this banquet.

Mackenzie Column:

U.S. Reiterates Policy Against Germany

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

Millions of Europeans undoubtedly are breathing easier because of the unqualified reiteration of United States policy against any rearming of Germany.

Both Defence Secretary Louis Johnson and Gen. Omar Bradley, who are overseas conferring with Western Europe's top military men, have declared emphatically that the United States government has no intention of rearming the Reich.

Europe's fear and hatred of German militarism has become deep-seated as the result of the two catastrophic world wars. She thought she had ham-strung this Teutonic spirit of conquest with the Treaty of Versailles at the end of the first conflict which the Kaiser almost won. But in 1935 Dictator Hitler started to tear up the pact by brazenly inaugurating an unlimited armament program and compulsory military service.

No Third War

Western Europe is determined not to be caught in a third world war precipitated by the Reich or anybody else. France in particular is adamant in demanding that Germany be rendered harmless.

The justice of this Allied position has been recognized tacitly by the new German Republic at Bonn. The government has agreed to the Allied demilitarization demands. Moreover it has promised to do all in its power to prevent the creation of new German military strength.

This means, of course, that Germany must remain impotent militarily for perhaps a long period — how long is one of the imponderables. In any event, the chiefs of state of Britain, the United States and France, meeting in Paris to lay plans for the defence of Western Europe, must figure on Germany as a military non-entity for the present.

Front-line Defence

This creates a strange situation, for while Germany theoretically wouldn't be able to assist the democracies in event of war, yet she must be protected, since she is being made an important part of Western Europe's economic setup. In how such a situation would t out in the long run is problical.

Should another war develop between west and east Europe Western Germany presumably would be in the front-line defences of the west. What happens then to the maintenance of German military impotency? It seems a fair guess that the Reich would become not only a vital base for operations of the western Allies, but migh: be invited to call German manpower to the colors for defence.

However, that's crossing several bridges before we come to them. The great hope is we never shall come to them.

AIRLINER CRASHES

Bogota, Colombia, Nov. 29 — (CP) — A Colombian Airlines plane carrying 12 persons and a much-overdue cargo plane was reported to have crashed Sunday night at Arboleda, 60 miles from Cucuta in North-Central Colombia. All aboard the plane were Colombians. The nine passengers and crew of three all were believed to have been killed in the crash of the DC-3. Aboard the plane was a statue of the Virgin of Fatima, sent by the Portuguese government on an air tour of South America.

Flying Dutchmen In Second Place Of Senior Race

(By The Canadian Press)

Kitchener - Waterloo Flying Dutchmen, the new senior league team in the senior 'A' series of the Ontario Hockey Association, gave notice last night they are to be heard from before the season ends.

After displacing Owen Sound Mercurys from the runner-up spot during the weekend, the Dutchmen added insult to injury by thumping them last night 6-3 to increase their lead to three points.

In the only other game, the top rung Toronto senior Marlboros had to fight to the last bell before downing a scrappy band of Hamilton Tigers 5-3.

At Waterloo, the Dutchmen completely dominated play in the opening stanza, rapping in four counters while holding Mercurys scoreless. Norm Fraser clicked twice and Art Hurst and Bobby Bauer counted singles. The Mercurys outscored Kitchener-Waterloo 3-3 in the middle frame. Pat Mcreavy, Mike Bucheski and Harry Kazazian turned the trick in the Mercury cause. Mike Dmitra and Harvey Jacklin did the honors for the Dutchmen.

The teams played through a scoreless third period as both seemed to run out of steam. Sixteen penalties were handed out in the hard-hitting contest.

Had to Pull Stops

Marlboros had to pull all their tricks out of the bag before defeating Hamilton 5-3. The Tigers led the coach twice before Toronto could salt away the win. When the game ended, it was Marlboros' 13th decision in 17 starts.

Only one marker was recorded in the opening session, that coming off the stick of Don Rope on Marlboros. Murray Comfort got that one back for Tigers in the middle period. Marlboros put on the pressure and finally the old guy — Flash Hollett — came through with a marker to put Toronto back in front 2-1. Johnny Conick, another veteran performer, knotted it again early in the third frame. He combined with linemate Clare Shillington to pull off the picture play of the night. Lee shoved Toronto out in front again and Johnny McCormack added an insurance marker to sink the Hamilton ship.

Three junior games are scheduled for tonight. Marlboros tackle St. Michael's, Windsor travel to Galt and St. Catharines play host to Guelph. One game is on tap in the senior group. Kitchener play Owen Sound in the second game of a home-and-home series.

Notre Dame Unbeaten Over 37-Game Stretch

New York, Nov. 29. (AP) — Notre Dame's power-packed gridders reign today as the champions of 1949 in United States college football, according to votes cast in the Associated Press' coast-to-coast poll.

Frank Leahy's boys drew 172 to 248 first place votes and a bulging total of 2,402 points in the year's final AP poll of American sports writers. Notre Dame has been unbeaten over a 37-game stretch.

Oklahoma recaptured second-place from California with a point edge of 2,018 to 1,900. Points are figured on the basis of 10 for first, nine for second and so on down to one for 10th.

Army's flashy 38-0 rout of Navy failed to boost the Cadets' fourth-place standing. They polled 1,838 points.

U.S. Betting Down 10.44 P.C. From Last Year

New York, Nov. 29—(AP)—Betting at the horse tracks in the United States this year fell off 10.44 per cent as compared with 1948, but the owners of the racing plants generally are pretty well satisfied.

Many tracks, as in New York, had expected a drop of about 15 per cent in the amount of money shoved through the pari-mutuel machines.

A survey of thoroughbred racing by the Associated Press in 20 stages — not including harness tracks—disclosed that attendance was down 5.29 per cent from last year. This also was generally less than expected.

However, for the sixth season in a row, betting topped the billion-dollar mark, as 22,591,421 persons wagered $1,393,731,772 on the ponies in 1949. A year ago, 23,853,807 circulated $1,558,491,330.

The racing people also point out that there were 290 less racing days this year, in 1948 there were 2,457 racing days, compared with 2,167 this season.

As usual, New York topped all states in the amount bet with $303,032,958. This was nine per cent below last year, but track officials had expected the shrinkage to total about 15 per cent. California, leader in attendance for several years, remained in front again with 4,236,124, compared with 4,151,504 New York customers.

Biggest Betting Year in Canada In Past 27 Years

Ottawa, Nov. 29 — (CP) — The rustle of greenbacks and jingle of coins pouring through parimutuel windows this year created the biggest din on Canadian race tracks heard in 27 years.

Bettors sent $99,550,478 clanking through the wickets in 1949, the Department of Agriculture reported today. It represented an increase of $3,371,987 over the $96,178,491 wagered in 1948.

The pari-mutuel take was the highest in Canada since the $99,665,623 wagered in 1923 and considerably below the all-time high of $75,110,551 that changed hands in 1921.

The increase this year over 1948 figures was partly due to the greater number of days set aside for bettors to throng to tracks from Montreal to Vancouver. There were 3,750 races run on a total of 335 days in 1949 compared with 2,853 races over 349 days the previous year.

Purse money for the owners of winning horses rose to $3,357,210, an increase of $171,610 over the $3,185,700 paid in 1948.

Some punters who rarely picked a winner may find it difficult to believe, but $46,546,884.64 fell back into the pockets of bettors. Half in Ontario

Followers of the goo-goes in Ontario shelled out more than half the money that went into the machines. In 146 racing days they shoved $56,576,674 across the line. $1,210,299 more than the $37,366,- 215 spent in that province last year.

All six reporting provinces showed an increase pari-mutuel take over last year. British Columbia showed the largest increase $9,632,230 against $7,213,990.

The largest amount wagered at any one meet was $3,629,382 laid down at the spring meeting of the Woodbine Jockey Club at Woodbine Park, Toronto. The smallest was $606 during a two-day meet at Red Deer, Alta.

Racing statistics for Ontario with last year's figures in brackets:

Days 146 (144), amount wagered $38,578,314 ($37,368,215), prize money $1,940,550 ($1,574,600).

The Canadian Family owes much to... France

CANADA, land of opportunity, owes much of its strength and vitality, and the rich quality of its democracy, to the blending of racial and cultural heritages from many lands.

It is a matter of pride to all Canadians that so many races, without sacrificing their national characteristics, have united themselves into one great citizenship — the Canadian Family.

Ever since the days of Jacques Cartier, famous French explorer of the 16th Century, Canadians of French descent have played a leading role in moulding Canada's destiny. Today, French Canadians are our largest racial group representing almost one third of Canada's population.

Distinguished in the arts and sciences and outstanding in their chosen professions, they have made a major contribution to Canada's progress while their thrift and devotion have earned for "les Canadiens" the wholesome respect of their fellow citizens.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Good bridge is where bids by each partner show only the amount of tricks in that hand. Not by how many bids he makes. By the number of raises in his bids.

An opener of one shows five tricks. Thereafter, each raise by him consumes another trick. Before replying, responder is assumed to have two tricks. Each raise by him consumes another.

Each new bid is not necessarily a raise. It may only show change of denomination or a suit that can be bid again. When not a raise it does not promise another trick. See it work in this problem.

SOUTH
♠ A K 10 9 5
♦ K Q J 5
♣ A J 3

♥ A Q J 10 4 3
♦ 9 6 2

South opens with one spade; five tricks. North, responds with two hearts, a raise that consumes a third trick. Second bid by south is three diamonds, a raise that shows a sixth trick.

Second bid by north is three hearts. It is a raise in number over three diamonds and does not promise more than the admitted three. The bid by south is three no-trump, Not a raise; no more tricks.

North, then bids four hearts to show the suit is re-rebiddable. Being a raise over three no-trump it shows a fourth trick in north.

What would north do if he did not have four tricks; only three? Then he could not have a suit of six cards. One of his hearts would be a spade or club. He could make only the first two bids; one of which was not a raise in number. Over the three no-trump bid by south, north would have to pass. He would not have a fourth trick for another raise. Nor would he have a re-rebiddable heart suit. So, it must not be three tiers.

Keep on your side or your side will be on its backside.

Hollywood, Nov. 29 — (AP) — Cesar Romero and 20th-Fox have come to a friendly parting after 13 years of association.

"Actually it has been 15 years," the actor recalls, "because I was under contract to 20th Century for two years before it merged with Fox."

"There was no trouble between the studio and me," he said. "I just wanted to get out of the rut. I had been doing some pretty bad pictures.

Romero is now playing a meanie in his first outside film, "The Iron Cage." He next plans a color musical which will be filmed in England and Scotland next year.

Cuff Notes

Betsy Drake is the happiest girl in town, now that Cary Grant is back. "I've been homesick for him only is it 'shmaltz?' " she remarked on the Cary Grant Lies Love set.

Talk of the town is the poor bio done by Shirley Temple's two new pictures. Belief is that her divorce is hurting her box-office.

Mickey Rooney and Lew Ayres may have left the studio, but they're still working for M.G.M. on radio transcriptions.

Strange- how few academy-worthy female performances this year and how many male ones. Last year was the reverse.

Capsule Review

"The Hasty Heart" (W.B.) is a simple and touching story of the backwash of war. It's a tale of a dour Scotsman soon to die in a Burma hospital. Fortunately, it's done with good sense and sentiment. Richard Todd, who is handsome and convincing as the Scot.

Bookmakers' War In Making Over Player Award

New York Nov. 29 (AP)— A bookmakers' war appears in the making following the disclosure of a big betting coup engineered by New Jersey operators at the expense of their gambling brethern in New York.

Some New York bookies, among those who lost bets estimated at half a million dollars in the record most-valuable-player polls in baseball, are crying "double cross" and refusing to pay off.

They claim that advance notice of the All American League's choice of Ted Williams had leaked out and the betting boys from across the river pulled a switch on them. On the other hand, the Jersey odds-jugglers insist they are entitled to the money they claim rightfully belongs to them.

That there was considerable money being wagered on the outcome of the annual baseball player competition came to light Nov. 17 shortly before sports dispatches announced as National League winner. The National League choice was made public Nov. 18 and the American League winner exactly a week later.

Some persons knew that Williams had won in the American League at least 10 days before the official announcement. The Associated Press sports department was besieged by phone-callers wanting verification of the Boston slugger's victory.

One Manhattan bookie is said to have bets that could cost him $40,000. It is reported another is down $20,000. A small Brooklyn bookie stands to drop $4,000. No Deny Bets

Ken Smith, secretary of the Baseball Writers Association of America who conducted the poll, said the votes were tabulated Nov. 11 and the results were handed to the printer the same day. The actual voting takes place before the end of the season.

"A lot of people knew about it," Smith said. "I made no secret of it. I told any newspaper men who asked me, confidentially. I had no idea that people were silly enough to bet on such a thing."

Ford Frick, National League president, shocked at the news, proposed two changes in the method of conducting the polls.

"The betting stuff is highly dangerous," he said, "and we must kill it off at once. I propose that the polls be held after the close of the season. Then no advance conclusions considerably in advance of the personnel of voting, and the system has not worked out.

"I also suggest that the names of the two winners be made public the moment counting of the votes has been completed. It's been customary to delay the announcement for weeks. That must be stopped also, and it is in violation to betting."

Each league's most valuable player is determined in a poll of 24 members of the Baseball Writers Association of the league's league city. That system has been in effect since 1931.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.

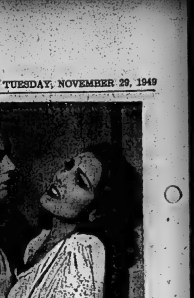
New York, Nov. 29, (AP) — There seems to be no doubt that Louisianna State is the "upset" champ of the United States College football season . . . besides knocking off Rice, North Carolina and Georgia Tech, Tigers upset the Southeastern Conference rule limiting bowl participation to schools that have won it, as soon it was in effect.

Slamming Sammy Sneed, who gets 14 bucks an hour for golf lessons, thought he had something wrong with his back a short time after he resumed teaching at White Sulphur this fall. Then he realized the ache came from bending over 700 to 1,000 times a morning to tee up the ball for his pupils . . .

Ford Frick, National League president, won't attend the convention of the National Association of professional baseball leagues at Baltimore next week . . . that should silence those American-Leaguers who contend the National is just a minor league. One-Minute Sports Prize

First sign of winter (if you don't look for the barometer): is the notice that entry blanks are out for the 43rd Millrose track meet Jan. 28 . . . Nearly 300,000 sandlot baseball players will sign contracts to play with specific teams in 1950, according to the National Baseball Civic Congress . . . Ellsworth Vines and some other golf pros are using the kind of camera that developed the own pictures to show pupils their mistakes. With some guys it would take a movie camera.

AT THE BELLE — Jack Haley and Joan Davis, in the foreground, vocalize the novelty song, "Who Killed Vaudeville," and Bobby Clark and Antonio perform their sensational dance number, among the many outstanding acts presented in Wake Mine Laughs," the unusual vaudeville-on-film feature which starts today at the Belle Theatre. On the same program you will see Shirley Temple and Robert Young in a delightful comedy "Fit for Tat."



AT THE CAPITOL — Linda Darnell spurns Richard Widmark's advances in this scene from "Slattery's Hurricane," 20th. Century Fox's new adventure-romance, coming Wednesday for its first Belleville showing, to the Capitol Theatre. Veronica Lake also stars in this William Perlberg production directed by Andre de Toth. On the same program Laurel and Hardy in a two-reel comedy "Fit for Tat."

Halifax, Nov. 29 — (CP) — Dave (Sweeney) Schriner is impressed with how they run hockey up in Cape Breton. The Calgarian who used to operate in quite decent fashion for Toronto Maple Leafs and New York Americans in the National Hockey League is coaching North Sydney Victories of the Cape Breton Senior Hockey League this season.

Last week he stopped long enough to tell Alex (Halifax Chronicle - Herald) Nickerson:

"Where in the world, other than in Cape Breton, could you see senior hockey six nights a week?

"We're playing a 76-game schedule in this league and tonight at Glace Bay it will be our third game in as many days. That is a lot of hockey. And yet the fans in this part of the country love it.

"Hockey has been my life. I've seen it from every angle. But I never cease to marvel at the interest and the sportsmanship in Cape Breton. I'm a westerner. (At this point Schriner tipped up the rim of his wide-brimmed hat.) We pride ourselves on our hospitality and our keenness for sports in that part of the country. But nowhere, I'm convinced, is there such a set-up as you have here."

Nick asked Schriner about a rumor that he intended to play. "Oh, no," he said. "I've had my day. Some of the fans may remember Sweeney Schriner as a hockey player. That's the way it should be. It wouldn't be fair to the customers if I attempted to get out there and play again.

"I was all right early in the schedule last year (he was with Regina). After that I used to stagger on the ice with my legs taped from ankle to knee. And some youngster would belt me around and I could do was take it and wish that I were 20 years younger."

Schriner also had a good word for his old boss, Conny Smythe. "For my money, Smythe is the best man in hockey. He stands behind his players all the way . . . I think the reason so many coaches dislike Smythe is because he's always right."

Montreal, Nov. 28 — (CP) — To have or not to have in Canadian football the platoon system which is so much in vogue in the United States is a question which finds Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson on the negative side.

Fergie figures it is a system not calculated to develop good football players. Further, it slows up the game.

Bolstering Fergie's anti-platoon-system feeling is word from T. R. Fred Porter, wartime president of the Big Four now living in Monterey, Calif., who advised: "Never give up the single point or 12 men." The Canadian game is faster, more open and better to watch."

Porter wrote this after viewing a California - Stanford game in which he saw Bobby Grayson a specialist used for everything in the game. I counted changes in the third period. California and Stanford changed almost complete teams 12 times each before I lost track. Also there were many subs coming in on every second or third play.

"You can see by this that each team paraded 11 men on, and another 11 off, in the third period at last 12 times. Multiply that by it means 11 times 12 times, or a total of 242 subs in one period plus an assortment of kickers, ends, passers, blockers, etc.

"Now if there are 350 player changes in one quarter, there are around 1,000 changes per game. Let those who like it keep the platoon system." Keep the Canadian game the way it is."

Bosses Inherit Pair of Headaches From Bill Veeck

Cleveland, Nov. 29 (AP)—The new bosses of the Cleveland Indians Baseball Club discovered today that they had inherited a pair of headaches from the Bill Veeck regime.

No. 1: Smooth-fielding second-baseman Joe Gordon has informed them he wants to quit and play in the Pacific Coast League, Gordon, who is 34, slumped last season but still socked 20 homers and batted .268.

No. 2: Satchel Paige, one of baseball's all-time top crowd attractions, is on the doubtful list. Manager-shortstop Lou Boudreau says the elderly Negro pitcher's bad stomach might make him a bad risk on the 1950 roster.

But considering the team in general, Boudreau talked optimistically after his first meeting with President Ellis W. Ryan and General Manager Hank Greenberg. He scheduled another huddle with them today.

"I definitely intend to play short next season," said Boudreau.

Lou shifted to Gordon:

"Joe's not washed up... I don't know what he has in mind, but I certainly hope he decides to come back."

However, Gordon insisted at his home in Eugene, Oregon, he wanted to pull out of the Tribe's line-up. It's not a matter of ill will with the Cleveland management either, said Gordon.

Somebody asked Boudreau to explain Paige's position, and he replied:

Satch is a real problem. He'd be no good as a starter because he can only pitch three or four innings. I think he could help us in relief, but will he be physically able?

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

Little Benny's Note Book

Today in school Miss Kitty told us to get out our readers for reading al ud, and she started to tell us how important it is to know how to read, saying, Away back in olden days people were mote ignorant than the people of today, and yet they were just as silligent. Men of genius in those times had just as many grate ideas and noble thawts, but thoes ideas and thawts were never handed down from gen-eration to generation, and so they were lost to the rest of us forever, and who can tell us why? she said.

Which Sid Stunt waved and said, Because they didn't teetch their kids to reed.

That is very true, but who knows, why they didn't teetch them? Miss Kitty said. Well, Robbit! she said.

Meaning Sticky Puggly waving and Sticky said, Because they couldn't reed themselves, and they thawt what was good enough for them not to know was good enough for their children to do without.

Oh dear, the art of printing had not yet been invented, and therefore there wasn't anything to reed, not a single book, Miss Kitty said. We all know that reading gives people many advantages. I will call on Benny Potts to name one of those advantages, she said.

Which I did, saying, It keeps them from being lonesome when they're in a buss or a trolley car or waiting in line some place.

Who can think of a better advantage! Miss Kitty said.

Which Shorty Judge waved, saying, If you're reading a book it gives you a good excuse to say you're busy if it's necessery.

Oh dear, reading improves our minds, and I wish I could prove it by the example of this class, Miss Kitty said.

Being foureasie.

THIRTY OR MORE

As dawn broke, the big stack of blackened, wet wreckage was bright from portable floodlights. Firemen in their black coats were climbing all over the wreckage.

Hundreds of people got into the area in spite of a police blockade. The screaming ambulances and fire trucks added to the pandemonium.

Regular traffic seemed to be continuing in the field, however. Col. Harold Byrd, chief of the Texas Civil Air Patrol right at the scene, said: "This is terrible. Just terrible. There is no other word."

Hit Factory

The plane first hit the Magnaflux plant, a plant which inspects aircraft engines by chemical process.

A series of small explosions sounded and many-colored flames indicated chemicals were burning.

The Dallas Aviation School, a hangar and combined office buildings and classrooms also caught fire and its walls collapsed half an hour later.

Smoke still was rising with an acrid odor an hour after the crash.

Firemen were pulling bodies from the wreckage.

As one body was freed, another fireman would shout "here!" A second body — charred and rigid — would be pulled out.

Blast Shook Bed

Fred L. Shrat, 28, who lives in a barracks 400 feet from the scene, told this story:

"The first explosion shook my bed. I ran out of the door thinking that one of the gasoline storage tanks across the street from the barracks had exploded. It was a rumbling, jarring explosion.

"When I got to the door, heard someone holler 'a plane has crashed.' I put on my pants and a shirt and dashed down the street. I got to the scene three minutes after the explosion.

"The wreckage was strewn everywhere and the flames were high and billowing. They were blue and white flames.

"The plane had crashed into the magnaflux plant.

"There were a series of small explosions just after I arrived.

"The Dallas Aviation School, the hangar and combined office building and classrooms, was also starting to burn.

Wires Broke Overhead

"Wires were breaking overhead, and when the first people to arrive saw them, they scurried to get out of the way.

"I should say four minutes after the explosion a man walked right out of the wreckage. He was white as a sheet and though he walked right out of the fire, he didn't appear to be burned.

"I have tried to figure out where he came from and the only explanation I can think of is that he was thrown out of the plane itself when the crash occurred, was knocked unconscious and came to when the heat hit him.

"His arm was bent and surely broke. He screamed — 'Don't touch my arm.' Then he said, — 'Where is there a doctor?'

" 'I was in the crash,' he said, 'where is there a doctor?'

"He was obviously in a state of high shock. Someone led him across the street into the Airways Cafe. And that is the last I saw of him."

RENT CONTROLS

Mr. Abbott said no one has yet given him "any good reason" why the federal government should continue to control the owners of housing accommodation when it does not control anyone else.

"As honorable members know, more than four years after the end of the war there are out of all the major controls," he said. "We are out of price control, we are out of wage control and we are out of most of the other controls.

Wants One Good Reason

"In fact, I think steel control is pretty much the only one left. If anyone could give me a good reason why we should continue to exercise control over one relatively small group in the community—the owners of housing accommodation—I wish they would give it to me because no one has given it to me yet. . . ."

Slaight (CCF—Winnipeg North Centre) said that was a "challenge."

He added:

"Scores, and in fact hundreds of thousands of Canada's people are facing a real problem right now in view of this announced increase in rents, and I say one case, let alone the hundreds of thousands that now exist, should constitute sufficient reason for this parliament to ask that these increases in domestic rentals should not be permitted at this time."

Mr. Garson, replying to the various suggestions about procedure, said he had no doubt that they had all been considered before the members of his department selected the course contained in the order-in-council.

In reply to a question by Mr. Diefenbaker, he said that any ruling on validity of rent regulations could be appealed to the privy council. However, the government would not undertake such an appeal if the controls were ruled invalid.

The law making the Supreme Court the court of last resort for Canada, thus abolishing appeals to the privy council, has not been given royal assent.

Not Ready For Bill

Prime Minister St. Laurent said the government wasn't prepared to bring the bill into operation because it hadn't decided on appointments for the two judicial positions which will increase the number of supreme court justices from seven to nine.

It means that while the government won't appeal if rent controls are ruled invalid, anyone else has the right to appeal if the controls are ruled to be valid.

Mr. Drew said the terms of reference to the supreme court were too narrow.

The government's, rent-control legislation could not be separated from other wartime controls which still existed. All were contained in the emergency transitional powers act.

Thus, if rent controls were ruled invalid, it would mean that all other emergency powers were ultra vires.

Wants Ruling on Whole Act

Instead of asking for a ruling on the validity of rentals—one part of the emergency powers act—the government should ask for a ruling on the whole act.

Mr. Garson later expressed the opinion that an effective ruling on the validity of rent controls would not necessarily make the whole act invalid.

This could arise if the supreme court, for instance, ruled that the government was exceeding the powers granted in the act in imposing rent-control regulations.

Mr. Coldwell said there is some question regarding whether it is legal to suspend rental regulations for one province (Saskatchewan) while maintaining them for the rest of Canada.

He wanted this question included in the reference to the supreme court so that Saskatchewan would know where it stands in its decision to take over controls.

Mr. Coldwell contended that if the new increases are to be suspended for one province they should be suspended for all.

FARMER TO STAND

Dr. A. L. Russell of Bailieboro said Mrs. Kilbon suffered from Huntington's Chorea, an incurable disease which sometimes gives rise to suicidal tendencies. Mentally, she was not normal, he testified.

He told of being called to the farm where he saw Mrs. Kilbon seated in a rocker chair with bullet holes in her chest and left temple.

"The husband told me that his wife had shot herself and he could not bear to see her suffer, so he shot her in the head," Dr. Russell said.

Mr. Robinette contended that the Crown must first establish which wound was fatal. He claimed it had not been shown that the head wound was the cause of death.

Alive After First Shot

Crown Attorney Harry Deyman declared that because Kilbon had said he fired the second shot "to put her out of her agony" she was alive after the first shot.

"The intent was quite obvious from the statement of the accused," said Magistrate R. B. Baxter.

Dr. Harold Gold, Toronto pathologist, said he thought the wound in the abdomen came first because of the resultant hemorrhage. He said he believed the woman was alive when she received the shot in the temple.

He suggested that an immediate operation in hospital might have saved her life after the stomach wound but that would have required "almost miraculous measures."

Chinese Reds Closing in On Chungking

Chungking, Nov. 29 (AP) — Communist troops smashed Chinese Nationalist defences and pushed within 20 miles of this doomed city Monday.

Some reports placed them even closer. Confusion amounting to chaos followed the news. The rush to get out of the city was so great that roads were glutted.

Hundreds upon hundreds realized to their fearful dismay that they were trapped.

Events within the last 12 hours moved desperately for the Nationalists.

First came the news the Reds striking from the east had occupied Chichang, 40 miles to the south where the highways to Chungking from Hupeh and Kweichow Provinces meet.

Then came the news of a quick Communist stab north of here, Tushih, 25 miles away, was captured.

This was followed by a quick advance of five miles which put the Reds within 20 miles or less of Chungking.

(The nearest the Japanese got to Chungking during the war was about 200 miles to the south. Chungking has been the provisional capital of Nationalist China for a little over five weeks.)

Few Officials Left

A handful of top officials were still in Chungking at nightfall. Among them was Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek. Most had planes waiting to whisk them to safety.

All Chungking shops were closed. Owners feared looters.

Silks, furs and cosmetics were hidden. They feared Communist confiscation of these items.

FORESTRY EXPERIMENTS

Martin's Summer

By Vicki Baum

After this day of many meals, and many experiences a bad time began for Martin. It rained. It rained in a steady, heavy downpour, day and night, day and night, without the slightest pause. The mountains vanished, the shore of the lake vanished; the lake itself was not to be seen.

No letter came from Herr Meyer of his investing. There was no news of Fraulein Lyzenhop. There was no money in the table drawer and there were no receipts to be entered in the depressing little account book. He did not care to swim; the wound in his arm from the rusty nail was not healing properly, and the water was fourteen degrees. Up to then meals had not been any too regular, but now hunger was unmitigated and invariable; and hunger, after three or four days of it, has the effect of an illness. It brings on dizziness and shuddering fits and makes you long to creep into a corner sad howl.

Martin went to and fro, seeking the means to stave off starvation. Frau Birndl was in bed after giving birth to five twins, and she would not be up for some time to bake bilberry tarts. The bump-backed Resi, dissatisfied at her employment by this week of rain, had left Waldhaus and gone to help in the Birndl household. The Mayreders were at the Seespitze, looking behind the wall of rain, and not to be seen. The von Brickmanns ladies had packed their trunks and gone. There were no more cups of coffee and cream buns . . .

At night Martin dreamed of a market place. It extended on and on without end, and as he walked on and on, looking at stalls of ham, sausage, huge slabs of bacon, butcher's meat, and poultry. Mountains of fruit were heaped up in baskets. Gingerbread was built up in tiers. The cheeses were as large as wagon wheels, and there were crabs, boiled red, on blocks of ice. Martin, too, so he dreamed, was lying on a block of ice, and the cold of it wakened him. The cold crept over his limbs like a hateful animal. He turned over on to the other side, for his arm hurt a little. "Iodin" said Dr. Mayreder, who was devouring a huge shoulder of veal, as Martin fell asleep again.

He dreamed of Schwoisshackel's. In the middle of Schwoisshackel's restaurant stood a long table set with clean plates in a row. Warm steam rose from each plate with a savor that made his throat contract. He wanted to eat, but he could not use his arm — and there he sat panting with hunger until he woke. He champed on the horrid taste that hunger gave to his mouth. He drank a mouthful of water and falling asleep again, found himself in his mother's little kitchen . . .

"I am to have a meal," he said next day very gravely to Herr Birndl, who was no more pleased with the weather than Martin was. Herr Birndl greeted this announcement with a grunt. What was the good of this smart swimming instructor when the weather drove all the visitors out of the place? The big Peterman was nearly empty. The next thing would be that the orchestra would be dismissed.

Martin walked irresolutely up and down in front of Schwoisshackel's restaurant once or twice before venturing in. His hands were sunk deep in the pockets of his raincoat. The breath left his body when he entered and met the thick warm smell of bean soup. He ordered three courses and sat down with grim resolution in a corner on a bench covered with oil cloth. The moments of waiting were a torture. He swallowed and choked as if he had a cramp in his gullet. Getting up, he took a large roll of country bread from another table, and ground it between his teeth and swallowed it.

"By your leave," said Vesi as he put a plate of soup before him. She was a handsome girl, a magnificent specimen of her sex, with her fine teeth and eyes and her heavy coils of hair. Martin was ashamed of the clatter he made with his knife and fork as he ate. A three days' hunger turns a man into a beast. When he was tolerably full, he felt he could use life again. He beckoned to Vesi, and she came up to him with alacrity.

"Did you enjoy it? That's right" she said.

Martin took the plunge. "Vesi, I've forgotten my purse. You must enter it up. I'll pay tomorrow."

"Of course. Quite all right," said Vesi, putting her hand confidably on his arm. Martin got up and went out.

The rain never stopped. One day Martin found a piece of bread and a little bowl of curded milk at his door. Matz, without saying a word, had brought him half his poor-house rations. For Matz, little as he was in his baggy leather breeches and his muddy boots, had a soul like anyone else, and he had his thoughts, and his devotion to Martin was a sound and sweet as a hazelnut in his six-year-old little heart.

But after four days Martin was again at the end of his tether. He crept from his hut with shadows under his eyes and a pinched face He felt cold and turned up his collar; and then he went off to Schwoisshackel's. Unobtrusively he swallowed down soup with pieces of bacon and dumplings in it, and then, purely from an uneasy conscience, he entered on a little flirtation with Vesi. Vesi needed little invitation to sit down on the bench beside him. Her plump cheeks grew redder, for she had been keen on the swimming instructor long enough. She couldn't deny that he took her fancy.

But when Martin announced that this time, too, he had no money, she gave a start and moved away from him a little. But she recovered at once and put an arm round his neck.

"It's all right—with a man like you, Herr Hell," she said tenderly. "Tomorrow, Monday, for sure!

"If it's fine weather," Martin replied, and went out.

Fine weather was all he waited for now. He waited no longer for his millions, nor even for a letter from May.

"I've got something to tell you, Herr Hell," Vesi whispered two days later, as she pulled him into a dark passage behind the dining-room. "The landlord has made a fuss. He won't give you any more credit. I am not to serve you any more till you've paid up."

"Oh, I see. Yes, of course, Night," Martin said, standing there heart-medicine and bunched up with his knife and fork as he ate. A three days' hunger turns a man into a beast. When he was tolerably full, he felt he could use life again. He beckoned to Vesi, and she came up to him with alacrity.

"Did you enjoy it? That's right" she said.

Martin took the plunge. "Vesi, I've forgotten my purse. You must enter it up. I'll pay tomorrow."

"Of course. Quite all right," said Vesi, putting her hand confidably on his arm. Martin got up and went out.

station entrance and took out two thin slabs of chocolate which he crammed hungrily into his mouth. His arm throbbed strangely. If he had had the money he would have bought some iodin.'

Three days later he crept to Schwoisshackel's and called Vesi out to the dark passage where there was a cask of beer barrels His knees shook with hunger and exhaustion. He felt no better than a miserable tramp. He explained the situation he was in owing to the incessant rain. He would stand it no longer. He told her about his prospects and the letter he expected from Herr Meyer and the millions to come from the non-inflammable film. He felt like a swindler while he did so. He put himself between Vesi and the door and held her fast and implored her.

Vesi found his excitement infectious. She comforted and consoled him and stroked his hair. She was nearly as tall as he was, a big, strong girl who could kiss him right on the mouth when she stood in front of him. Suddenly she came to an impulsive resolution.

"I can't manage it in the dining room. The landlord is on the lookout. But if you could wait in my little room I'll bring you something there," she murmured, and guided Martin round a corner of the passage. Vesi's powerful legs preceded him up a ladder. It was pitch dark at the top, and he was pushed onto a bed that smelled of the fresh straw of a peasant's mattress. Vesi lighted a candle stuck in a bottle. Outside the window there was a murmur of rain, and it could be heard, too, on the shingle roof, stealing down in an incessant whisper.

"I'll bring you something to eat in a moment," she said, as she vanished down the ladder. Soon she reappeared laughing all over, and laden with a great plateful of fried sausages. She had brought a bottle of beer too, and she set it all out tidily on a small table which she pushed up to the bed where Martin sat bolt upright. Vesi watched him eat, and this was rather distressing, because he swallowed his food so voraciously.

When he had drunk all the beer, his head felt dazed and heavy. It seemed almost as if the sausages and Vesi too, were only a dream like the market-place and all the rest he had dreamed of for night past. He had a strange feeling in his hands He felt as if they could get round great big, lumpy things, round giants of indiarubber or anything of that kind. He had a dim recollection that as a child when he was feverish, he had this lumpy feeling in his hands and he recognised it again.

"I am very hot," he murmured.

"Lie down for a little now. I'm still busy serving, but I'll get done quick." She took the empty plates and went with them down the ladder. The rain still came down.

Martin let himself sink back on the large pillows and closed his eyes. There was a singing in his temples, but his thoughts escaped him. After a while he unloosened his collar, unbuttoned his shirt and kicked off his wet shoes. Suddenly he gave a violent shudder and crept drowsily under the quilt. He put his arm out strangely because his elbow hurt him every time he moved it, and lay listening to the rain and staring at the candle.

60-YEAR-OLD WOMAN

Toronto, Nov. 29.—(CP)—Mrs. Florence M. Crawford, 60-year-old grocery store proprietress chased a gang of armed teenage would-be bandits to the street Saturday night, waving a long butchey knife.

The four youths, one armed with a blank revolver, fled in terror, one tripping another in his haste, as Mrs. Crawford reached for the knife instead of the cash drawer when the youths snarled "it's a hold-up".

SPECIAL GUARD PLACED

Nepanee, Ont., Nov. 28 —(CP)—A special 24-hour guard has been placed for the cell of Alfred Childs, 16-year-old convicted murderer, at the Nepanee jail. Three extra armed guards have been engaged for the duty.

Childs was sentenced to be hanged Feb. 10 after a Supreme Court jury convicted him of murdering Elijah McQuaig last June.

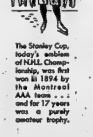
SPORTSMANSHIP IN "CANADA UNLIMITED"

Hockey's First!

The rules of the rink have changed greatly since hockey's first organized game . . . 74 years ago.

It was a March day in 1875. The Indoor Ice of Montreal's Victoria Skating Rink was a swirl of uniformed figures. Spectators who lined the rails were watching the first attempt to organize the increasingly popular game of hockey.

The teams had been reduced to nine men a side . . . each with a defining position to cover. Instead of the familiar rubber ball, a flat, round block of wood was being used. And for the first time, the goals were protected by goaltenders. Regulation hockey had been born.



The Stanley Cup, hockey's emblem of NHL Championship, was first won in 1894 by the Montreal AAA team . . . and for 17 years was a purely amateur trophy.

Hockey holds a proud tradition of sportsmanship for Canadians. And Canadian teamwork has made us world leaders in the game. Together, sportsmanship and teamwork are working for you . . . by keeping your opportunities for work and play in Canada . . . unlimited.

$20,000 Robbery Of Jewels, Watches At Granby, Que.

Police Search Set Up For Five Men in Taxi

Granby, Que., Nov. 30 (CP)—Jewelry with an estimated wholesale value of $20,000 was stolen from a Granby store early today and a widespread police search was set up for five men in a taxi.

Yvan Brouillette, proprietor of the jewelry store, said his show cases were "completely cleaned out." His estimate of the loss was tentative and he said it may be higher.

The break-in occurred about 4 a.m. Armand Guertin, a Granby policeman, saw the taxi in a lane at the rear of the store. Guertin said he tried to stop the car but it dashed away.

Provincial police sent out special patrols and municipal police in Montreal, 50 miles away, and other centres were notified. Special officers watched cars entering Montreal on several bridges.

Brouillette said the loot included at least 100 watches, 75 diamond rings and more than 100 pairs of cufflinks, studded with precious stones. Other gems were also missing.

The thieves gained entrance to the store through the cellar and left by climbing through a door from where they smashed a communicating door.

U.S. THREATENED WITH NEW COAL STRIKE TONIGHT

200 - Man Committee is Scheduled to Meet Early Today

New York, Nov. 30—(AP)—The United States was threatened with a new coal strike at midnight tonight and only a last-minute move by John L. Lewis's United Mine Workers Policy Committee seemed likely to avert the walkout.

The 200-man committee was scheduled to meet here at 4 p.m. EST, and Lewis, who has been in the last few days have been shrouded in secrecy, was in New York for the all-important session.

Mine owners were reported standing solidly against any contract concessions. There was no indication of government intervention.

Reports from Key West, Fla., where President Truman is vacationing, said administration advisers apparently were clinging to the hope of an 11th-hour resumption of negotiations between Lewis and the operators which would permit extension of the 80-day cooling-off period, expiring at midnight.

The policy committee had been directed by Lewis to meet here Monday, but at the last minute the session was postponed until Tuesday, and then again until today. Lewis offered no explanation for postponing the meetings.

Lewis abandoned his old-time policy of "no contract no work" when the miners' agreement with the operators expired last June 30.

A short work week and a 32-day strike resulted. The miners got 60 cents an hour.

Should a walkout occur again, most mines would be closed. It would include all of the mine workers across the U.S.—the anthracite diggers in eastern Pennsylvania and the soft-coal miners west of the Mississippi as well as the bituminous coal miners who were idle east of the Mississippi for the 52 days up to Nov. 9.

Two Are Missing As Hotel Manoir Is Destroyed

Acionvale, Que., Nov. 30 (CP)—Two persons were reported missing today after an early-morning fire destroyed the hotel in Manoir in this eastern townships village, driving most of the guests and staff from the building in their night clothes.

Police reported that the two were missing but were able to identify them only as a Mr. Roy, a guest, and a Mr. Monicatan, a hotel employee. The hotel register was destroyed in the blaze.

The fire broke out about 4 a.m. in first storey of the hotel in the village about 20 miles from St. Hyacinthe.

Many of the guests scrambled through windows clutching hastily-grabbed bedsheets to escape the flames which spread rapidly through the three-storey brick-veneer building.

Police said there were more than 20 Greek and eight staff member. in the building at the time.

The hotel was burned to the ground. Five fighters, unable to save the building, concentrated their efforts on saving neighboring houses.

Loss was estimated at $60,000.

SECRET NOTES INTRODUCED AT HISS TRIAL

Tell of Communist Intrigue in U.S.

New York, Nov. 30. (AP)—Operations of a powerful Red underground that sought to bend the United States policy to the will of the Communist Party are described in notes introduced at the Alger Hiss perjury trial.

The heretofore secret notes, based on information supplied to the State department by ex-spy Elizabeth Bentley, provided a sketch the interworkings of Red bloc penetrating deep into the New Deal" Washington.

Thomas F. Murphy, assistant United States attorney, put the notes on record Tuesday, to bolster the prosecution's claims that Communist intrigue shall figure importantly in the perjury charge against Hiss.

Hiss, former high state department official and adviser to the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, is accused of lying when he told a federal grand jury he never was a government secreta to Miss Chambers.

He is on trial for the second time, after a jury last summer was unable to agree on a verdict.

The state department notes, studded with names of pre-war Communist figures, paint a bold and successful manoeuvre by the Communist party in 1934 to enlist secret converts in the government.

Reports written by Raymond Murphy, state department security officer, on two talks in 1945 and 1946 with Chambers, describe the underground's purpose as "far reaching espionage and political spying.

"The purpose," a memo said, "was for each member to advance as high as possible in the government to shape legislation favorable to the program of the Communist government."

One note said Hiss' job "was never to make converts — his job was to mess up policy."

Says Canada Should Have Only One Supreme Court

Ottawa, Nov. 30—(CP)—While Prime Minister St. Laurent tapped his desk in approval, John Diefenbaker (PC—Lake Centre) advocated today that "political fitness" should not be one of the qualifications for new appointees to the Supreme Court of Canada.

The Prime Minister applauded too, as the Prairie lawyer argued that the time has come for Canada to have only one court called Supreme in name—the Supreme Court of Canada which is to become the final court of appeal for the country.

Mr. Diefenbaker held that the law should be amended to provide that only that one court be called Supreme. This would prevent confusion with the lesser, provincial supreme courts.

As the Commons considered a bill to increase salaries of the federal supreme court judges, James MacNeill (CCF—Vancouver East) renewed his argument that "it is nothing short of scandalous to be raising their salaries when the meagre incomes of hundreds of thousands of our people are falling every day."

Says Salaries High Enough

Unemployment has grown 100 per cent this year, the Mr. MacDonald said, which meant that thousands of Canadians are now accepting even lower standards of living at a time when the judges' salaries are being increased.

The Chief Justice will get $25,000 and the six other judges $20,000.

Mr. Diefenbaker called on the government to make appointments to the Supreme Court on the basis that the court was undertaking vast new responsibilities. He said that such appointments was greater than ever.

"Unless their qualifications transcend every political consideration a burden will be struck from which the court will not soon recover."

Further, he argued, no judge should be appointed to royal commissions appointed as the result of political issues.

Justice Minister Garson said he agreed with the view that there should be only one court in Canada bearing the title Supreme Court.

However, it was up to the provinces to decide on names for their courts, The Federal Government could not take steps to change or avoid the title but it would have to be done tactfully.

As for the question of whether judges should be appointed in fact Commissions, Mr. Garson said there are some disadvantages, but there were definite advantages as well which outweighed the disadvantages.

The government would appoint Canada's best judicial talent to the Royal Commissions except when the inquiries were on political matters.

Pensions Discussed

Discussing salary increases for Supreme Court judges, Mr. Garson said the boost would in line with the increased responsibilities of the Supreme Court when it becomes court of last resort in Canada.

To get high calibre men for the job, the salaries must be attractive.

Mr. Garson said he agrees that pensions should be put into judicial appointments.

Mr. Diefenbaker called on the government to make appointments to the Supreme Court on the basis that the court was undertaking vast new responsibilities. He said that such appointments was greater than ever.

HOUSE APPROVES $275,000,000 FOR HOUSING JACKPOT

New Legislation Given Final Reading

Ottawa, Nov. 30—(CP)—Legislation which adds $275,000,000 to the federal government's housing jackpot was approved by the Commons Tuesday night.

After a peppery question-and-answer session in which Reconstruction Minister Winters was the target, the House gave third and final reading to a bill designed to do these things:

1. Add $200,000,000 to a loan fund for reducing by half the down payment on new housing.

2. Increase from $100,000,000 to $125,000,000 the money available for home construction and slum improvement loans.

3. Establish a $50,000,000-fund for joint Dominion-provincial low-cost or low-rental housing construction.

The first provision is retroactive to Sept. 21 when the revised housing plan was first announced. The first loans will come into operation when the bill is proclaimed after being given Senate approval.

Interest rates on government loans would be 3¼ per cent.

Five years ago when the National Housing Act was first brought down, $100,000,000 was provided for loans in the form of mortgages on new housing.

Need Is Great

Since that time $86,000,000 has been spent. With the addition of $200,000,000 the total will be a total of $214,000,000 in the pot for reducing down payments.

As an example of the effect of this provision, the down payment on a $6,000 house would be as low as $1,500 and on a $13,000 house around $2,500 or 20 per cent of what it was under the former provisions.

The extra reduction is accomplished by a second mortgage which can be paid off over 30, 25 or 20-year periods.

Mr. Winters was asked to estimate how many houses he thought would be built in the next year under this plan. He told Donald Fleing (PC—Toronto Eglington) that thought it would be roughly about 35,000 in 1950.

Standard Time Urged in Canada For Whole Year

Stratford, Nov. 30—(CP)— A strong plea for legislation establishing standard time throughout Canada during the whole year was made in a resolution passed at the annual convention of the women's committee of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture meeting here Tuesday.

The resolution, directed to the health committee, asking for an increased number of doctors in rural districts to be appointed, was also passed by the meeting.

A floor point for each meat, poultry and other farm products as the minimum support level was made because of the high cost of production was asked in resolution addressed to the federal government.

Pay Tribute to Churchill, 'Greatest Living Englishman' As He Marks 75th Birthday

London, Nov. 30. (CP)—British morning papers today pay tribute to Winston Churchill on his 75th birthday as the "Greatest Living Englishman."

The London Daily Mail comments that churchill "has done more, seen more, suffered more than any other statesman of his time. He has lived several full lives and in each of them has made mistakes, and like his friends has come to be known as the heroic scale."

The pro-empire Daily Express says of the Conservative party leader: "It half the people of the world are living more than their freedom more to this man than to any other. If the other half still have hopes of freedom, their hopes are centred on him."

The Communist Daily Telegraph writes: "Not the least astonishing feature of his amazing career is that Mr. Churchill, at the age of 75, can look not back, but forward, to a fifth 25-year Parliament."

The pro-Labor Daily Herald skipped an editorial but frontpaged a 30-word birthday story headed, "Many Birthday to You."

Quiet Celebration

London (CP) Winston Churchill, who helped lead his war cabinet to lose his post as prime minister in an election, turned 75 today with his wife and family and the world's polls just ahead.

The British statesman, warrior, writer, orator and amateur artist planned a quiet celebration at his Hertfordshire home, a private full career.

Later he intends to turn up in his usual seat in the House of Commons.

Tonight his family and a few friends will give a birthday dinner for the man who has London house overlooking Hyde Park.

His birthday cake was baked in Manchester by the same people who prepared the one for Prince Charles' first birthday cake but was is in the form of a merry - go - round on which were served as a symbol of Churchill's own busy and varied life.

Hamilton, Nov. 30 (CP)— Hamilton civic employees now are free to take part in civic elections. This was made possible by city council Tuesday night when it repealed a 15-year-old by-law prohibiting such participation. But civic employees have only a few days left to stand for election before municipal election Dec. 7.

14-Year-Old Labor Govt. Ousted By Electorate

Wellington, N.Z., Nov. 30 — (CP) — New Zealand electors today chose free enterprise over socialism, turning out of office the Labor party and voting into power the National party.

The National party, campaigning for a return to free enterprise, captured 46 of the 80 seats in the House of Representatives, Labor won the remaining 34.

The result ended 14 years of government by Labor.

At dissolution Labor held 40 seats and the National or Conservative party held 38. One seat was vacant and one was held by Frank Langstone, Independent-Labor. Langstone, a former high commissioner to Canada, broke away from the Labor party last August, opposing its decision to support compulsory military training.

The campaign revolved itself largely into a struggle between socialism and private enterprise. The Labor party went to the country on a "security for all" platform. Labor's leaders had promised to reduce government controls and restore incentives.

Prime Minister Holland, Nationa (Conservative) party leader, said the keynote of the National campaign his first objective will be to "let the people free from domination by the state."

New Prime Minister

Holland, a 56-year-old Christchurch business man who has led the National opposition for the last nine years, probably will become New Zealand's next prime minister.

Leading Labor in its unsuccessful bid for re-election was Prime Minister Peter Fraser, a crusty, Scots-born politician. Fraser, 68, has been prime minister since 1940.

Prominent Labor cabinet ministers were generally returned to office, but their majorities were sharply reduced.

Labor had announced no new nationalization measures but had promised to extend the existing social security system. Holland has claimed "has freed New Zealand from want and the fear of want."

The Labor party gained power in 1935 in a landslide election which gave it 53 seats out of 80 in the House. This lead was cut at successive elections until 1946 Labor won 42 seats and the National party 38. Labor had to rely on the votes of Independent supporters to hold the majority.

U.S. PLANS NEW ATOMIC WEAPONS AND SECRET TESTS

Will be Weighty With Meaning for Russia, and Rest of World

Washington, Nov. 30. (AP)—Some more, and probably even more deadly, atomic weapons are going to be explored by the United States in a secret test. It will be weighty with meaning for Russia and the rest of an A-bomb conscious world.

A joint announcement by the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission and Defense Department, Thursday night gave the place—the mid-Pacific proving ground on Eniwetok Atoll—but kept secret the time. It said only that tests are planned.

There was an obvious reason for withholding the month, week or days on which the tests will be made: to foil any attempt by Russian submarines or airplanes to steal clogs enough to the Atoll to make some technically useful observations.

Scientists here believe that 60-vlet bombs are far behind the new and vastly more powerful designs developed by the United States.

Apparently no foreign visitors, friendly or unfriendly, are wanted at Enlwetok for the forthcoming tests.

The announcement said "full security restrictions" are required by the Atomic Energy Act apply to all aspects of test preparations including the time of the tests."

Won't Be Invited

This was interpreted in some quarters to mean that the rigid provisions of the Atomic law, prohibiting translmission of secret data to any foreign power, would mean that Britain and Canada wouldn't be invited to send observers.

Proposes Liquor Industry Provide Free Bus Service

Toronto, Nov. 30. (CP)— A United Church minister today suggested the liquor industry provide free service for its drinking customers.

Rev. George A. Little told a meeting of the suburban East York Neighborhood Workers' Association that the liquor and wholesale liquor trade or the Ontario government should provide buses and drivers to be kept at the ready—for the unsteady. The buses, he said, are necessary, why should not the wealthy and prosperous liquor industry or government provide a service for those incapacitated for walking after an evening, say from 10 p.m. to 2 a.m."

Suggests $5 P.C. Be Paid Toronto's Education Cost

Toronto, Nov. 30 (CP)— The civic advisory council of Toronto suggested today that the Ontario government pay 50 per cent of the city's education costs. The cost would be 2 1-2 times the amount now contributed by the provincial government.

The suggestion was contained in a report of the council's municipal-provincial relations committee. The present 20 per cent grant was "not unreasonable."

A board of education official said today the grant made this year by the province was "around 20 per cent" of the total education cost.

The advisory council is established under municipal by-law in an advisory capacity to board of control and city council. It has no official status.

Inquest Ordered In Student's Death

Brampton, Nov. 30.— (CP)— Coroner Dr. Ernest Cassellie Davis today ordered an inquest into the death ten days ago of Frederick Hall, 21-year-old University student from nearby Acton. Date of the inquest has not yet been set.

Miss Robertson was left at the hospital Nov. 20 by a man who disappeared after telling the nurse that Hall was dead. He was dead when examined in the hospital. A post-mortem disclosed death was due to a bungled abortion.

John Gross, 34, a Toronto brewery salesman, later told police he had taken Miss Robertson to the hospital but said he had no knowledge of the alleged operation which caused her death. No charges have been laid in connection with the case, police said.

Legless Since Birth 3-Year-Old Child Can Now Walk With New Feet

Sharpsburg, Pa., Nov. 30—(AP)— "Mummy, where's my feet?"

Sadly Mrs. Sylvia Stypula would explain over and over to her blonde, three-year-old daughter Evelyn:

"Honey, God didn't give you any feet."

That would satisfy Evelyn for a while. But then she would see other older girls, "feet like hers" her little cousins dancing and running about.

And again she would ask;

"Mummy, where's my feet?"

The chubby little girl with the Dutch-doll haircut was born with her thighbones attached to her hips. Her left arm ended at the elbow. The fingers or her right hand were missing.

Last February, Evelyn entered Mercy Hospital for an operation that would enable her to have a normal life. The leg stumps were amputated at the thigh.

Aug. 15 Evelyn got her feet—present from the Allegheny County Society for Crippled Children which will buy her all the various sets of legs she will need until she is grown up.

"I stand and I walk now," she says. She pointed to a scuff mark on the floor. "I learned with sandals;

Evelyn is still getting used to the legs. She didn't like them because they were uncomfortable at first, but that all changed when she went to a cousin's birthday party.

"For the first time she was shy about it," Mrs. Stypula said, "but her mother reported. "After that, she liked them."

Evelyn's sister (her cousin) stepped on my shoe real hard," piped up Evelyn. "It didn't hurt me. Tommy got hurt."

Tommy, four years old Sept. 27, can stand on the legs and can walk if someone holds her hand. But his efforts still result in falls but the Crippled Children's Society think it can fix that with some walking instructions.

"It will be a merrier Christmas this year," Mrs. Stypula said. "Even though Evelyn is afraid of Santa Claus."

"I don't like his big boots," said the youngster who screamed at the sight of a department store Santa.

Married Women in Britain to be Freed From Restrictions on Inheritance

London, Nov. 30 — (CP) — The House of Commons Tuesday gave third and final reading to a bill intended to free married women from inheritance restrictions.

The measure — the Married Women (restraint upon anticipation) Bill — will relieve married women of restrictions imposed by will on inherited estates.

Legislation enacted in 1935 abolished practically all restraints ed women from anticipating capital of a legacy but left in force ability to restrictions in force before 1935.

The new bill, when it comes into effect, will operate retrospectively, abolishing all restraints whether in force before 1935 or not.

Attorney-General Sir Hartley Shawcross said it was wrong that the happiness of married women should be controlled by a "dead hand."

One of those who will benefit is Mrs. Edith Countess Mountbatten, wife of the former Viceroy of India, who was left a life interest on a capital sum of £1,400,000 ($4,340,000) by her grandfather, Sir Ernest Cassel, in 1921.

The bequest was subject to the restraint on anticipation now being removed by legislation. These restrictions prevented her from borrowing upon the future income.

She sought relief from this restraint in a private bill in the House of Lords, but it was withdrawn when the government itself decided to introduce a bill to make the relief apply to all married women.

An act passed in 1935 nullified restrictions on inheritances by married women but was not retroactive. The new act will

SIX GUARD RAIL POSTS BROKEN AS CAR IS CROWDED

Crowded off the road when the driver attempted to pass another vehicle on the Bay Bridge Road, a truck driven by Edwin Buckman, R.R. 1, Belleville, ripped out six guard rail posts just south of the C.N.R. crossing late Tuesday evening.

Mr. Buckman told police that he was driving within the Bay Bridge road when he attempted to pass another vehicle. As he drew even with the other car he was crowded to the left and his fender and bumper caught the guard rail ripping out the six posts. Only minor damage was caused to the truck.

Power Cut Off For Two Hours In Three Places

Galt, Nov. 30. (CP)— Industrial power was cut off for about two hours today in Galt and the nearby towns of Preston and Hespeler because the water supply failed at the power station at Preston which serves all three centres.

The cutoff began at 7 a.m. and was over shortly after 9 a.m.

Wells from which the hydro stations draws water to cool transformers went down around 3 a.m. and led to the cutoff. A two-inch main from the Preston water system failed to provide enough water. But later a gasoline pump was rigged up to pump water from a nearby creek into the well.

Workers were sent home when they arrived at their places of employment but were called back later.

Gadget Reveals Alcohol Content In Blood Stream

By WAYNE OLIVER

New York Nov. 30 (AP) Science is working both sides of the street. Not only does it develop drinks that are more tempting, but it also comes up with better devices to blast your alibi if you have too many.

Among the displays at the Chemical Industries Exposition here is a streamlined 1950 model "alcometer," which might be more aptly be called a "drunkometer."

It's about the size of a small console radio and the manufacturers say it's as easy to operate. It has a sloping panel with about half a dozen controls, a large dial with a pointer and a tube sticking out on the right hand side.

Short Test Time

You blow your breath into the tube. The operator of the machine, a refinement of earlier models, manipulates the controls. Eight minutes later the hand on the dial moves over the telltale evidence—cold sober, mildly intoxicated, or stinko.

The machine, made by Alfred Bicknell Associates of Cambridge Mass., was developed by Dr. Leon A. Greenberg and associates in the Department of Applied Physiology at Yale University.

Dr. Greenberg explained that the dial is calibrated to show the percentage of alcohol in the blood. The machine doesn't measure the amount of alcohol on the breath, but translates this to percentage in the blood because the two are related by a fixed ration.

Dr. Greenberg and his university associates developed measurements are these: Up to .05 per cent alcohol in your blood, seven-tenths of 1 per cent, your command of your faculties probably is impaired but that alone is not proof you're drunk; from .15 up, no question about it, you're definitely drunk no matter how well he can take his liquor.

One advantage of the machine, he declared, is that it is much faster and simpler than taking a blood sample and making an examination. The gadget also is portable, so it can be taken to practically any location and plugged into the nearest light socket.

"Secondary School Education" and free, Following in the 19th was the subject of an address, with the century crept into George K. Currie, principal of the education and was state controlCollegiate Institute, to members led. "This education aspect of of the Kiwanis Club at their is and in some extent influenced weekly luncheon at the Kiwanis the Canadian education system," Service Tuesday. Currie in detail outlined the history of education and how it had been adopted to our way of life. The speaker traced the growth from the ancient world to the present day.

He stated that in the ancient world education arose through the transmission tribal knowledge and then came the Oriental which tried to preserve the past and then followed the Hebrew education, which taught the Fathehood of God and Brotherhood of Man. "His education was democratic and universal, while the Greeks and Scribes were given vocational training. The Greeks' education was directed to a slave economy, while the Spartans taught their youth to use force rather than men of wisdom", said Mr. Currie.

The speaker stated that the Romans repressed the aim of the individual, but the mediaeval education dealt with the salvation of the soul, and in the rebirth also education tried to show that life on earth has a purpose and a beginning. The Italians taught the freedom of thought and then followed 1600 to 1800 with the period of classical education, which is the Reformation and counter Reformation period education was universal, compulsory stated that the situation was extremely critical, particularly during the period from 5 p.m. to 6 p.m. and during this critical period it was necessary to co-operate as fully as possible in reducing the use of electricity.

Cut Off Water Pumps

To relieve the situation all municipal pumps have been requested to shut down such loads as water pumps and sewage lifts which can be shut down during the critical period each day.

The management of the Belleville is doing what it can to assist in the matter of reducing the power consumption or energy and has changed its date for installation of office hours and is closing at 4.30 in the afternoon. Every light in the building not absolutely required for emergency purposes will be shut off.

Mr. Gurnett appealed to Hydro users to co-operate in turning off electric lamps and appliances and motors that it may be possible to do without. Only by conserving at the critical period in the late afternoon and early evening can energy possible will power interruptions be avoided.

Power Restored

Mr. Gurnett stated that it was hoped the situation would be improved as passed after December 15th, when the Commission will obtain additional power from water which will be made available following the close of navigation in the Welland canal system. This water would be used at Decew Falls.

Also by that time the Commission will have in operation several of the small package steam plants which are now in the process of construction and will be completed later in December. It is also expected there will be some drop-off in the industrial load in the period immediately preceding and through the holiday season.

5 to 6 P.M. Critical Power Period Co-operation of Consumers Asked

The cessation of Daylight Saving in many municipalities throughout the province, together with the cloudy weather prevailing for the past few days has resulted in the Hydro load being critically increased, according to K. G. Gurnett, manager of the East Cendrual Region of the H.E.P.C.

Christmas Feast Will Be Limited Only by Size of Canadian Pocketbook

(By the Canadian Press)

The Christmas feast, traditionally an important feature of the holiday celebration, should be bountiful indeed, despite trends in Canada this year.

Food, both domestic and imported, is plentiful, a cross-Canada survey by The Canadian Press discloses. Limiting factor is whether the Canadian dinner table this Christmas resembles the "groaning board" of medieval England will depend largely on the fatness of the housewife's pocketbook.

In most cities there are signs of economy in pre-season shopping, with expensive foods popular last year receiving less attention than in previous years, and emphasis on non-luxury items. Many housewives who bought Christmas cakes and puddings last Christmas are preparing to bake their own this year.

Ingredients for cakes and puddings, are in good supply, Raisins, scarce last year, are relatively available this year, at a slightly higher price. Peel, shelled nuts and shortening can be found in almost every grocer's shelves. Restrictions have been removed from the import of nuts from the United States.

Ottawa shoppers find that candied peel is being sold in packages, with more available in bulk. Walnut pieces are scarce in this city, despite an abundance of the more expensive walnut halves.

Dealers are confident they can meet all demands for Christmas turkeys and chickens at prices about the same as last year. One poultry raiser at Valcartier, Que., announced he had 13,000 first-class birds and expected to sell them all in this district.

Toronto and Halifax report candy plentiful at moderate prices but in Windsor, Ont., candy is in short supply and expensive.

Saskatchewan expects no shortage of Christmas foods. Dealers there say prices on most lines of merchandise are lower than in 1948.

Stocks are ample in Newfoundland, even in remote sections of the province. Most families in St. John's are planning turkey dinners with all the trimmings to celebration of their island's first Christmas as a Canadian province.

FOUND BEATS HARDER

Tokyo, Nov. 30 (AP)— Tokyo's metropolitan police will start sounding their beats harder on morrow. The objective: Curb the usual wave of December robberies. Japanese traditionally pay off all their debts before the old year ends. It's a matter of honor. Police get the upsurge of robberies always precedes the honorable payment of debts.

TB Christmas Seal Campaign Now in Operation

"When you ask people to give you money, it is only fair to tell them what you want to do with that money for," said Mayor D. C. Sinvey, chairman of the local Tuberculosis Christmas Seal Committee, announcing the opening of the Christmas Seal campaign for funds.

"People like to know how their dollars are going to be spent," he continued. "Last year $6,140 was raised in this community to fight tuberculosis and that money was used to finance the X-ray unit which was carried on here in the course of which over 15,000 people were served for TB. This year we are planning to X-ray many sections of Hastings county by means of the Mobile Units and all patients admitted to Belleville General Hospital.

"The Christmas Seal campaign is the one public appeal for funds made by the tuberculosis associations throughout the year," he stated. "It is the only time we go to the public for help and it is hoped that everybody will help to contribute to, a very worthy cause, We are sure that a great many people, in fact, every family, we hope, will be glad to contribute again this year."

Merit of Grant to Parks Board Will be Debated at Meeting

Reasons for the request of the local parks board for a grant of two mills from the city will be outlined to the electors at the pre-election meeting to be held at the Collegiate Auditorium on Thursday evening, it was learned today.

Harry W. Rollins, chairman of the local parks board will outline the need of the parks board for the additional one mill grant from the city, while Alderman Don' Thomas' will present his views in opposition. The electors will be asked to vote on the two-mill grant to the parks board at Monday's election.

Mr. Rollins will be permitted four minutes to present the parks board reason for the request of the two mill grant and will be followed the last candidate for municipal honors in Monday's election. Alderman Thomas will then present views in opposition to the two mill request following which Mr. Rollins will be given two minutes to reply.

The debate on the question of the two mill grant to the parks board is expected to add considerable interest to the pre-election meeting at which candidates for the mayoralty, and for aldermanic and board of education honors, are to be heard.

A public address system has been set up in the collegiate auditorium to assure the various speakers being readily heard in all parts of the room.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 30. (CP)— The decline continued on the Toronto Stock Exchange today for the third consecutive session. Activity slowed to a crawl but small losses continued cropping out on the big board.

Industrials weakened fractions and base metals slipped quietly. Gold showed signs of a slight recovery movement. Western oils held steady on balanced gains and losses.

Volume for the first three hours was 410,000 shares.

In Industrials, Goodyear Tire went against the trend for a $2-advance at $33 following news of an increased year-end dividend.

Noranda Mines, an early gainer in base metals, dipped into the minus column as the session progressed.

Signs of steadiness appeared in golds. Several junior producers advanced penals in the dull dealings. Calgary and Edmonton and Federated Petroleum gained in western oils.

Four Men Adrift In Mail Boat Tossed Ashore

Quebec, Nov. 30 — CP) — A small mail boat carrying four men was adrift in the stormy St. Lawrence River for several hours Tuesday while relatives enlisted the help of amateur radio operators to locate them.

The men set out in their 20-foot boat driven by an outboard motor shortly after noon Tuesday from Montmagny on the St. Lawrence south shore for Ile Aux Grues (Crane Island), eight miles away.

A howling blizzard sweeping down the river and drifting ice took them out of their way and radio amateurs went on the air with messages asking for information when the boat failed to arrive at Ile Aux Grues by 4 p.m.

Skipper Marcel Normand and his crew, Amedee Coulombe, Dominique Vezina and Joseph Gagne, were towed ashore at nearby Grosse Isle about 5 p.m. but word of the boat's safety was not known until some five hours later.

Leafs Purchase Goalie Rollins From Cleveland

Toronto, Nov. 30 — (CP) — Manager Conn Smythe of Toronto Maple Leafs today announced the purchase of goaltender Al Rollins from Cleveland Barons of the American Hockey League, just a day after he benched Leaf goalie Turk Broda for being over weight.

He said that Cleveland will get cash "in five figures;" Bobby Dawes, who plays centre or defence, immediately; and three more players, including a goalie, next spring.

The 23-year-old Rollins arrives in Toronto tomorrow and if he passes a medical examination the deal will be complete.

Smythe said he will go ahead with his plan to use Gil Mayer from the Pittsburgh Hornets instead tomorrow night against Detroit Red Wings. But the clothes for Saturday night's game against New York Rangers is a toss-up. Broda, if he gets down to 190 from 197 pounds, or Mayer or Rollins. Said Smythe: "I hope it's Broda."

He announced no further line-up changes for tomorrow night's game although Harry Watson, Vic Lynn, Sid Smith, Garth Boesch and Howie Meeker have been told they'll be benched unless they take off weight and get in condition.

WALKED INTO TRUCK

Ottawa, Nov. 30 (CP)—Joseph Coyle, 74, of Ottawa, was instantly killed Tuesday night when knocked down by an unidentified vehicle. Police said the elderly man apparently walked into the side of a heavy vehicle. They said the street was "very busy" at the scene of the accident and a motorist might easily not notice the impact.

ST. ANDREW AND SCOTLAND

St. Andrew's Day has come, a day of richness and wealth of memory and association to the sturdy people of Scotland and the world. At this time thoughts mark the anniversary of their patron saint who has richly influenced the people of the Highlands and Lowlands. It is a time when every Scot in Scotland and every Scot or descendent of a Scot abroad has his mind and soul in tune with the wealth of song, story, history and music and the vigor of character which the Scot possesses. Scotland is a proof to the world of the rich values which people can contribute to humanity of every race as in the songs of Burns, and the stories of Scott and of other romancers and writers of fiction, in the strength of mind which is shown in her philosophers and in every class of the people, young and old, rich and poor. One of her story tellers, the great Sir Walter Scott, has left to every race and especially to Scotland a treasury of story mankind cannot duplicate. Their Robert Burns is the world's Robert Burns, the greatest master of those who ever penned a line and the one poet of all poets who sang the heart and the soul of not only a people but of humanity.

Scotland has always had something of the noble character of her patron saint, St. Andrew. Her soldiers have won renown on many a field, her statesmen have left their mark on the Empire and Commonwealth and through them on the world of nations.

The Scottish people possess a love of liberty and freedom which admits the rights of others. Their wealth of humanity, their rugged strength, their courage and their gentleness, their wealth of religion make them a people who win the hearts of men and women in every clime.

The people of a land not rich except in beauty and the opportunity for the development of its natural gifts, Scots are recognized by the world as people of vigor, and manliness. Abroad they retain their Scots flavor which wins them friends for wherever they are they form another bit of Scotland while at the same time they are good citizens of democracy.

This people proves the importance of racial values. The world is richer for the developments of the races which have produced Scotch, Irish, English, Welsh, French, Norwegians and other peoples. Scotland has a high place in the world's esteem.

On St. Andrew's Day well may this race which has given so freely of good things to the world mark the festival of their patron Saint who so fittingly represents them.

ELECTRICITY FROM SCOTTISH BOGS.

Peat has been burnt on Scottish fires for generations, but today it has come into the news in another type of fuel.

Britain has just set up a special committee to advise on developing peat as a fuel for burning in gas turbines. This committee will work under the chairmanship of Sir Edward Appleton, noted British scientist and Principal of Edinburgh University. It will investigate ways of extracting peat from moss bogs in Scotland (which cover thousands of acres), and will plan research into burning peat in turbine engines to produce electricity for light, heat and power.

There is another side to the scheme — clearance of peat from wide stretches of land in Scotland may open up large tracts of soil for food production.

Scientists who produced many of Britain's ingenious discoveries are now working on a large plough to lift the peat. It will be able to clear several hundred feet of bog each day. Driven by gas turbine engines which will themselves use peat, the plow is fitted with six foot blades which slice and lift the peat in even layers. Peat used by the plow itself is automatically crushed and fed into a small furnace where it is converted into hot air and steam which provides the necessary driving power.

Experts from many parts of the world have been to Britain recently to find out the uses to which gas turbines can be put and the British Government's new research station in Scotland is now carrying out important experiments connected with the development of these engines for industrial and other purposes.

CRASH HELMETS DO SAVE LIVES

The regulation crash helmet, worn by every motorcyclist in the British Army, has more than proved its worth in saving life and preventing serious injury. This is one of the conclusions reached after an investigation into 600 motor-cycle accidents, involving army riders, recently undertaken by the Operational Research Group of Britain's Supply Ministry at the request of the Army Medical Directorate. Of 106 serious cases of concussion, it was found that the majority would have been fatal but for the compulsory wearing of the crash helmet; and in 199 cases of slight injury investigated, the helmet was found to have given comparative immunity to the head.

EPITAPH

"He did his best!" that is enough to say
Of him we knew.
No more than this can 'skill from day to day
Or courage do.

This is the ultimate that man can claim
In every test,
Winning or failing, when the challenge came:
"He did his best."

This is true triumph! Done the final task,
He lies at rest.
No more than this will God expect or ask:
"He did his best!"

The municipal elections will be held on Monday Dec. 2nd. There are approximately 5-600 voters in this city, the majority of whom are women. No doubt a large vote will be polled as there is a large list of candidates for the office of aldermen. Last year the total vote cast was small, the mayoralty contest was 3,038 which was less than 60 per cent of the available vote. There are 12 aldermen to be elected this year. The contest for mayor is between Mayor Harry Greenlees and Ald. Geo. A. Reid.

MALT AND MAYHEM

A few hydrants down the street from my Beekman Place digs is a publicly owned bath parlor called Jerry's, and when I ambled by the other night for a magnum of 7-Up, the two stools at the far end of the bar were occupied as usual, by Long George Smiley, a man with an air of last rites about him, and Sid "The Inch" Perry, an underslung mound of secrets.

"What breeds war?" The Inch was saying. "I'll tell you what breeds war. Capitalism breeds war."

"Now I know why Tito and Stalin are throwing those punches at each other," said Long George. "They're fronting for Standard Oil and the House of Morgan."

"Stop talking like a Republican," said The Inch. "We're in the pap and Pablum of Wall Street. Do I make myself clear?"

"You make yourself ridiculous," said George. "What do you think the five million guys in the Russian Army have in their rifles —meat balls?"

"Did it ever occur to you gentlemen mention something about Russia's A-bomb, the other day, speaking from somewhere near his left ear lobe. "If such is the case, and I have a hunch it is, low no more than two pounds of it will blow Russia, Europe and you bums already ate up your quota for the week."

"Stop thinking about our economic system is dishonest," said The Inch. "It's a system of beered, shot-changed and short shirts!"

"Maybe you'd like it better down Brudsky way where a guy is liable to get short-lived," said George.

"It sounds like you been listening to the lies on the capitalist radio," said The Inch.

"Lies, hell! I get what about those wind merchants in the fur hats!" said Long George. "Did you read that Tass broadcast from Siberia—the one about alcohol as a mountain with an added bomb!"

"What's wrong with that!" said The Inch. "Would you rather have them slice up a city."

"Citizen, I would much better unsliced," said George, "but when the Russians talk about atomic bug mountains I'm afraid building is the well-known bologna. And I think I know why this annoyed this fancy lie. As long as we had the bomb exclusively, the comrades could call us warmongers and claim we were trying to put a padlock on the world. But now that they've got the big firecracker themselves, by their own definition they're warmongers too. And so, scared that their own propaganda will back fire on them, they're come up with this whopper about using the Siberian bore mountains and make rivers change their minds. My lunch, however, is that the only mountain they've moved so far is a mountain of press releases."

The Inch snorted. "You talk as if you'd been hanging out with Bernard M. Baruch."

"I ain't had the honor," said Long George, "but if the peanut gallery will pipe down, I'd also like to point out that sensible folks don't go around blowing up mountains with atomic bombs or costing a million per each. For one thing, dynamite is a lot cheaper. For another, there's a little thing called radio-activity to consider. Also, for those considering it, remember the statement of the Chicago professor who said that the new 1949-model bombs were exploded by the hydrogen in the air. I'll bet a way down to Guatemala would be contaminated for months."

"Irregardless and irrespective," said The Inch. "I insist that war is a mountain what neither you nor I is a baby."

"Stop making like Johnny One-Note," said George. "And the next time you see your buddies Joe and Vyshy, answer them with them what Henry Wadsworth Smigg once said—that those who live by force-bearing, perish and very polited end."

The Inch was puzzled. "Who is Henry Wadsworth Smigg?"

"My cousin twice removed," said George, "who was in county jail for passing phony cheques, and he left behind the cash customers a chance."

The auto repair finished their beers and headed for the door, The Inch pausing, as usual, to take the replacement phone in to pay telephone.

When the swinging doors had stopped swinging, the bartender took a bowl off one of the liquor shelves.

"It's a pleasure to be able to put the pretzels back on the bar," he said.

Advocates Britain And United States Take the Lead

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

The Archbishop of York, Dr. Cyril F. Garbett, advocates that Britain and the United States take the lead in calling on the countries of the world to pledge immediate and collective vengeance against any country using the atomic bomb.

That atomic idea is one with which the United States and Britons has been struggling ineffectually for a long time. Neither Britain and the United States would have any better luck is open to doubt. Perhaps the Archbishop wouldn't do any harm for Britain to try the idea.

Even more challenging is Dr. Garbett's hint, that if the free democracies should agree they never will use the atomic bomb unless it already has been used against them first.

That sort of seems to put the peace-minded democracies on a par with the chap who observed a drawn pistol who holds his fire until after his opponent has taken a pot at him, and instead of carrying sportsmanship rather far, Alymer Maxwell points out that by place to start is with the outlawing of war altogether, which is the objective of the United Nations.

I could be terribly wrong, but

CONCERNING DEVALUATION

The ancient Roman denarius, a coin of rather low value, experienced very much the same thing that is now the British pound is now experiencing, but for a different reason. The denarius was depreciated by increasing the alloy, by reducing the gold, and by clipping. What had once been a quite respectable piece of money became at last a despised outcast.

Alloy is necessary in the manufacture of anything in which precious metals are used. Alloy is necessary in order to hold the precious metal together. But too much alloy means a thing so devalued as to lose all distinction. Whether it be the devalued coin or a life filled with too much alloy, the same process always takes place. We need something in our lives which corresponds to alloy—something to hold life together, and this we get in such things as habit and routine. To be sure, and recreation. These are all things in themselves and necessary, but when they become an end in life instead of a means, life becomes very greatly depreciated in value.

Alloy is not for clipping, many of our habits and attitudes gradually become the undesirable aspects of our lives, until what is left is unable any longer to hold together.

Life can be depreciated as well as currency.

BEDSORES

Bedsores are caused by continuous pressure of parts of the body against the bedding. The parts bearing the brunt of the pressure are deprived of their normal circulation and necrosis (death of tissue) follows. Invariably the less resistant, open sores becomes infected. Elderly persons are very prone to develop bedsores, and often do in a surprisingly short time.

The home care of person afflicted with bedsores can be quite satisfactory if scientifically managed, but may be very disappointing without it. However, if the amateur nurse depressed by her apparent inability to cope with the problem should take solace in the thought that even the hospitals, because of overcrowding and extend under the most favorable conditions.

Treatment of bedsores should commence before the sores appear. In other words, the aged and bed-ridden should be anticipated and every effort made to prevent their development. The usual sites are the buttocks, elbows, shoulder blades and heels. These areas should be relieved of pressure frequently by turning the patient from side to side and from back to front. The face-down position is uncomfortable, although desirable, and bed patients usually complain about it.

A rubber, inflated ring is in some value if interposed between the pressure-bearing point and the bed. The extent of this value, however, can be easily over-estimated. The pressure must be borne at some point and the problem lies in whether the point involved is sustained by air, or sheets. A bedfast person often develop bedsores by lying endlessly on an air-inflated mattress.

Where possible, frequent change of position is desirable. The skin should be regularly petted with alcohol and dusted with talcum as a preventive measure. This should be followed by frequent application of powder, and use of sterile talcum. No ointment or other softening agent should be applied to the skin as a preventive measure. The bedclothes should be as light as possible, and the undersheet should be drawn taut at all times.

Bearing in mind the fact that bedsores develop because the areas are deprived of their normal nutrition by constant compression of the skin, it would seem to be common important to see to it that what blood does reach the affected area is adequately supplied with the nutritional elements most needed.

Experience has shown that Riboflavin is a remedy of great beneficial effect both in prevention and treatment of bedsores. Riboflavin is a component part of the vitamin B complex and may be obtained in the crude state or in combination with other factors. It is to be taken in full thera- Dille Co.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

SHADOWS

To most people a shadow is merely a shadow and nothing more. But a thinking observer, however, a shadow is something significant. I have been looking at one of my library windows and these shadows, cast by a golden maple tree which has shed its fallen Autumn leaves had left spaces where, the sun shone through causing the shadows cast to form a beautiful pattern upon the level floor.

It is a joy to manipulate my camera to get a picture of them and to do so, so long as no shadows are about. Before me is a palm, a great many years ago, near it is an etching of Whitman's shadow and there is one that smiles to both!

Wordsworth, whose "study" was in his home, but whose "library" was in the out-of-doors, it said to have been so absorbed that "the shadow of a daisy on a stone" did not escape notice for years. Many years ago I lived in a beautiful pent-house at Miami Beach, Florida, for winter months, and each night I went out on the sun porch to watch the shadows of the palms play upon the white walls of the building. They almost sang to me!

Nature would surround much, if not most of her work, not for shadows and reflections that are forever at play. What a picture a shadow of my library makes! The garden and note the shadows of the flowers and the ornamentalities in each instance of separate display. And how white are the shadows from snow-covered hills and other trees, upon the surface of a field of glistening snow. And what a picture are the distant shadows cast upon the hills at a series of hills or mountains.

Planted in my memory are the beautiful, blue shadows of the clouds that I noted upon the waters of Biscayne Bay, once my first plane journey from Miami to Havana. There was something magic about that tapestry of soft blue-gold in shadowy form.

It is a pleasure to get his contrasts without his shadows. In life we have our shadows in the form of disappointments and sorrows, but we should not appreciate our joys and our blessings. They balance our lives.

It strikes me that it's rather pitiful the care that we take to have to argue about what sort of weapons shall be used when war is started. What we want is a really united peace organization which can keep war from getting under way.

'Britain in Our World Today' Subject of Talk

Mrs. John F. Davidson, who will address the Women's Canadian Club on Thursday evening in St. Thomas' Anglican Church Parish House on the subject of "Britain in Our World Today," is a pleasing and fluent speaker, and widely known for her commentaries on world situations, elucidating that which is puzzling to many people.

Mrs. Davidson is a Latvian by birth received her education in Europe and in Britain, with whose changing history she is well acquainted, both as to the causes and the effects. In her address she will endeavor to explain the nature of the British experiment of the changed post-war world; a throw light on the historic reasons for Britain's changed roll in this present world, and to make an analysis, in the simplest manner and time of the much-talked-of devaluation of the pound sterling.

The Women's Canadian Club is fortunate in having Mrs. Davidson, as her series is crowded with a long waiting list. This marks her sixth visit to Belleville.

Following the lecture, coffee will be served, where Mrs. Davidson's old friends will be enabled to meet her.

Dame Irene Vanbrugh Dies in London After Short Illness

London, Nov. 30—(AP)—Dame Irene Vanbrugh, actress who was a dominating figure of the British theatre for more than 50 years, died today.

She had been ill only 36 hours and up to a few days ago was busy with preparations for the opening of a new play in London. She would have been 77 years old Friday.

Her stage career extended more than 61 years. She played hundreds of roles. In her youth she was described as one of Britain's greatest Shakespearean actresses but later modish comedy became her forte.

Within the last decade she made several movies and recently wrote a book, "To Tell My Story." Her husband, Dion Boucicault actor-producer, to whom she was married in 1901, died in 1929.

She was created a Dame Commoner of the Order of the British Empire in the New Year's honor list in 1941.

GIVEN CUSTODY OF CHILDREN

Los Angeles, Nov. 30, (AP)—Mrs. Florence Walton, Los Angeles, society matron, is deprived of full custody of her three sons after being accused of adultry with former film actor Tom Keene. Her husband, Delvy T. Walton, was awarded a contested divorce decree yesterday. Walton was awarded custody of the children, Craig, 14; John, 12, and Laurence, 10.

Good Neighbor Policy Cheers Homeless Family

That the "Good Neighbor Policy" functions in the smaller hamlets of Ontario, as well as in the large cities, has been fully proven by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur McCreary, of Bronk, northeast of Corbyville.

A little over a month ago, when the disastrous fire gutted the Bronk Cheese factory, their home, which was but 25 feet from the factory was totally destroyed with all their possessions, clothing and furniture. All that was left was the clothing they were wearing.

Here is where the "Good Neighbor" proved that "a friend in need, is a friend indeed." The homeless family were welcomed into their homes. For two weeks, Mr. and Mrs. McCreary were guests of Mr. Everett York. Since then, they have been living with Mr. Bert Grills, whose kindness has induced them to remain during the winter, and until they are again under their own roof.

Generous With Gifts

Mr. McCreary states that the good neighbors have been so kind, and so generous, with their gifts of food stuffs which included 150 jars of canned fruits and vegetables, bushels of apples, bags of potatoes, cabbages, one complete service of china dishes for ten; table linens, towels, pillowslips, and knowing that she had lost her beloved geraniums, had brought her three of these, which are now in bloom, that she is unable to express her deep appreciation for their great kindness.

Even from old neighbors in Medoc came material for aprons, and from friends and acquaintances in Eldorado, three pairs of curtains, quilts, towels and pyjamas for the family.

The cheese factory is now being rebuilt, and expects to reopen in the spring, with Mr. McCreary as the cheesemaker, and once again Mrs. McCreary hopes to be in her own home, cherishing as priceless, the gifts of the "Good Neighbors" who rallied to herself, her husband, and her family, in their dire distress.

Charming Shower Held by Co-hostesses Honors Bride-Elect

A charming miscellaneous shower was held last evening at the home of Mrs. Bob Munroe, 185 William Street, in honor of the bride-elect of this month, Miss Vivian Smith.

The tea table was delightfully appointed with its pink linen cloth, centred by a fluffy pink gem of an angel cake presented by Mrs. F. G. Wallridge, in honor of the occasion, tri-branched silver candelabra holding tall, pink candles graced either end, while from the chandelier above streamers of pink and white descended to the four corners, ending in pink bows.

The evening was spent in playing bingo, and in a general camaraderie, after which the prettily wrapped gifts were presented, accompanied by the good wishes for the bride-to-be's future happiness, for which Vivian graciously expressed her thanks.

Refreshments were later served by the co-hostesses, Mrs. Munroe and Miss Mary Kidd.

MARIO . . . in his distinctive feature about Food . . . What's Cooking?

By the author of "THE FACE IN THE ASPIC"

Progress doesn't always mean plenty. Take the case of spare ribs, for instance. In 1906, a Cincinnati packer, Shary, considered spare ribs so plentiful and of so little value that he regularly dumped them into the Ohio River.

There are many more mouths to feed today; our human population. And many people who can't afford the price of prime ribs of beef are willing to settle for spare ribs of pork. Perhaps the greatest reason for their popularity is their incomparable, succulent flavor.

The old adage—the closer the bone, the sweeter the meat—is true of spare ribs whether they are boiled with sauerkraut, browned with barbecue sauce or served with a sweet and sour sauce.

When you buy spare ribs, ask the butcher to chop them into serving pieces about 2 inches wide. For finest flavor simmer, don't boil, spare ribs. You can use either fresh or corned spare ribs in the following recipe, although the latter will require a longer cooking time and should be simmered in unsalted water.

Spare Ribs With Raisin Sauce.
Serves 4.

Wipe with a damp cloth 2 pounds sparerib. Cover with hot water in a saucepan. Add 2 teaspoons salt, 1 medium, size onion, 1 whole carrot, 1 stalk of celery and 1 bay leaf.

Bring liquid to a boil. Reduce flame and, simmer slowly until spare ribs are tender, about 1 1-4 hours.

Remove spare ribs from liquid. Sprinkle spare ribs lightly with brown sugar. Place under a medium broiler flame and brown on both sides.

In a saucepan melt 2 tablespoons fat. Add 2 tablespoons flour. Don't brown flour. Add 1 1-2 cups of liquid in which spare ribs were boiled. Add a bouillon cube if flavor is weak. Add 1-4 cup vinegar and 1-4 cup finely packed brown sugar. Add 1-4 cup raisins and salt and pepper to taste. Simmer sauce 5 minutes.

Pour sauce over spare ribs just before serving.

Do you want a particular recipe, or have you a cooking problem? Write Mario, care this paper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped, envelope for his reply.—Ed.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A Girl in too Much of a Hurry.

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I am a girl of 20 and have been going steady with a boy 23, but my mother broke it up because he and I were of different religious faiths.

Now I am going out with a man who is divorced, and he wants to keep steady company. On the other hand, I have been seeing a fellow who is married and has a child. I don't like to tell him not to call up because I don't want to hurt him. He says he isn't happily married.

Could you tell me what to do?
M.

Dear M:
It is not nearly so important whether or not you hurt this married man as it is that you protect yourself. I don't like to tell you not to trust him, because there is always the possibility that he may actually be unhappy in his marriage, but I do tell you that the only sensible thing for you to do is to stay away from all men who have wives and children. I hope you will have the good sense to tell him firmly that you don't want him to call you any more and make him know you mean it.

As for your situation in general, it strikes me that you are in too much of a hurry to "keep steady company." The fact that you can drop one man and take up with another so fast, shows that you really don't know yet what you want.

My advice to you is to go out with as many friends as possible, but be sure to pick out only the right kind—and give yourself a chance to know more about people before thinking of getting serious with anyone.

Sound Medical Advice May Help This Woman.

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I am married to a man I can't love, although I have prayed over it, and tried so hard. I am trying to live a Christian life and I think it would be a sin to leave him, but I almost get physically ill when I have to come in close contact with him. I don't want to hurt him, and I don't want to do wrong, so please advise me. Now, I am worrying , so it is ruining my health.
W. W.

Dear W. W.:
Perhaps this problem of yours is not quite so difficult as you think it is. There may be some things about your own feelings that you don't quite understand, and that a doctor, for instance, could explain to you so that you would not be so worried. At any rate, it would be well to try and find out if this is so, before making yourself miserable by thinking you are not really in love with your husband and that you want to leave him.

I suggest that you go to your own doctor and tell him exactly how you feel. He is not going to tell anybody what you say, but will, I am sure be very kind and sympathetic. Also, he will know better than anyone else how best to help you.

Won't you do this? It is quite possible that, if you do, you will find there is much happiness ahead for you in your marriage that you haven't yet realized.

AN ADDITION to the gay glitter of dressy evening clothes is the embroidered stocking. A hand-painted butterfly, sparkling with rhinestones, is perched just above the ankle in a beautiful new cocktail stocking. Another is decorated with tiny jet leaves.

Forty-ziral Watch that waistline!

When a woman starts to lose her youthful figure, it is amiable that ugly lines appear. If you find it a bit difficult to hyper your frock, take warning. Unless something is done, this time next year you will have to wear larger sizes. Catch face and figure defects when they are young. When they are established they will have you licked, bushed to the mast.

The term "middle-aged figure" just isn't fair, because there are many women who have reached the mid-channel period who have slender shapes, carry themselves beautifully. When we bear the term we visualize a woman with a shapeless torso, expanded waistline, a awkward, bulging shelf below it. The protruding abdomen is not always a collection of fat cells; often it is caused by sloppy posture, the wrong pose of the spinal column and a musculature that has lost tone, fallen into a state of dissolution.

The medical profession has given this disfiguring defect the name enteroptosis. Fifty per cent of the females of middle age have it, they claim, and that is no credit to them. Had these women had systematic, daily exercise through the years, had they been mindful of posture, so necessary to health, the fibers below the waistline would have remained strong and resilient.

An unattractive silhouette is not the only penalty a woman pays for letting herself get out of form. When the abdominal walls weaken, the stomach and intestines are dragged downward, may remain permanently out of formal position, a condition that interferes with the normal functioning of the digestive motors.

Regard for posture, making it a habit to keep the muscles of the lower part of the torso held in tightly, will often correct this condition, lessen the waist measurement, help one to carry one's stylish dress goods with flair and distinction.

If you are among the afflicted, hold yourself in as close to your spinal column as you can. In order to do this you must keep the backbone fully extended, chest lifted, arms and shoulders with an easy pose.

To be alert and energetic one must have a strong musculature. Notice the slow movements of the stoop-shouldered woman; they are not only slow but they are awkward. No ginger in the step. This type of woman tires easily because her body is out of balance. Fatigue brings circles under the eyes, turkey tracks around them.

Here is an easy exercise for figure remolding: lie flat on your back in bed, hands under the buttocks. Lift the legs slowly until you are fairly standing on the back of your neck, lower them slowly.

Fashion Flashes

NOVELTIES abound in Paris for models, both the little and the important furs. For country wear, one house showed a full-length coat of natural panther fur with huge shawl collar and enormous, muff-like cuffs of creamy badger.

THE CRISP RUSTLE of taffeta dominates the sound track at most afternoon events. Silk taffeta in emerald green is used for a beautiful dress, its extra full skirt with wide, unpressed pleats all around. The bodice, with rounded shoulder and neckline that turns up in points, is embroidered with big flowers in jet beads.

HARKING BACK to the 20's are many of the evening ensembles seen around town. With a sheath-type dress all-over embroidered in jet and bugle beads, one woman wore a little cap, a cloche of black felt with similar embroidery and carried a huge black fox muff.

NOT MANY wide brimmed hats are seen, even at important events, but those worn are dramatic. A wide brimmed hat is worn tilted to emphasize the curved brim which is softened by fronds of ombred ostrich in blue shaded through to mauve.

NEW THINGS for new umbrellas! A smart little folding umbrella in bright plaided fabric has a globe-shaped handle that opens up to reveal that it is a compact, complete even unto mirror. A little door holds the powder firm.

Makes Sense. . . To Use Printed Stickers on Christmas Card Envelopes

Dear Mrs. Beechman:
At last my husband and I have a home of our own. . . after his long war service, his starting in a new position after the war, and our search for a house we could afford! I'm so happy and so proud to have a "real address" that I had several packages of stickers printed with our name and address. This year my husband and I are planning to send quite a good many Christmas cards, with the hope of getting in touch with friends we haven't seen or perhaps haven't even heard from for some time, as well as keeping in touch with relatives and friends. Now I am wondering if it would be correct for me to use the printed stickers on the back of the envelopes of our Christmas cards. Is so many cases I am unsertain about the present addresses, and also there is the printed information about our new address. But perhaps it would be more correct for me to write the name and address, rather than using the stickers. So, Mrs. Beechman. . .which?
Frances L.

Use your "proud new" printed stickers. . . this is proper, and much more practical than writing your name and new address. Christmas is a busy season for everyone. . . and certainly post office attendants . . and so every sensible short-cut to definiteness and clarity is welcome! Everyone to whom you send the cards will be informed of your new address. . . or, if not located, the post office has the printed information by which the cards will be returned to you. (Be sure to use first-class postage!)

All Ushers Should Be In Processional, Recessional

Dear Mrs. Beechman:
In my wedding party there are to be the maid of honor and best man, four ushers, two bridesmaids, a flower girl and a ring bearer. Of the four ushers, two will be with bridesmaids and two will escort the guests to their seats in the church. What is the order for the processional? Should the two ushers who do not have bridesmaids be in the processional?
M. R.

In general there are two kinds of engagement parties. One is the party given by the girl's parents, at which the engagement is announced. When invited to this kind of party the guests are not told the reason-for-the-party, and therefore would not, of course, bring engagement presents. The other kind is given to celebrate the engagement, given at any time after the engagement has been announced, and given by anyone who wishes to plan this delightful gathering.

There isn't much to-do about giving engagement presents. . . oftener than not they are not given, except by a close relative or a godparents or an intimate friend. An engagement present, unlike a wedding present, should be something personal for the engaged girl, perhaps some item for her trousseau.

SEVEN CONVICTIONS

St. Catharines, Nov. 30. But he will serve not more than three years in prison because the sentences on the seven charges run concurrently.

Slippery Roads Cause Accidents In Trenton

Trenton, Nov. 30 (Special) — A freak accident and an accident involving a family of United States visitors marred a quiet weekend although streets and sidewalks were made icy by a thawing and freezing condition.

A truck owned and operated by Maurice Jeffery, 53 Cedar Street, Trenton, collided with a car driven by Thomas Germack of 1073 E 178 Street Cleveland Ohio, and carrying Blanche Varsek, Anna Varsek, Josephine Varsek all of 6201 St. Clare Ave., Cleveland, when both vehicles were proceeding under the C.N.R. subway bridge on North Front Street.

Mrs. Blanche Varsek suffered a minor cut on the forehead when her head struck the dash of 1073 car on impact, but the others escaped with a shaking.

Both vehicles were damaged considerably, the car however, worse than the truck.

Taxi and Three Cars

Eugene McMasters of Trenton, was the driver of a taxi that went out of control and crashed three cars before ending up smashing another.

When McMaster applied his brakes in an attempt to avert hitting a tow rope across the roadway on north Front Street his vehicle went out of control on the slippery pavement spinning around many times while crashing three cars parked in front of a terrace on the east side of the road. The fifth car involved in the crash was hit as the McMaster vehicle came to an abrupt halt at the end of its swift careening drive. The sixth car standing on the west side of the road and the vehicle that was being used as a tow car escaped without damage although the other five all carried scars of the unusual accident.

Says 'Conscience Not to be Trusted

Toronto, Nov. 30 — (CP) — Don't let conscience be your guide — it's highly unreliable— Maj-Gen. Brock Chisholm, 53-year-old Director - General of the World Health Organization, said Monday night.

To an audience of more than 700, Dr. Chisholm said:

"More has been written and said about conscience that is untrue than about any other subject except possibly sex. It is not the still small voice which always tells the truth."

He said mankind would commit racial suicide unless enough people could gain the psychological insight to realize that this is an entirely new world and adjust themselves to it — to look at mankind objectively and think for themselves.

"Conscience," he said, "is not to be trusted at all. It is only a repetition of what you were told before/you were six or eight years old . . . we must use our own brains to think with."

U. S. EXECUTIVE "LOST" IN HUNGARY

A vice-president of the International Telephone and Telegraph Co., Robert A. Vogeler, 38, is reported under arrest by Hungarian police. The State Department has demanded "a thorough investigation" by Hungary into Vogeler's disappearance. — Central Press Canadian.

Liberal Member Pays Tribute to Work of Neighbors

Ottawa, Nov. 30. — (CP) — George Fulford (L-Leeds) Tuesday paid tribute in the Commons to the "co-operation and courage" of those who joined in the fight against last Saturday's $1,000,000 fire in Brockville.

Rising on a question of privilege, Mr. Fulford said it was the generous assistance of people in Eastern Ontario and New York State that helped confine to one city block a blaze which might have destroyed the whole business section.

Co-operation and courage of this kind keeps alive faith in human nature," he said. The help which came from Ogdensburg and other nearby parts of New York State illustrated that the will "to love thy neighbor knows no boundaries in North America."

Mr. Fulford told the House how the fire-blazed out of hand despite "heroic efforts" by the Brockville department.

An urgent appeal brought army firefighting equipment with the Royal Canadian Regiment. Then came the departments from Prescott, Addington and Smiths Falls. Special equipment was brought by firefighters from Ogdensburg, across the St. Lawrence River.

Women Supplied Coffee

Members of the Navy and Air Force also pitched in while young Brockville women organized to supply coffee to the firefighters all through the freezing night.

Appeals were made Sunday in the pulpits for aid for the 100 persons made homeless and the tremendous amount of clothing and other garments necessitated three moves to larger / storage buildings.

By late Sunday $2,500 had come in from Brockville and nearby districts. That figure was $6,000 at last reports.

One farmer arrived with several dozen eggs which he contributed. Then he turned his wallet upside down and gave everything he had in it to the Assistance Fund.

Mr. Fulford said he wanted to record the generosity of the people. He also thanked the government for giving immediate attention to the suggestion that army huts be made available for people who lost their homes.

Scouts Not to Blame For Carelessness

Local Boy Scouts are being blamed for carelessness for which they are not responsible, according to Boy Scout leaders in the city.

Last Thursday evening a motorist was driving past the Kiwanis Centre building on Dundas Street when two small boys in a game of tag ran carelessly into the street and narrowly escaped being run over. Fortunately the one lad who ran into the side of the car was uninjured.

The motorist later said the boys were Scouts or Cubs who had ran onto the street following a scout meeting, but this was denied today by local Scout officials.

Neither Scouts nor Cubs, it seems, meet on Thursday evening, the former meeting on Tuesday and the latter on Friday evenings.

Irish News Letter:

Cistercians Repeat Successes Under 20th-Century Conditions

By MICHAEL O'MARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Dublin, Nov. 29 (CP)— About 160 Irish, English and Scottish monks, priests and lay brothers, working and living in the brooding Knocknealdown Mountains of County Waterford, are showing that Cistercians—the great farmers of the middle ages—can repeat their ancient successes under 20th century conditions.

Inside the monastery on Mount Mellerary, the gates of which are closed to women, six-inch, block letter signs demand "silence."

Talk is taboo here.

Outside the gates, where the monks cultivate a 1,000-acre farm only the roar of giant tractor-driven reapers is heard.

About a century ago, a group of pioneer monks, whose graves lie near the fine new monastery church, came to this barren place to start the farm.

With picks and crow-bars they pried from the hills great chunks of limestone to build their home. With peat power and hard labor they set about cultivating their land.

Second to None

Now, expert agriculturists say, they have built up an establishment second to none among hill farms in the British Isles.

Its surplus produce finds a ready market because of its high quality and low price, while increasing mechanization is yearly boosting the farm's output. Grain and dairy produce are its staple products.

The brothers lead austere lives. Their 17-hour day starts at 3 a.m. winter and summer. Their diet is vegetarian. They must not speak without express permission, must read no newspapers and hear no radio.

Devaluation Prophecy

Michael Carroll, 66, walked into a Dublin bank manager's office a month before sterling devaluation was announced and asked for a loan of £1 ($3.10).

The manager said "I don't know you."

Carroll replied "I don't know you either but give me a pound and I will give you 10 shillings for it next month, because it is going to be devalued."

He was given 56 days in jail for using abusive and obscene language when the manager refused.

When he had served 28 days of his sentence the devaluation announcement came.

Mr. Justice Shannon, apparently feeling Carroll's prophecy had been vindicated, remitted the other 28 days.

N.Z. Labor Govt. Wins First Round With Maori Seats

By J. C. GRAHAM

(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Auckland, N.Z., Nov. 30 (CP)—The Labor Government today won the first round of New Zealand's general election, retaining all four Maori seats in the House of Representatives by substantial margins.

Sixth 1943 the Maoris, who vote a day ahead of persons of European descent, have supported Labor.

Tuesday's voting showed little change from previous years and gave little guide to the outcome of today's main election, when the 70 other electoral districts vote.

The Labor Government in power since 1935, is opposed by the National party which has campaigned on a free enterprise platform.

A nip-and-tuck battle is expected. After having its representation in the House of Representatives cut to 19 in the 1935 election, the National party crept back to a point where the 80 seats were shared almost evenly in the last election three years ago.

Side issues of the campaign have been largely subservient to a major tussle between socialism and private enterprise. The Labor party has plunged a "security for all" program while the National party has promised to reduce government controls and restore incentives.

Prime Minister Peter Fraser and Opposition leader S. G. Holland both expressed optimism as the campaign drew to a close.

$30,000 BLAZE IN HAMILTON, ONT.

A $30,000 two-alarm fire swept through the two top floors of a three-storey industrial building in downtown Hamilton, Ont., late Saturday, destroying thousands of dollars worth of Christmas store displays and decorations being made for the holiday season. The blaze slightly delayed a wedding while the minister ran to turn in an alarm. Firemen poured tons of water into the blaze before it was brought under control.—Central Press Canadian.

Lear Urges Break By All Leagues From C.R.U.

By AL VICKERY

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, Nov. 30 (CP) — Coach Les Lear of Calgary Stampeders Tuesday advocated a complete break by all leagues from the Canadian Rugby Union, and added that such a break "is in the wind."

Passing through Winnipeg with the Stampeders on their way home from the Grey Cup final in Toronto, Lear said "football is going ahead while the C.R.U. stands still."

"The union and its constitution are about th same as when the union was first formed. If we're going to get anywhere, we've got to have a new set-up."

Lear said football is "big business" now, and should be carried on in a "big-time" manner.

"As it stands, there are a number of dead-wood unions which have been out of action for some time. They still have representatives who carry votes at the C.R.U. meetings," said Lear, only Canadian to make good as a player in United States professional leagues.

"This just wouldn't be a good thing for the West, but for the whole of Canada . and some of the leagues ' the east already are planning a break."

Due to his short stay and the swarming crowd of more than 1,500 person who jammed the station to welcome Stampeders spoke their only defeat by Montreal Alouettes in the Grey Cup final, Lear wasn't able to give any details of what new set-up is planned.

TWEED W. Hurst Heads C. of C. for 1950

Tweed (Special) — W. N. Hurst was re-elected President of Tweed Chamber of Commerce for 1950 at a meeting of the directors held in the council chamber. Mr. Hurst's name was the only one submitted for the presidency.

Robert Hunter was unanimously elected vice president and other officers are:

Secretary— S. R. Carry, and treasurer, Mr. J. A. Thompson. The latter in the recently - appointed manager of the Bank of Montreal in Tweed.

The financial year of the Chamber of Commerce will be from Jan. 31st to Dec. 31st of each year and invoices will be mailed covering the 1950 fees of $10.00 at an early date.

New committees chairmen named were: Retail Merchants, Ray Quinn; Industrial, Wallace Johnston; tourist and publicity, Ken Burke; agricultural, Dr. W. A. Paul, and agricultural, T. C. Graham; program committee, Bob Hunter, Ken Burkitt, S. R. Carry and W. N. Hurst.

Store Hours Discussed

Some discussion took place on the holidays to be observed during the Christmas season and the lengths that stores are to remain open. Ray Quinn, chairman of the Retail Merchants, was instructed to get the feeling of the merchants and report back to a later meeting when public city will be given to the store hours to be observed in Tweed.

The Santa Claus parade was also discussed at some length and it was decided to hold the parade on Saturday December 17th, and from all indications the parade will be even better than those held previously. One change was made in the route of the parade; it will proceed to Dion's service station corner where the candies will be distributed to the children this year. It was felt that the floats and band should proceed all the way up Victoria Street rather than halt at the Bank of Montreal corner.

An effort will be made to secure the Kinsmen Boys' Band of Belleville and other special attractions for the big day. Prizes will be given for the children in costume. There will be the usual free movies at the theatre.

Committees for the Santa Claus parade have been named as follows: finance, Percy Jordan (chairman), Max Bush, Tracey Quinn, Ray Quinn and Chas. Cassidy; purchase committee — (treats for children), J. A. Thompson (chairman), W. N. Hurst, Percy Jordan and S. R. Curry; float committee, Wilfred LeSage (chairman), T. C. Graham, Wallace Johnston and Ambrose Trudeau; candy committee, T. E. Moffat (chairman), Bob Hunter, Ken Burkett, Reeve S. A. McCarry; parade and costumes, T. E. Moffatt (chairman), Wesley Hamilton, Anthony Hunter, S. H. Connor, Carl House, John Burns, Reeve S A. McCarry. More details concerning the parade will be outlined later.

Instead, the child's mother allegedly went into the bedroom, seized the child by the throat and choked her to death.

Brain Hemorrhage Takes Girl's Life

Tweed, Nov. 29. (Special.) —A brain hemorrhage took the life of little Noreen Jones, of this village, early today following a sudden illness after she had finished her supper last night.

The child who would have been 13 years old, in a few days, was apparently in good health when she returned home from school yesterday and seemed herself at the supper table with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Jones, of this village.

She told her mother on leaving the table that she was going to do her homework. Minutes later the little girl, who is an only child, was stricken and suffered a convulsion. Dr. F. J. McCue was called and rushed the child to the Belleville General Hospital, where she died at two o'clock this morning, despite the efforts of Dr. C. H. Stobie and others to save her.

A type of cerebral hemorrhage it was determined that the young girl died from a sub-arachnoid hemorrhage which is caused by a weak blood vessel rupturing in the brain and is not an uncommon weakness among children according to Dr. Stobie.

11 Men Arrested Sleeping in Heated Coaches

Toronto, Nov. 30 (CP)—Eleven unemployed transients from Northern Ontario, New Brunswick and Quebec were charged with trespassing Monday night as police said increasing numbers of jobless men are coming to the city without funds and no place to sleep.

The men were arrested sleeping in heated railway coaches in railway yards.

Police said all downtown hostels are filled and transients, who used to sleep in freight cars, now pick heated coaches because of the weather.

Unknown Man Is Found Dead In 'Hoboes' Nest'

Toronto, Nov. 30 (CP) — Police were attempting Tues., to identify an elderly man found dead Monday night in a "hoboes nest" near here.

Papers on the body bore the name William Alex McGibbon and a Toronto address. Residents at the house said the man was unknown to them.

Police said the man was apparently a transient who died of exposure in the hollowed-out "nest" under the bridge during freezing temperatures during the weekend.

Strike Decision Delayed by Lewis

(By HAROLD W. WARD)

New York, Nov. 30 —(AP) — John L. Lewis Monday baffled his own policy committee by delaying a decision on whether a new coal strike would be called in the United States Wednesday at midnight.

The 200-man United Mine Workers (ind.) policy group was assembled here Monday afternoon by Lewis — but he mysteriously stayed away. Word finally came that the start of policy sessions on the end of the present three-week truce would be delayed until late today.

Lewis' absence was regarded by operators as an indication that he was exploring every possible opening in their ranks.

Their chief spokesman, George H. Love of the Pittsburgh Consolidated Coal Company, and Joseph E. Moody of the Southern Coal Producers Association, were reported opposed to any break in their opposition to increasing labor costs.

Lewis has not said exactly what he wants in a new contract, but he told the operators his demands would cost them up to 30 or 35 cents a ton. He said they could absorb that out of profits.

The deadline for the present strike truce expired Wednesday at midnight.

Unless Lewis tells them to stay on the job, 380,000 soft-coal miners east of the Mississippi River are due to walk out again Thursday.

The truce, called Nov. 9, interrupted a strike after 52 days.

Lewis must think hard before he calls for resumption of that strike, because President Truman has announced he will use the Taft-Hartley Act if an emergency develops. The act provides for an 80-day court injunction against a work stoppage.

Russian Army Paper Confirms Fire in Mine

Berlin, Nov. 30 — (AP)—The Russian army newspaper Tregliche Uschchau confirmed Tues. that a fire occurred at an eastern-zone uranium mine but says the casualties were slight — only 19 cases of light smoke-poisoning.

The British-licensed Telegraf said Monday 2,000 miners died in a mine fire in the Ore Mountains of Western Saxony. It said the blaze broke out last Thursday.

Tregliche Rundschau said the first of the east berlin press to mention the fire. It says: "A red rat Johannggeorgenstadt and was caused by a short circuit.

The British-licensed paper had reported the blaze broke out at the Johanngeorgenstadt and spread to two more mines and set off a dynamite dump.

In its morning edition Tues. the British Telegraf charged that wholesale-arrests or German officials at the mine were being made by the Russians.

It said some 40 German engineers, chiefs and foremen have been seized by Soviet police.

The Johanngeorgenstadt workings are run by a Soviet-controlled company.

Racial Issue Looms Anew In Dresden

Dresden, Ont., Nov. 30—(CP)—The racial issue that some months ago split this southwestern Ontario town, burial place of the Negro Uncle Tom who inspired Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin," looms anew in the municipal election campaign.

At a nomination meeting Monday night in a packed town hall, Percy Carter, Negro, was one of 21 candidates for council.

Council already has decided to hold a plebiscite during the election on whether the people want a licensing bylaw to prohibit restaurants from refusing to serve other than whites. It was the action of a couple of restaurants in barring Negroes that caused a furore earlier this year.

Addressing briefly an audience that did no heckling, Mr. Carter said: "Nobody in this hall can be blamed for racial discrimination till he's been here for a long time."

Renominated for the mayoralty, Mayor Walley S. Wesse said: "I am not against racial discrimination, but the answer to this question must come from the soul of man. The process may be slow, but it may be sure."

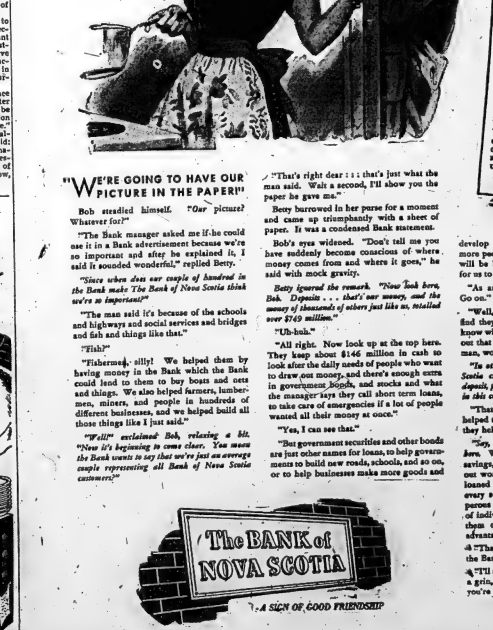
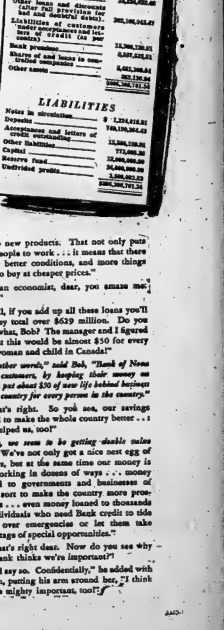
The Story of Bob and Betty and the...





"WE'RE GOING TO HAVE OUR PICTURE IN THE PAPER!"

Bob steadied himself. "Our picture? Whatever for?"

"The Bank manager asked me if he could use it in a Bank advertisement because we're so important and after he explained it, I said it sounded wonderful," replied Betty.

"Since when does our couple of hundred in the Bank make The Bank of Nova Scotia think we're so important?"

"The man said it's because of the schools and highways and social services and bridges and fish and things like that."

"Fish?"

"Fishermen, silly! We helped them by having money in the Bank which the Bank could lend to them to buy boats and nets and things. We also helped farmers, lumbermen, miners, and people in hundreds of different businesses, and we helped build all those things like I just said."

"P'ff!!" exclaimed Bob, relaxing a bit. "Now it's beginning to come clear. You mean the Bank wants to say that we're just an average couple representing all Bank of Nova Scotia customers!"

"That's right dear : : : that's just what the man said. Wait a second, I'll show you the paper she gave me."

Betty burrowed in her purse for a moment and came up triumphantly with a sheet of paper. It was a condensed Bank statement.

Bob's eyes widened. "Don't tell me you have suddenly become conscious of where money comes from and where it goes," he said with mock gravity.

Betty ignored the remark. "Now look here, Bob. Deposits . . . that's our money, and the money of thousands of others just like us, totalled over $749 million."

"Uh-huh."

"All right. Now look up at the top here. They keep about $146 million in cash to look after the cash needs of people who want to draw out money, and there's enough extra in government bonds, and stocks and what the manager says they call short term loans, to take care of emergencies if a lot of people wanted all their money at once."

"Yes, I can see that."

"But government securities and other bonds are just other names for loans, to help governments to build our roads, schools, and so on, or to help businesses make more goods and develop new products. That not only puts more people to work . . . it means that there will be better conditions, and more things for us to buy at cheaper prices."

"As an economist, dear, you amaze me. Go on."

"Well, if you add up all these loans you'll find they total over $529 million. Do you know what, Bob? The manager and I figured out that this would be almost $50 for every man, woman and child in Canada!"

"It's utter awards," said Bob, "Bank of Nova Scotia customers, by keeping their money on deposit, put about $50 of new life behind business in this country for every person in the country."

"That's right. So you see, our savings helped to make the whole country better . . . they helped us, too!"

"Say, we seem to be getting double value here. We've not only got a nice neat egg of savings, but at the same time our money is out working in dozens of ways . . . money loaned to governments and businesses of every sort to make the country more prosperous . . . even money loaned to thousands of individuals who need Bank credit to tide them over emergencies or let them take advantage of special opportunities."

"That's right dear. Now do you see why the Bank thinks we're important?"

"I'll say so. Confidentially," he added with a grin, putting his arm around her, "I think you're mighty important, too!"

What Chance Has Shakespeare?

Oldsters and Youngsters Alike Like Their Reading Material Spicy and Sporty

Bill Shakespeare, Alf. Tennyson, and the rest of the boys who wrote the better class of literature and poetry, haven't got a chance in these days of hopped-up reading material.

Ask the average chap on the street who Desdemona, Portia, The Lady of the Lake, Anne of Green Gables, or any other hero or heroine of the better class books are and he'll lift quizzical eyebrows.

But tempt him with a quiz on "Luscious Lupe" currently starring in the flesh-pot town called "The Passion Pits of Poduck Corners" and his face will light up like that of a chorine who has bilked the newest sugar daddy for a diamond tiara.

According to a survey of the city shops who purvey magazines, and pocket-book editions of nearly everything in the literary field, there has been a definite trend towards sexy stuff jammed between lurid covers picturing near-nude modern hours in various poses.

Sudden Popularity

The influx of these flesh-pot fantasies during the past two years, has bordered on the sensational. It started with one or two books that nudged the edge of decency, but which got past the censorial eyes, and so great was the reception and subsequent royalties, that now anyone who can put passion on pulp is definitely assured of cakes and ale for some time to come.

One dealer stated that 70 per cent of his sales of small pocket book editions, are those of this type.

And the sales are not confined to a certain class of people.

The bold type will stride into a store and loudly demand "Any new in, Joe?" Another type will glance furtively around the shop, make a quick grab at the latest concoction of type depicting the "Life and Loves of Passionate Pansy", show it quickly to the clerk, deposit a quarter on the counter and make a hurried exit. Other Types

But there are other types of magazines that have good sales too.

The glaring pictorial tomes that depict the newest stage and screen sensations in all forms of dress and undress, and those devoted to the poses and personnel of nudist colonies have a strange attraction for the boys on the sunny side of sixty.

These have been dubbed the "A and G" books. Meaning "attic and garage" for these places usually constitute the "library" for the gray-thatched laddies with young ideas, who have home-life attachments.

But not all the three-score and ten gentlemen lean to this type of literature. A number of them are attracted by sports mags and digests, others have a tendency for the "confession" type, while yet others believe it or not" have a distinct yen for "Tarzan" "Steve Canyon", "Major Hoople" "Blondie" and other well-known funnies characters.

Likes Comics

There is an elderly gentleman this writer knows who as regularly as Saturday night rolls around, goes to his favorite tobacco shop, deposits four dollars on the counter and takes home the value in comics books. It is his idea of a well-spent Sunday to delve into the adventures and heart-breaks of his favorite "funny" heroes and heroines.

The teen-age troops have a decided leaning toward "True Confessions" or any other type of confession magazine. Westerns like "Buck McGinty Rides Again," have a good following. "Whodunit" too, get a good sale from those who like mystery stories, garnished with a little bloodletting and gangsterism.

But over all hangs attraction of the sexy stuff. One "thriller" sold as many as 350 copies out of one city store. Others report high sales.

Taboo in Quebec

Visitors from Quebec grab the love-and-leave-'em books with avidity. One Quebecois bought fifteen of the lurid-covered books to enjoy on his vacation, and to take back to his down-east home. For this sort of literature is taboo in the Province of Quebec, stories of flaming love and what-Down there you can't get the stories of flaming love and what-not for love nor money, unless you get it under the counter.

It seems the mayors or chief magistrates of Quebec communities are one-man censor boards, and Hizzoner can put the "finger" on any kind of literature he deems objectionable.

But in Ontario, the sexy slush is having a field day in sales, in fact, right in this city small exchange clubs have sprung up. Through the medium of the club, the boys and girls exchange books so that no edition will be missed. It's easier on the pocketbook, too.

Few to Benefit From Govt. Grants

Saint John, N.B., Nov. 30 (CP) —The Canadian Federation of Mayor and Municipalities has concluded that only 10 or 12 municipalities will benefit from the Federal plan for municipal grants in lieu of taxation on federal properties, Mayor E. W. Patterson said Tuesday.

He said a committee has been appointed to devise a formula which would contain equity and fairness for all municipalities in Canada."

"The formula is based on services rendered to federally-owned property," the mayor said, "and it was the opinion (of the executive) these services should be paid for by federal authorities."

Proposals made in the formula will not be made public until a five man delegation meets Prime Minister St. Laurent and Finance Minister Abbott "at the earliest possible date."

Two Small Tugs Reach Harbor

Thornbury, Nov. 30 (CP) — Two small tugs with six men aboard, for whose safety fear had been felt when they were unreported, slipped quietly into the Grey County port 28 miles east of Owen Sound Tuesday night.

The Gary M., skippered by Capt. W. H. Oldfield, 55, and The Shepherd, piloted by Irwin Neary, 30, had been objects of an intensive search after they were reported to have left their fishing grounds at Double Island near Point Au Baril Sunday.

Wheatley said that ice froze the tugs in and they were unable to get away from Double Island until Tuesday morning.

Provincial police flew Tuesday in a seaplane to Point Au Baril, 70 miles north of Owen Sound, and were told the men had resumed their homeward trip.

IT WAS THE OLD ADDRESS

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 30. — (AP)— When a jealous husband found a man's billfold in his car here, he immediately drove to the address shown on an identification card in the wallet.

He rang the bell and when a man answered, the angry husband gave him a sound thrashing and a stern warning.

Monday the husband was fined and given a suspended 30-day jail sentence—the owner of the billfold had moved from the address on his identification card.

Employment in Canada Reaches All-Time High

Ottawa, Nov. 30 — (CP)—Employment in Canada has reached an all - time high, says government economists, but the number of jobless is steadily increasing.

In fact, unemployment so far this year is higher than at any time in the last two years.

The answer to this "apparent paradox," say the economists in the government's economic statistical review for November, lies in the fact that the country's labor force is growing faster than the rate of employment.

Thus, a government survey conducted last August shows a total labor force of 5,253,000 persons — an increase of 144,000 over the total for the previous year.

Those with jobs totalled 5,- 155,000 — an increase of only 113,000.

"Throughout the current year," says the Review published Tuesday, "the number of unemployed persons, the number of days of unemployment and the dollar total of benefits paid under the Unemployment Insurance Act have all been higher each month than in the same month of the previous two years."

Few Looking for Jobs

The Review estimates that the number looking for jobs last August totalled about 98,000, which represented only about 1.9 per cent of the total estimated civilian labor force.

"In this connection," it adds, "it might be mentioned that the United States unemployed have been currently running at about six per cent of that country's civilian labor force."

However, the increase of labor availability over employment possibilities appears to present a problem.

For example, the number who filed unemployment insurance claims during December reached a total of 59,080, compared with only 33,038 in September, 1948.

Unemployment insurance benefits paid out in December, 1948, tallied $3,671,773, compared with $1,694,139 in 1948 and $1,512,096 in 1947.

No Alarm Needed

Toronto, Nov. 30 — (CP) — National Employment Service officials here said Tuesday unemployment is up slightly in Ontario but "is nothing to be alarmed about and we do not anticipate any period of great unemployment."

As of Nov. 18, there were 16,- 924 more persons in Ontario looking for jobs than at the same time last year, and 6,532 fewer jobs open. There were 34,518 unplaced applicants for Jobs Nov. 18, 1948, compared with 51,222 last Nov. 19.

HUNT FOR MEN WHO HELD U2 COPS AND TOOK REVOLVERS

Winnipeg, Nov. 29 (CP)— Police today are searching the area surrounding the Canadian Pacific Railway yards in northcentral Winnipeg for three men who earlier held up two cruiser car constables and stole their revolvers. First reports said the constables were about to apprehend three men tampering with a truck when they were confronted by at least one armed man. One of the three men then allegedly disarmed the officers.

Penicillin Will Be Allowed Free Entry Into Canada

Ottawa, Nov. 30 (CP)— Penicillin S-R, a highly refined type of the healing drug, will be allowed to be imported into Canada duty free under a decision rendered by the Tariff Board Tuesday.

The decision was brought down on an appeal by Parke, Davis and Company, Limited, of Walkerville, Ont., from a ruling of the Department of National Revenue. The appeal, asking for a change in classification of penicillin S-R, was allowed in a majority decision of the three members board.

Penicillin S-R—A salt resulting from the action of procaine on the original penicillin and further refined by other chemical actions—has been imported into Canada under a classification charging a 7½ per cent tariff. Under the new classification allowed by the board, it will be duty free.

The spokesman said that one result of the ruling would be to leave Canadian manufacturers of penicillin S-R without tariff protection. It now is produced by two Canadian firms, Merck and Company and Ayerst, Harris and McKenna.

PLENTY OF LEAD TO KILL DEER

Toronto, Nov. 29 — (CP)—Police fired often and drew lots of blood Monday but failed to halt the flight of a hefty steer after it cleared a stockyard fence in Toronto's west-end. The animal led police, stockyard employees and citizens on a mile chase through streets, open fields and back yards. Police said they fired 16 shots. The steer finally was cornered and toppled by a single shot from a high-powered carbine.

FOOD PRICES LOWERED

St. John's, Nfld. (CP)—Traders here report that merchants in Newfoundland's south-coast outports are by-passing St. John's wholesalers and sending schooners to Halifax for merchandise. In this way they avoid the handling charges on goods passing through St. John's.

HARDLY WORTH IT

Reading, England (CP)—A railroad detective came 400 miles from Dundee to give evidence in a one-minute case here. The defendant was fined £2 ($8.20) for altering a ticket.

FIND OLD SHILLING

Tyvid St. Mary, Sambridgehire, England (CP)—A 1548 shilling coined in the reign of Edward VI was churned up by a plow here. It has been presented to Wisbech Museum.

MURDER OF AGED OSHAWA COUPLE REMAINS MYSTERY

Trail Three Days Old When Bodies Found

Oshawa, Nov. 30. (CP)—Police today were faced with a difficult task in their search for the slayers of Mr. and Mrs. Nick Katerynych, elderly Ukrainian couple from Saskatchewan who were beaten to death in their home here late Saturday night.

The trail was three days old when the slayings were discovered Tuesday after a neighbor, alarmed at the couple's absence, finally broke down the door to find the bodies.

Katerynych, 81-year-old ex-farmer from Canora, Sask., was found on the kitchen floor in a pool of blood. His ailing 77-year-old wife Helen was found between her bedroom and the bathroom. The death weapon is believed to have been a hammer or a wooden club, but it has not yet been found.

Neighbors said the couple had on two previous occasions reported prowlers around the house. On a third occasion, last Thursday, a motorcar with two or three men in it parked outside the home and the men peered over the fence before driving away.

But police found the brutality of the crime inconsistent with the robbery motive. They thought the killers may have been known to the aged couple, and that the killers were at great pains to make sure their victims would never identify them.

Slayers Disappointed

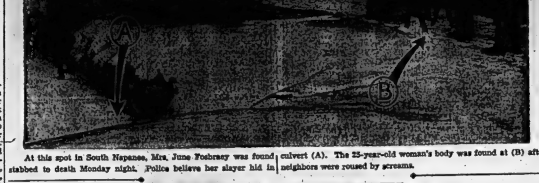
If robbery was the motive, the slayers were probably disappointed. Katerynych invested some of his savings in real estate and his ready cash was safely in the bank. On Saturday he had borrowed $20 from Louis Dobansky, their 62-year-old tenant, who said he gave the money to Katerynych and told him he could take it off Dobansky's rent bill.

Just a week ago Katerynych had given $200 to the Greek Orthodox Church near his home. Neighbors all said they doubted that he kept much cash on hand.

But the slayers ransacked all drawers and cupboards in the little house.

Police believed the slayers — they are convinced there was more than one — were well acquainted with the habits of the aged couple.

Mrs. Michael Shody, closest friend of the slain couple, discovered the bodies.



At this spot in South Nepanee, Mrs. June Fosbraey was found stabbed to death Monday night. Police believe her slayer hid in culvert (A). The 25-year-old woman's body was found at (B) after neighbors were roused by screams.

Blarney Stone Kiss Said Germ-Carrier

San Francisco, Nov. 30 (AP)—City Health Director J. C. Geiger asserted that it's not sanitary to kiss the blarney stone, and has stirred up a bit of a tempest.

Dr. Geiger took note of the layers of germs which must have been planted on the stone over the centuries and the sponsors got their Irish up.

"This sacred stone has been kissed ever since the year 1600 with no noticeable effect save the eloquence it gave," said Con Lynch, president of the United Irish societies.

Dr. Geiger thereupon passed a sterile swab over the face of the stone to determine the calibre of germs thereupon. The findings will be made known later.

READY TO PLACE RENT CONTROLS "ON TRIAL"

Govt. Wants to Know If Regulations Ultra Vires in Whole or Part

Ottawa, Nov. 30, (CP)— First step towards placing federal rent controls "on trial" will be taken tomorrow.

F. P. Varcoe, deputy minister of justice, will confers with Chief Justice Thibaudeau Rinfret of the Supreme Court of Canada to discuss a date for testing the validity of federal rental regulations.

Mr. Varcoe will put this question before the chief justice:

"Are the Wartime Leasehold Regulations ultra vires either in whole or in part, and if so, in what particulars or to what extent?"

Though that question the government will seek a ruling on whether rental controls are within its jurisdiction of parliament.

Immediately after the conference, the chief justice will announce a date for the hearing and word will be sent to provincial attorneys-general.

The provinces will be invited to present argument at the hearing which likely will not take place until the next session of the court in February.

The federal government is asking for a ruling merely on the rent "regulations" and not on the act governing those regulations. Justice Minister Garson, explaining this procedure in the Commons, said he believed that if the court rules against the regulations, it will not necessarily be ruling against the act governing rent controls. Rental regulations are embodied in the Emergency Transitional Powers Act.

CHUNGKING FALLS WITHOUT FIGHT TO COMMUNISTS

Nationalists Begin To Leave Chengtu

Hong Kong, Nov. 30. (Reuters) —Chungking, third Chinese Nationalist capital, fell without a fight to the Communists today, according to Nationalist officials who arrived here by air.

Communications by telephone and telegraph between Hong Kong and Chungking had been cut since Tuesday night.

The officials said the Nationalists now had begun the evacuation of Chengtu, 200 miles northwest of Chungking, which has been their fourth "temporary capital" for the last few days.

The officials travelled in a specially-chartered plane from Chengtu. They said members of the government and other officials were preparing to leave, mostly for Formosa.

Chungking was the third capital the Nationalists have had in the 12-month communist sweep from Manchuria, in the north, to the south coast of China.

The others were Nanking, which fell April 23, and Canton, which was taken by the Reds Oct. 14.

A busy city of 1,900,000, Chungking is the capital of Szechwan Province and about 400 miles from the borders of Tibet, Burma and French Indo-China, which lie on an arc to the west and southwest.

Chungking refugees who arrived here earlier described panic and looting in the city.

They said guns were firing on all sides when they left as communist spearheads thrust into the outer suburbs and the main forces massed four miles away on the south side of the Yangtze River.

Odd Shipments by Mail: Skunk Skins, Queen Bees And Workers Among Them

Now that everybody is thinking about Christmas mail in one way or another it is interesting to note that the local Post Office has handled many odd and different kinds of postal pieces.

As an example Postmaster A. C. Waddell told of the time a Belleville man received a rather rank and belated wild goose in a package from a friend out West. "That goose was 'several' sights in life'," remarked Mr. Waddell commenting on the condition of the parcel on arriving here. The Postmaster has also instituted a special order covering skunk skins travelling by mail. His staff has standing instructions to place such pelts on the window sill outside the office until the receiver calls for them.

Shipment of queen bees comes under the heading of odd pieces of mail moving between country and city centres and according to Mr. Waddell there is quite a traffic in these precious little winged creatures in the spring. They are moved separately in small wooden containers along with five or six workers and enough food to keep the travellers alive in transit. As many as a dozen queens often make up one shipment, Mr. Waddell revealed. Worker bees are moved from place to place through the Post Office in much larger containers and Mr. Waddell figured that a box full of workers enroute would average two pounds in weight.

Since all containers in which bees are shipped are well protected by screening the mail men do not have to fret about getting stung.

Traffic in bees through the mail has increased with the extermination each fall of colonies after they have harvested the honey crop and settled down to become wards of the apiary keeper. "See men have found it is more economical and practical to suffocate the colonies in the fall and replace them with new queens and workers in the spring," Mr. Waddell explained.

Commons Approves Principle Of Govt. Contributions to Build $300,000,000 Trans-Canada Road

Ottawa, Nov. 29. (CP)— The Commons Monday approved the principle of a bill providing for federal contributions to the construction of a Trans-Canada highway.

While supporting the principle, some members urged that the government contribute more than 50 per cent of the original cost of the highway and assume the maintenance charges when the road is completed.

The debate occurred before second reading —approval in principle—was given to a bill authorizing the Federal Government to pay by half the cost of a $300,000,000 two lane hard-surfaced highway from Victoria, B.C., to St. John's, Nfld. It will take in Prince Edward Island as well.

At the outset of the debate, due to be continued today, reconstruction Minister Winters indicated he expects work on the highway to start next spring if agreements can be reached within the provinces.

No province has indicated that it does not wish to proceed with its share of the project, said Mr. Winters. He said the highway would not be national in scope unless all provinces participated. Without such participation, the Federal Government would not be justified in providing the measure of assistance it planned.

The provinces had been informed that the Federal Government's contribution was being made by reason of the national aspect of the problem. Participation by the Dominion, he said, was contingent on the provinces entering into agreements with the Federal Government.

No Date Set

When the Federal Legislation is passed a Dominion-Provincial conference will be called to settle technical details of the proposed route. No date for the conference has been set.

Besides paying 50 per cent of the cost of existing roads that will form part of the trans-Canada highway.

The Federal Government is suggested that the highway be paved a width of 24 feet and the minimum right-of-way be 100 feet.

Members of the three opposition parties and George Cruickshank (L-Fraser Valley) said the Federal Government should assume more than 50 per cent of the cost.

Howard Green (PC-Vancouver-Quadra), terming the legislation disappointing said the Federal government should contribute more than 50 per cent in British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Newfoundland where special construction obstacles had to be met. A. J. Brooks (PC-Royal) added New Brunswick to the list saying it cost about $100,000 a mile for highway construction in that province.

Joseph Bradette (L-Cochrane) and Maurice Bourget (L-Levis) expressed surprise that Mr. Green as a member of a party which constantly upheld provincial autonomy, should suggest Federal interference in the provincial field of highways.

Takes Exception

Mr. Bradette took exception to earlier remarks by Mr. Green who, he said, had "inspired motives" to Trade Minister Howe. He lauded Mr. Howe's contributions to Canadian life.

There was no way of telling whether the estimate of $300,000,000 would be enough for the full cost of the road. There was no doubt that figure would have to be amended possibly to the extent of another $50,000,000.

He expressed surprise that Mr. Green, as a member of a party which constantly upheld provincial autonomy, suggesting that Ottawa go over the heads of the provinces in certain matters concerning the roads, Mr. Bradette said the routes are a matter for the provinces to decide, but he called upon them to think of the national good and for those areas which are by-passed to accept this as in the national interest.

Wants Northern Route

If he wished to take a local view, he would argue for a northern route but he thought the decision should be made from a national viewpoint. All 11 governments should pool their intelligence in the interests of the country as a whole.

The highway would have defence values. It should be laid out from practical, logical points of view.

This was a logical time to start

TYPHOON SHATTERS GUAM HOMES

White-clad monks are shown as they called to offer aid and comfort to Guam Island children whose home was demolished when devastating winds and high seas virtually wiped out half of the village of Inarahan during the height of the typhoon last week. The little village-by-the-sea was lucky, though, its residents feel, for there were no casualties reported. The long row of wooden homes that stretched along the ocean front were shattered, spreading debris over a wide area. — Central Press Canadian.

it. The war, high costs and manpower shortages made an earlier start impractical. He was proud to think the highway was going through as an artery that would help unite the Canadian people.

Arduous Patronage

Mr. Bradette recalled that in his youth people were hired or fired on road projects depending on their politics. He hoped patronage and politics will play no part in the letting of contracts or in the granting of employment on the trans-Canada highway.

J. W. Noseworthy (CCF-York South) said he doubted that Mr. Winters really believed Ottawa will be able to pull out of the project completely after pouring $150,000,000 into it. The inference was that the Federal Government would not bear any maintenance costs, but the minister or his successors would find that once in they could not extricate themselves. Ministers would come back to the House year after year with amendments to the legislation under study.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

You didn't need a million dollars, a Chamber of Commerce, a couple thousand civic-minded men or gilt-edged security in the Bank of Canada to build an arena. All that is needed is the right type of citizen, one who has the guts to roll up his sleeves, dig in his pocket, if necessary, gather the crowd about him, no matter how small and pitch in and get the show on the road. Then you know you have an edifice that is not only a community asset but a monument to your labors and a credit to the place in which you live.

* * *

Take the community of Cooper, Hastings County, Prinsiance. This tiny settlement boasts only a few stores, a store and a church, but it also has, as has the surrounding countryside a 2-rink pair of robust stout - hearted gentry, who refused to be licked. They wanted a community rink, and by God, they were going to have it come hell or high water. That was February last. Shortly after the New Year, their dream will be realized. A handsome structure, not the usual Hall Lear Gardens by any stretch of the imagination, but it means just as much to the good folk at Cooper and district as does the ornate hockey palace of Toronto — if not more.

* * *

Gibson Bailey, a carpenter of ability and Herb McCoy, both Cooper stalwarts, got their heads together last fall. Bailey took drawings of the Bancroft rink. A meeting of district residents was called. They pledged $2,000 as a start. They advertised the fact. Before actual work started, their pledge had grown. The township council came through with a $500 and $1,000 the county council came through with a $500 grant. The township council loaned $300 in the general kitty.

* * *

Bailey took on the job of purchasing agent. Cut lumber was too high. But that only stimulated Bailey and his crew of workers. They bought standing timber from one Fred Irvine from whom they obtained the site next the school for $25 per 1,000 feet.

* * *

Everybody chipped in with teams, tractors, saws, and in three days they had 37,500 feet of logs at the sawmill. The lumber was thrown on the job for $18 per 1,000. In four days the material was all ready for use and everything for getting the lumber ready was free except the actual use of the saw.

* * *

The chief parts of the framework were raised by three tractors and a few men. These were raised by May 1st and then the job was laid over until October. After all there was haying, harvesting and harvesting to be done. In the meantime Bailey had been quietly securing roofing, nails and other materials. And operations have been under way since. Strength of the crew varied. Some days 30 would show up — on others only a handful. Women and children pitched in and even after hours, the ladies and girls of the community are doing the painting. One afternoon the women and children sheltacked the boards in the boards of the ice surface and then painted the 210 square feet, before nightfall.

* * *

From the living timber were taken to make up the $2,500 square feet of planking: bevis $7,500 feet; rafters, 14,520 feet; side framing, 1,856 feet; frame, 4,384 feet; bottom joist 900 feet; top joist, 700 feet; partitions, 600 feet and brackets 700 feet. A six-foot cement base under each truss gives a firm foundation. Tiered seats will be placed around the sides of the rink which will have an ice surface 174 feet in length.

* * *

A water system and pressure system for flooding purposes will be installed. Wash rooms, dressing rooms, box office and refreshment booth are on the main floor. A main floor balcony is 16 by 80 feet. Every "stitch" of labor was done free.

* * *

What a lesson! What a grand job of community spirit. This little community "in the sticks" has done something that we, of the city type could well emulate. Gibson Bailey, that we, of the city type could well emulate. Gibson Bailey, a man in his own little community, albeit, a fellow physically incapacitated, took on the job. He rocked out of the coal. He had visions, materialized by the co-operations of these people who are his community fellow-men.

Gibson Bailey and his Cooper residents, have done, in this provision of a rink for his district a grand service for his community.

After all, it is well to be expected. Gibson Bailey, his family and all those grand people back there in Cooper and district, are doing only what their illustrious pioneer forebears did a century ago. Only in a different manner.

* *

The Bailey family and those grand people around the Cooper district, as did their ancestors, are pioneering, but in a modern sense. As did their forebears provide for a home for a family, so are their descendants providing for the well-being of the future generation. More power to them.

Winnipeg, Nov. 30 — (CP) — Coach Lee Leay may find stiff opposition in his boast that he'll return with his Calgary Stampeders to pest year's Grey Cup Dominion football final.

Stampeders arrived home today after losing their Dominion championship 28-15 to Montreal Alouettes last week.

Not the least of the obstacles may be a rambunctious bunch of Saskatchewan Roughriders, says Scotty (Regina Leader - Post) Stauffer.

He notes that Riders won the final game of the season to game Western Interprovincial Union title, defeating Calgary 9-4 after dropping the first 18-12, thus losing the series on total point. "Think everybody in Regina and the outlying precincts learned that instead to take another crack at winning the title."

Grey Cup Note

The oft-heard complaint that Toronto doesn't do right by the Grey Cup finals is reiterated by Tony (Winnipeg Tribune) Allan, who saw the game, says it is the responsibility of the Canadian Rugby Union to see that the final is played under the best possible conditions.

He suggests the post - game comment of Stampeders' president, Fred Brown that the Varsity Stadium field should have been covered by a tarpaulin as a weather protection and added:

"If Toronto wants to hold this event in future, it should be staged properly, even to the expense of spending a little money on it."

Warren Stevens, athletic director at University of Toronto, commenting on Brock's comment, said it would cost around $15,000 for a canvas covering for the field "but what good would it do?" He said the snow would fall on the canvas but the ground would still be frozen and conceivably the tarpaulin would become frozen to the ground. And "no one yet has discovered how to defrost the frozen field."

("You know," said Stevens, as an afterthought, "I talked with Mr. Hayman, coach of the Alouettes) Saturday night and he didn't complain about the field.")

Northern Electric Defeats Rockets 6-1, With Diesels Turning Back 6 R.D. 11-2

With wide-open scores, in both cases not indicative of the play, Northern Electric maintained their undefeated streak at the expense of the Belleville Rockets defeating the youngsters 6-1 while the C.N.R. Diesels in one of their best displays of the season, turned back the fighting Sixarders 11-2 in the Diesels' 11-0 contest in Memorial Arena last night.

Both games provided fast clean hockey with a minimum of penalties being handed out by Referees St. Louis and Bill Holway.

Diesels 11—Sixarders 2.

The gallant guys from the Air Force met an inspired Diesel team, which, the majority remembered what happened the other night against the Peterborough club. Last night Diesels were definitely not the squad that luckily defeated the Peterborough team.

They went out on a scoring rampage that netted them three goals in the first period as against one in the other two periods thereby hangs the tale.

Sixarders gallant RCAF crew outclassed and outplayed in periods by the fast-skating Diesel squad bowed to a one-sided score. But that was not, as was said before, indicative of the play.

Diesels rammed home three goals in the first period against a single comeback from the RCAF crew.

The trainmen then took things over from a gallant battling R.C.A.F. crew and scored home five goals in the third period as against a single return from Sixarders.

Leo Goyer and Doug Day paced the winners attack with three goals each.

Vern Goyer grabbed a goal and two assists and of all people, Dougie Day, ogo of the stars of the night, rammed home three goals and was credited with an assist.

Northern Electric 6
Belleville Rockets 1

The Planters kept their undefeated record intact last night, shoving back a bunch of inspired Belleville Rockets juniors by a 6-1 score.

Rockets deserved a better fate. They were up against an experienced crew most of whom are of Senior 'B' category, and although the kids took the short end of the score the majority of the fans will say that they went out there and played superlative hockey.

Rockets, after all is said and done, although battling futilely on their play last night definitely declared themselves a playoff material. They battled valiantly against the fast-skating, hard checking lines of the Northerns and its rugged defence, and came through with flying colors.

It was good hockey featured with the absence of mayhem, murder and body-bruising.

Northern led at the first period mark by a 1-0 score. They rammed home three goals in the second period breaking through a stubborn Rocket defence, from goals by Jones, MacDonald and Whiteman. The kids came back with a strong offensive that netted them nothing.

Northern, paced by their Senior 'B' lads did not spare the horses and a fighting Rockets' crew went down to defeat, but not to disgrace.

The summary tells the scoring story.

The teams:

Northern Electric: Goal, Flumiger; defence, Williamson, Vokey; centre, J. Semark; wings, Barrett, MacDonald, subs, Creighton, Reeves, Wardhaugh Jones, Mulvihill, Whiteman, Cousins, Markle.

Honeymoon Over For Maple Leafs Says Conn Smythe

By JIM BASTABLE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Maybe the Toronto Maple Leafs should weigh in on heavy-duty scales before tonight's National Hockey League game.

They're right in the middle of the "fat period" its other kids get off, or do some bench-warming.

That's managing director Conn Smythe's answer to "What's wrong with the Leafs?" Instead of being lean and hungry, he said, they've grown fat and sloppy on a diet of three successive Stanley Cups.

So Smythe pulled the eviction trigger Tuesday and the shot sent Ol' Gus Broda and his 197 pet mindling pounds to the sidelines in favor of a stripling from the Leaf Farm Club—128-pound Gil Mayer.

Says Smythe:

"The honeymoon's over. If they don't come through . . . they'll sit on the bench."

Broda, a 32-year-old veteran with the Leafs, will sit out at least one game and possibly more until he regains his schoolgirl figure. Mayer, a five-foot-six operator from Pittsburgh Hornets of the American League, will take over Broda's duties tomorrow night when the Leafs meet the League-leading Detroit Red Wings.

With five-foot-nine Broda was ordered to lop off seven pounds before he will be allowed to resume his chores with the Leafs —who have lost five games and tied one in their last six starts. They're in a third-place tie with Chicago Black Hawks with 18 points—nine behind Detroit.

Broda wasn't available for comment Tuesday night but friends said he was out taking weight off.

Smythe's condition, although not serious, was caused by an attack of ulcers. He was admitted to hospital Monday and underwent treatment.

Smythe's decision to send Broda to the sidelines was announced by Coach Joe Primeau after the Leafs' workout at Maple Leaf Gardens.

Primeau said Broda will not play tonight against Detroit Red Wings.

Broda's absence from the lineup will be the first for the veteran defenceman since he joined the Leafs in 1943.

Broda, who has been with the Leafs for seven seasons, has been a consistent performer for the Leafs.

Mayer, who is being brought up from the Leafs' farm club at Pittsburgh, is a 20-year-old native of Toronto. He has been playing with the Pittsburgh Hornets of the American Hockey League.

Broda Suspended Until His Weight Is Cut 7 Pounds

Toronto, Nov. 30 (CP)—Walter (Turk) Broda, veteran goaltender of Toronto Maple Leafs in the National Hockey League, was suspended Tuesday until he cuts his weight from 197 to 190 pounds.

Managing director Conny Smythe said that other suspensions may follow unless the Leafs start "playing like champions." Three other players — defenceman Garth Boesch and left wingers Harry Watson and Sid Smith — were ordered to cut weight or be suspended.

"We are not running a fat man's team," said Smythe who announced that Gil Mayer will be called up from Pittsburgh Hornets of the American Hockey League to play against Detroit Red Wings here Thursday night.

The Leafs have failed to come up with a win in their last six starts, losing five and tying one.

Smythe said of Broda, at 35 the oldest player in the N. H. L.: "Broda is away overweight at 197 pounds. He is off the team until he shows some common sense.

He has been ordered to reduce to 190 pounds."

Boesch was ordered to cut from 195 to 190, Watson from 205 to 200 and Smith from 183 to 180.

"We have the highest salaried team in the league," Smythe said. "They receive $1,000 a man more than the lowest salaried team. I want them to start playing like the highest salaried players in the league."

Lear Advocates Complete Break With Rugby Union

(By The Canadian Press)

Calgary Coach Les Lear touched off a national football controversy Tuesday. He advocated a complete break by all leagues from the Canadian Rugby Union.

"Football is going ahead while the C.R.U. stands still," he stormed in an interview at Winnipeg.

He said a break from the C.R.U. "is the wind," but didn't specify just where the gale might strike first.

Other football bigwigs commended promptly on the Lear statement. None of them indicated support for the doughty Calgarian's proposal though. One said "I've heard about it." Another said the whole thing is "ridiculous." Three more said their leagues plan no such action.

At Toronto, Dr. J. J. O'Connor, Big Four president, said the West's interprovincial union "certainly has no intention of breaking" from the C.R.U. and there is "absolutely no truth in Lear's remark as far as the Big Four is concerned."

Harold Bailey of Toronto, secretary of the Ontario Rugby Football Union said:

"Ask Mr. Lear what compromises the Canadian Rugby Union. It is representative of each union that player in Eastern and Western Canada football. If the C.R.U. is wrong, Lear's union is the wrong and, by the same token, if I say it is wrong then my own union is wrong."

Dr. W. A. Campbell, C.R.U. president and the Eastern Intercollegiate Union's delegate on the governing body, said at Kingston, he has "no comment to make" on Lear's statement.

The Professional Golfers Association of America today voted at its annual meeting against allowing any professional to become eligible for membership after two years as a recognized tournament circuit player. The status of Bobby Locke, South African pro barred from P.G.A. tournaments for allegedly "playing out of" bookings in the United States, was discussed inconclusively. The meeting apparently felt it was up to Locke to make the next move for reinstatement.

Montreal Canadiens announced Tuesday left-winger Gerry Plamondon had been sent to Cincinnati Mohawks of the American Hockey League for 10 days. A spokesman for the National Hockey League club said Plamondon was not playing regularly with Canadiens and needed a few games to regain his confidence.

Ralph Tooky, 23-year-old defenceman, said at Montreal Tuesday night that he had been signed to play hockey this season with Valleyfield Braves of the Quebec Senior Hockey League. Tooky, 5-9 and with Montreal Alouettes of the Big Four Football League, said he signed with the Braves and "will not report to Seattle Ironmen" of the Pacific Coast League "because of personal reasons." Al Seattle Dave Downey, manager of the Ironmen, said that he expected Tooky to join his club either Wednesday or Thursday.

Jack Kramer won his 20th match against Richard (Pancho) Gonzales Tuesday night defeating the young Californian 8-1, 3-6, 9-7 before 10,000 fans at the Montreal Forum. Gonzales, who only recently turned professional to take part in the transcontinental tour of four United States bound pros, has won only four of the contests played to date.

The Danish Sports Association has ruled that an amateur doesn't lose his simon-pure status when he signs a professional contract. He is regarded as a pro only when he starts collecting money.

Two race horses burned to death and six others were saved early Tuesday when fire destroyed a barn on the George Berry farm near Bowie race track. Damage was estimated at $30,000.

Leon Hart, Notre Dame's great end, Tuesday night was named as the winner of the Heisman Memorial Trophy for being the outstanding United States college football player of 1949.

Vic Obeck, director of athletics at McGill University, said Tuesday night that football "is the greatest of all competitive sports" His was guest speaker at a football banquet tendered Ottawa Rough Riders by the Sportsmen's Committee of Ottawa and Hull. About 500 persons, including the Governor-General, Viscount Alexander, and Viscountess Alexander, attended.

An injury suffered during his three-month English tour will keep Canadian middleweight boxing champion George (Kokomo Joe) Ross idle until early next year when he probably will defend his title against Johnny Greco of Montreal. Dapper Gus MacLellan of Glace Bay, N.S., his manager, said in an interview Tuesday at Halifax that Montreal promoter Raoul Godbout wanted Ross to meet Greco Dec. 12, but nasty cut under Ross' left eyebrow will take some time to heal.

The Canadian Small Bore Association, for 17 years a national organization of civilian rifle shots, has been reorganized to include skeet, trap and pistol shots in its membership, president Doug Robertson announced Tuesday at Montreal. The new group will be known as "The Canadian Civilian Association of Marksmen."

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Nov. 30 — (AP) — Richard (Smorgasboard) Smith, a man of broad experience in sports and eating, claims Chicago Cubs have been improved more this year than they were by all their trades last winter. "I'll not be worried about our pitching; the left side of our infield is strong and if Preacher Ward hits even .250 our team will do," Smith said between bites the other day. . . The statement about Ward brought some eyebrow lifting, but Smith insisted that's just what he meant. "We're that much better," he explained. . . Someone suggested the Cubs might like to have pitcher Hank Borowy back . . . "Borowy!" snorted Smith. "He only beats second division clubs—the best us five times last season."

Sports Before Your Eyes

Bobby Riggs and Jack Kramer are getting a bit worried about their pro tennis tour, which is just about breaking even financially, and sometime next spring they'll probably try to improve the gate attractions by adding Pauline Betz and slither Sarah Palfrey or Mary Hardwick to the troupe. . . Jim Healey, who ran on two world record relay teams at the University of Pennsylvania, is slated to become the next president of the New York A.C. spiked shoe club.

Quote, Unquote

Greasy Neale, coach of the professional football Philadelphia Eagles: "A sports writer asked me the other day if any of the Eagles could make Notre Dame team. I told him Notre Dame doesn't have a player who could make our team. Leon Hart might, but I would take time to learn things you have to learn in our league."

PROFIT BY MISTAKES

Winnipeg—(CP)—Ruth Doern, social service supervisor, said in an interview here recently that Newfoundland "is eliminating all the wrong steps made by other provinces" in its social welfare program. Miss Doern, who spent seven months in Newfoundland organizing a branch for the Department of Veterans Affairs, said that mothers' allowances and old age pensions are being used to good advantage.

Danny Lewicki Smart Performer For Marlboros

(By The Canadian Press)

Ever since his Toronto debut in Memorial-Cup play two seasons ago with Port Arthur West End Bruins, Toronto Junior Marlboro's Danny Lewicki has been touted as one of amateur hockey's top prospects. Centre of a contract controversy earlier this season after performing with Stratford Kroehlers in 1947-48, Danny lined up with Marlboros and along with George Armstrong, has been one of their most capable players.

Dangerous Danny potted two goals out of a team total of three last night to pace Marlboros to a 5-0 shutout win over the smooth St. Michael's College Majors. The Marlboro win left them seven points ahead of the second-slot Windsor Spitfires.

In other games last night, Windsor pasted Galt Black Hawks 13-3 to stay in contention for Junior honors, Guelph edged St. Catharines 3-1 and Owen Sound Seniors decimated Kitchener-Waterloo Flying Dutchmen 5-3. The Mercury victory enabled them to climb within one point of the second place Dutchmen.

Harry Regan opened the scoring at Toronto late in the first period. While Don Lockhart was checking Mike Micsak's attempt to score in the second frame, Lewicki came through with his two tallies, the first one three minutes after the period opened and the second one with little more than a minute remaining.

A tribute to Marlboro goalie Don Lockhart's brilliant work in the nets was the fact that out of 25 penalties handed out in the clean game, Marlboros collected 11 of them.

At Galt, the Black Hawks made a game of it for one period, holding Windsor Spitfires to a 3-3 tie in the first. The Supports were sewed out from under Galt in the second when Spitfires came through with a four-goal effort. The destruction of the Hawk machine was completed in the finale frame as Spitfires penetrated for six more.

Swamped by Goal

Bob Bailey, Earl Riebel, Earl Johnson, Jack Bailey and Glen Sikov kept the scorers busy with two goals apiece. Singletons were counted by Ed Stankiewicz, Bob Rawlyk and Erwin Grosse. George Ford was a two-goal man for Galt while the remaining single was notched by Kilbey.

Guelph Biltmores did all their scoring in the first period. Chas Konecny and Don Bellringer potted the markers two minutes apart. Dennis Mooney took over for Guelph and managed to block the door to his goal on all St. Catharines attempts in the second period. After terrific pressure, Obie O'Brien averted a shut out with only four minutes remaining. Mooney took over again and held Teepees off the remainder of the game.

Owen Sound came from behind to whip Kitchener-Waterloo with two last period goals by Buck Forslund sealing the tally. The Merrs built up a 2-1 lead in the first period, Don Bauer tied it up

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Xibliser

In Horse Sense bridge, an opening one bid shows five tricks, of which four are high cards (aces, kings, queens)), among which are two sure tricks (ace, one; A K, two).

This rule applies to the more than half a trillion different hands in a bridge pack. Think of it. A rule of only one sentence that covers all the hands you will ever see. You and posterity.

Up comes a player who shows me a hand that would be risky with these ingredients. I can show him a couple more. So what? It is no reflection on the rule. Not by a long shot.

Let me spot him a few such. There are still 635,013,599,597 others. Leave me that many or a few million less and it will still be a good rule. Yes, a better rule than any other.

It stands to reason that some of the hands will be borderlines. Impossible not to be. And some of these borderlines look weak. But if they contain the rule items, even these should be opened.

In every system, the rule for an opening one bid takes in many weak hands. I know of no system that has so few as Horse Sense. And most systems have too many for comfort."

Deal and hold this hand:

♠K Q 8
♥7 5
♦J 8 3 2
♣K Q 7 6

Both K Q combinations are two sure. It has four high; two kings and two queens. It has five tricks; four highs and a short in hearts. Open this with a bid of one club.

It is the weakest opening hand under this rule. But it will be unprofitable only with an undependable partner. With such a partner, your best rule is to wait for another.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Nov. 30 (AP) — Today I am turning this space over to Bob Eunson, just returned from the AP Paris Bureau. He has an unusual tale to tell:

Coming home after seven years overseas for the Associated Press, I received biggest shock in finding my 15-year-old niece a glamorous full-grown movie star. The last time I saw Joan, she was climbing trees in my brother's backyard at Scarborough. She was a round little brown-eyed girl of eight whose greatest delight was being pushed in a swing.

The big change had come in the last year.

Name and Hair

The family name was swapped on Joan's grandmother's maiden name of Eunson. Joan Eunson's hair was dark and thick. Joan Evans' hair is reddish and at present cut short and Parisienne.

By sticking to pears, cottage cheese, lettuce leaves and tea, Joan has lost her baby fat and become beautifully slim.

First Role

During the first year Joan also:

Received her first kiss from Farley Granger in "Roseanna McCoy."

Was honored when a McCoy family in Los Angeles named a daughter Joan Roseanna;

Was voted Miss Hayride of 1948 by Phi Alpha Frat at Rutgers; and "The girl we'd most like to have visit us on a football weekend" by Alumni Hall at Notre Dame;

Had her lips named among "the most kissable in Hollywood" by a makeup man;

Travelled 6,000 miles for personal appearances;

Appeared on five radio shows and four magazine covers;

Was the subject of 25 magazine articles and receives 300 fan letters weekly.

You'd think that a 15-year-old girl would rest on such laurels, but not Joan. She is not only appearing in "Edge of Doom," but taking dancing and voice lessons as well. Why?

Because as soon as she is old enough, Joan wants to be a musical comedy star like her mother's friend, Mary Martin.

I wonder what happened to that swing?

FOUNDERS REMEMBERED

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma said to pop, William, if this living room doesn't appear to be as speckless clean as it mite be, dont blame me, because I was interrupted in my time skedule by events beyond my control.

Think nothing of it, my dear, pop said. We're all human and subject to the winds of chance and the will of fate, even you my dear, he said, and ma said, Naturelly I have a regular routine or I'd never get my work done, and this morning as usual I planned to follow my usual Wednesday custom of dusting this room at eleven 30 after I had run the vacuum over it, but my skedule was complecetely thrown off a full half hour by a continuous mitred ringing of the telefone and the doorbell, not to mention the laundryman unexpectedly calling Wensday instead of Thursday, with the wash still to be counted.

Well, I cant say I notice any grate clouds of dust, or even any little wisps and eddies, pop said, and ma said, Oh, I dusted all right, I finished at eleven 30 as usual, but then I had to skip the vacuum cleening, because it doesn't make any sense to vacuum after you've dusted, she said.

Well now this may sound radical, but why the Sam Hill couldn't you of used the vacuum at eleven 30 and dusted afterwards? pop said, and ma said, But William, that's the whole point.

What is, for Peet sake? pop said and ma said. Eleven 30. That's the time The Ordeal of Anna Ordway comes on the air every morning, and I dont know a single woman who cares an her vacuum cleener while The Ordeal of Anna Ordway is on, she said.

Excuse me while I retire for six pop said.

Meening behind the sporting page.

U.S. PLANS NEW

This policy would be in line with the previous Eniwetok test of three weapons in April and May of 1948, when none but American military men and scientists of the commission was present.

Up to now the United States has exploded eight atomic weapons. Two of them were dropped in wartime on the Japanese cities of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, the others exploded in the initial pre-attack test at Alamagordo, N.M., in the 1946 tests at Bikini and at Eniwetok.

It was clear that the forthcoming Eniwetok tests are to testfire weapons improved in design and efficiency even since the 1948 explosions.

Recently in a television broadcast Senator Edwin C. Johnson (Dem., Colo.) talked on new bombs "six times the effectiveness of the bomb we dropped on Nagasaki" and of "considerable progress" toward perfecting a "super bomb" with 1,000 times the effect of the Nagasaki bomb. It wasn't clear whether Johnson meant those already tested in the 1948 Eniwetok experiments were six times as powerful or whether he was talking of some yet to be proof-fired.

HOUSE APPROVES

Mr. Winters also told the House that while the home extension plan now is in operation, the home improvement loans scheme has not been proclaimed. It would not be brought into operation until the shortage or home improvement materials such as hardware was overcome.

Replying to further questions by Mr. Fleming, he said that of the original $100,000,000 some $3000,000 had been lent.

In view of the small part that has been used, Mr. Fleming criticized the application for ading another $25,000000. Mr. Winters replied that while little is being used now, the loans would speed up if the home-improvement plan was put into effect.

35 Per Cent Increase

This part of the bill provides for a 35-per cent increase in loans for home extension, as well as improvement.

The maximum that can be borrowed for home extension will be $5,750 for the first family dwelling unit added to any existing dwelling and $1,250 for each additional family housing unit being added.

The down payment and home extension clauses of the act come into effect as soon as the bill is proclaimed. However, the $50,-000,000 earmarked for low-rental and low-cost housing depends on each province's willingness to take part.

Under this provision, the Federal government will pay 75 per cent and the province 25 per cent of the cost of leasing and servicing land and of building low rental or low cost homes. The province can arrange to get back any part of its 25 per cent outlay from the municipalities in which the housing is built.

During initial discussions of the housing bill, Mr. Winters said the Federal government does not plan to call a Dominion-provincial conference on housing at present.

He also warned Canadians generally that they should not depend on the government or mortgage companies to assure that their home hopes are being properly built.

He read an explanatory document on the National Housing Act which says:

Make Own Arrangements

"Borrowers and purchasers must make their own arrangements with the builder or vendor of the property and must assume that their interests have been or are being looked after by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation or the lending institution making the loan.

The borrower pays $20 for appraisal of his home and four inspections.

"These inspections are to see that CMHC standards are complied with, and to determine when progress advances may be made on the mortgage. They do not assume a full architectural or engineering inspection to see that all details of the plans and specifications are complied with." with."

The prospective home-owner should go to these inspections himself.

Mr. Winters was replying to criticism expressed by C. E Johnston (SC—Bow River) and H. G. White (PC—Middlesex East).

Work Not Performed Claim

"If the work is performed for the $20, I have no kick, but in many cases the work is not performed and that is why I am objecting," Mr. Johnston said.

Mr. White said that to prevent purchasers from being cheated, an itemized list should be made of all the different things in the house.

"Then an inspection should be made, and work once billed cannot be checked off so that when the man takes the house he has agreed that it is as it should be. The owner and purchaser should sign that acceptance document."

Private bills were discussed for an hour at last night's sitting and for the seventh consecutive time the two bills to incorporate p.l.c lines carrying natural gas from Alberta were talked out.

Before going on to pipe lines, however, the Commons approved the principle of 28 divorce bills previously passed by the Senate.

SERVICED TOWN TRACTOR

Oakville, Nov. 30, (CP)—Ben Walsh, service station operator in this community about thirty miles west of Toronto, admits to breaking the local by-law regulating the hours of sale of gas on Sunday but no action against him has been taken. Walsh said another station supposed to be open on Sunday was closed so he serviced the tractor. Mayor James Black said a summons would be up to the police.

READY FOR SNOW

Montreal. (CP)— The city is apparently expecting a bad winter. It will buy $90,063 worth of new equipment for removing snow.

Ontario May Get $50 Million Highway Rebate

Toronto, Nov. 30—(CP)—Ontario may get close to $50,000,000 from if 't federal government as a rebate for money already spent on existing roads which will become part of the trans-Canada highway, provincial government officials said Tuesday.

The Ontario Department of Highways has spent approximately $113,000,000 on the parts of the highways which are expected to be included in the trans-Canada chain, officials said.

Ontario has yet to choose the route the trans-Canada highway will take through the province. The original designation was from Point Fortune on the Quebec border, through Ottawa, North Bay, Sault Ste. Marie, Schreiber, Nipigon, Port Arthur and Kenora.

A second suggestion was that the highway swing into No. 11 highway at North Bay and continue to Kirkland Lake, New Liskeard, Cochrane, Hearst, Geraldton and down to Nipigon, where it would rejoin the provincial No. 17 route.

DISAPPEARING ACT

Weyburn, Sask., (CP)—Spencers of the Sask. Coal parade here arranged for the northern gentleman to make the antlers all disappear from his famous team of eight reindeer. It was thought the antlers might injure children crowding around Santa.

Improvement of Wellington County Farms Marked

Toronto, Nov. 29—(CP)—Wellington county farmers, like many of those elsewhere in Ontario, have been busy improving their property this year.

Their enterprise in the area centered on Guelph receives special mention from the Ontario Agriculture Department, which says today its weekly crop report:

"Not for many years has so much farm improvement work been going on. New houses have been built, additions made to barns, barns painted, hydro installed on hundreds of farms."

The report adds that the coming of snow in most sections of Ontario has put an end to work on the land. Livestock has been stabled and placed on winter feed.

ACQUITTED OF CHARGE

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 30 — (AP)—An unwed (Negro) mother who buried her new-born baby alive was acquitted Monday on a murder charge. Twenty-year-old Ida Roberts had been indicted July 13, five days after the child was buried in a shallow grave in her back yard.

BUBBLE IS BURST

Oyer, Norway — (CP) — The local school board has made its most unpopular decision to date. Charging that it is "unhygienic," the board has asked stores to stop selling bubble gum to school children.

Martin's Summer

By Vicki Baum

An hour later when Vesi came home, he was asleep. The candle was still burning. Vesi gazed down at the young man. His fine eyes twitched in his dreams like a dog's legs and sometimes his face was drawn in a grimace. His fair hair had lost its brushed-back neatness and was now tumbling in disorder. Vesi was touched by a maternal tenderness. She bent over him and carefully stroked back the hair off his forehead. Then she shook him by the shoulder, gently at first and then more emphatically. Martin sighed and only slept the sounder. She stroked his face. It was hot.

"Poor boy—he's tired and half starved," she thought with pity. The candle had burned out when he finally awoke. As he felt for his shoes in the darkness, he could hear the heavy breathing of Vesi, asleep on the floor. Many tin, his arm throbbing, fumbled his way down the ladder, but was able to get out unheard and unseen.

Frau Pauline Mayreder was in a sad plight. She saw Fraunenz emptying rapidly, but she could not tear herself away from the bathing beach and the swimming instructor. A kind of paralysis had laid hold on her rather short resolute person, a sickness, a phenomenon of the heart that might almost be called love. It made her restless—too and today too happy tomorrow. It pulled her this way and that. She was discontented and fretful. She was zealous over her exercises and took her coffee of late without sugar or cream.

Hardly had the rain stopped before Frau Mayreder put on her water-proof and hurried to the bathing beach. When she caught sight of Martin, she gave a slight start.

"But you don't look at all well" she said, as she fixed her eyes upon his drawn, pinched face.

"I am very well indeed, thank you," answered Martin, who could not bear to be pitied. There was rain in the ice-cold wind, and the bathing beach had a forbidding and dreary air.

"You're surely not going to bathe in this weather?" he asked in astonishment.

"Yes, I am," she said heroically.

Martin went in a temper to his hut and changed into his bathing costume and cloak. Frau Mayreder for her part arrayed herself in her flounced silk costume, though her flesh crept and the wind whistled.

"I want you to teach me the crawl," Herr Heil; she was suddenly inspired to say. She saw days and days of swimming lessons in front of her, day after day of swimming lessons in the company of Herr Heil. Her knees trembled with cold.

"The crawl—well, yes— why not?" Martin said with a very bad grace. He had to get out of his bathing cloak to show her the strokes, first the six, and then in the water. His arm hurt him every time he lifted it from the water.

"There, that's how it goes," he said, as he climbed up the steps and, taking the rope, he lowered Frau Mayreder into the coreless lake, brimming now with water from the glacier streams. After three minutes, during which she did everything wrong, and suffered indescribable tortures, Frau Mayreder who was not at the best of times fond of the water, had had enough. It was too much for her. The waves broke over her head; she was half drowned and utterly exhausted. When, after dressing she hoped to appease her troubled heart by ten minute's conversation with the swimming instructor she found he had vanished.

He had gone straight to the office to draw his thirty groschen and then to the town to buy some bread.

Next day the weather was a trifle better and warmer. The bathing beach was still deserted. Toward midday Frau Mayreder appeared again and enabled Martin to earn his thirty groschen.

"I don't know what's the matter, but I shiver day and night," he said irritably, as he looked at Frau Mayreder with a woebegone air.

"If there is anything the matter, my husband is a doctor," Frau Mayreder said anxiously. "Come and see us, do, at the Seespitz."

"Yes, I will. Thanks, I'd like to," Martin said, thinking of the lunch of five courses—though indeed he felt no actual hunger any more. His stomach had gone as small and hard as a stone. But Frau Mayreder was so embarrassed and Martin so shy that the invitation was left in the air like a Hindu magicians rope, and nothing came of it. Toward evening, however, Frau Mayreder went again into the town, driven by irresistible impulse. She went to the bathing beach.

Herr Heil has gone to his meal" little Matz announced, "Probably to Schwolsenschackel's." For Martin proudly maintained the fiction for Herr Birndl's benefit that he dined daily. Frau Mayreder wandered about the town, from one restaurant to another, staring into rooms thick with smoke and through vaporous windows.

"Excuse me, I'm looking for my husband," she said, almost sinking with shame at her own conduct. At last she came upon Martin in front of the station, Martin, who had just had a trunk to carry was standing in front of a railway time-table posted on the wall. He was staring intently at it in an oddly rigid attitude, perfectly motionless except that he put his hand again and again into his pocket and took a furtive and surreptitious bite of something. Frau Mayreder had a sudden illumination. She knew what was the matter with Martin, and the knowledge clutched at her throat and tore her heart as it had never been torn before.

"Ah—good evening, Herr Heil," she said. She knew at once what had to be done now. "How nice to meet you. It's boring in Fraunenz nowadays. Will you come to dinner with us tonight? My husband would be delighted if you would. And I should have your company along that dreary promenade."

"It's very kind of you," Martin replied politely as he swallowed the last morsel of chocolate. "I have had dinner, but I will escort you with pleasure."

This of course was a polite fib. He escorted Frau Mayreder with no pleasure whatever. He wanted to be left in peace. This stout and elderly matron got on his nerves with her tender glances and the faint tremor of her voice, whenever he spoke to her. Mock-turtle soup, he thought meanwhile Beef a la mode. Rice and fruit. During the last days visions of food sometimes floated so distinctly before his eyes that he tasted them on his tongue and swallowed them down.

Suddenly he heard himself talking. Apparently he was engaged in polite and easy conversation. He felt as if there were two or three different Martin Heils walking along the promenade. One was in pain and thoroughly wretched. The second was thinking of saddle of venison, with a cream sauce, stewed beef, pike cooked in butter. The third was saying with easy flattery: "Oh, but why dear lady! A little embonpoint is much more attractive. Believe me, the men like that much better. I know what I'm talking about."

They were now in the avenue of mountain-ash that led to the Seespitz. I believe I'm going to have an illness, thought Martin number one. There's something wrong with me. Another Martin gave his sound arm to Frau Mayreder and earned his dinner by a succession of gallant speeches.
